BOY, 14, SAVES 19 PERSONS FROM DEATH IN FIRE

Three Sarnia Men Burned to Death, Heaters Explode

Trio Working on Scaffold 40 Feet Up Inside Tower

Sarnia, Feb. 1—(CP) — Three Sarnia men were burned to death yesterday when the explosion of three oil heaters caught them inside a partly-built distillation unit at the Canadian Oil Companies' Refinery at Froomfield, five miles south of here.

Sidney B. (Pat) Thompson, 31, and John Stanford, about 28, died inside the tower. Franz Gromlich, 35, died three hours later in hospital here.

Jan Demeliuk, 38, is in satisfactory condition in hospital with burns on his face, hands and legs. Jack Carpenter was released from hospital after treatment.

It was believed that all of the men but Carpenter were working on a scaffolding 40 feet up inside the tower. Carpenter, a rivetter working nearby, had stepped inside to escape the wind.

The explosion, which was not heard 100 feet away, was caused when one of three small heating units fed by coal oil tipped over on the scaffold. The two others, on the ground below, were hit by flaming oil from above and exploded.

The heaters—called "Salamanders" — were used to keep fresh mortar from freezing. tSanford and Gromlich were bricklayers, employed by a sub-contractor in lining the steel tower with bricks.

Acted as Chimney

The tower open at top and bottom, acted as a giant chimney and the flames roared upwards pushed by a strong draft. Identification of the dead was made difficult by the fact that the men's clothes and identification badges were burned off.

A full investigation has been launched by W. R. Brang, superintendent of the Stone and Webster Construction Company, general contractors on the $18,000,000 refinery project.

County Coroner Dr. W. B. Rutherford said decision on whether to hold an inquest would be made following investigations.

Carpenter said he was just about to leave the tower where there was a soundless burst of flames about him. He escaped to obtain first aid. He said he did not know what caused the explosion.

Demeliuk said he did not know just what happened.

Thompson is survived by his widow, five brothers and four sisters. Gromlich, a master bricklayer, had arrived in Canada from Koblenz, Germany, in August. He and his wife, Helga, had been married a few days before they left Germany.

Stanford came from England a few months ago. His mother, Mrs. H. Hawes, lives in North Norwich, Norfolk, England.

Made Honorary Member

Kitchener, Feb. 1 (CP) — L. O. Breithaupt will be made an honorary member of the Kitchener Chamber of Commerce in recognition of the distinction brought to the city through his appointment as Ontario's new Lieutenant-Governor.

His uncle the late J. C. Breithaupt, was the only other person to hold an honorary membership in the Kitchener Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Breithaupt will be sworn into office Feb. 18 to succeed Hon. Ray Lawson.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Feb. 1 (CP) — Synopsis: Very mild weather is general throughout Ontario today with temperatures near record values for Feb. 1. Showers and scattered thunderstorms that developed last night in the flow of warm air from the Gulf of Mexico northward into Michigan spread into southwestern Ontario early this morning.

Much colder air pushed southward across the prairies Thursday is now moving into northern Ontario. This colder air, accompanied by snowflurries, will bring sharp temperature drops to most northern and central regions of the province by Saturday morning. The progress of the cold air into extreme southern regions will likely be retarded by a disturbance developing over Oklahoma. Showers and cooler weather are forecast for Saturday in these southern regions.

Labor Presses For New Test On Foreign Policy

London, Feb. 1 —(AP) — The Socialists put pressure today on their party leaders for another early attempt to defeat Winston Churchill's Conservative government in the House of Commons and force it to resign.

Some Labor members of parliament demand that their party chief, Clement Attlee, try to unseat the government with a motion of no confidence during next week's debate on foreign policy. The bones of contention are Prime Minister Churchill's far eastern policy and commitments the Labor members fear he made on his recent visit to Washington.

The Conservatives last night defeated a Labor vote of censure on financial cuts designed to make Britain solvent within a year and which, among other things, imposed charges for use of Britain's socialized health services. Churchill's party won by a vote of 309 to 278. The House then adopted his fiscal program 306 to 275. The Liberals voted with the Conservative party, swelling its nominal majority of 14 votes.

Attlee Declines Comment

Attlee so far has declined to say what he would do about the demands that he try to oust Churchill over foreign policy.

For more than 12 years no government has had to face any major challenge in the Commons on its conduct abroad. Both major parties have followed the same broad principles in foreign affairs.

But many Labor supporters say it is time now that for the bigpartisan ship to end.

The big difference arises over Conservative and Labor views about British policy in the Far East.

Many Labor members, and many other Britons, fear Churchill agreed Britain would join the U.S. in bombing and blockading the mainland of China if any future Korean truce is broken. Churchill told the Commons Britain had no formal commitment to join in such punitive action and that his reference to "prompt, result and effective action" did not represent any new decisions made during the Washington discussions.

Churchill is to take a leading part in the Foreign Affairs debate, with a complete statement Wednesday on the Washington talks. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden will be the other principal government speaker.

Weather Man Tells What It Is Like At 77 Degrees Below Zero at Snag

(Written For The Canadian Press)
By L. E. MANN
(Officer in Charge, Snag Meteorological Office)

Snag, Y.T., Feb. 1 (CP) —What's it like at 77 degrees below zero in this icebox of the north?

The skies are clear. Sparkling ice crystals fall continually. You become used to the hissing sound caused by your breath freezing. Small patches of ice fog can be seen hanging over the sleigh dogs lying in the yard.

At 9.30 a.m. Jan. 20 the temperature here dropped to the phenomenal low of 77.6 degrees below zero, within four degrees of the all-itme low of 81 degrees below recorded Feb. 3, 1947. (The world record is said to be 93.6 degrees below, recorded in 1885 at the Siberian village of Verchoyansh.)

Snag is the last Canadian intermediate emergency airport, radio range station and meteorological observing station on the north west staging route between Edmonton and Fairbanks, Alaska.

It is situated in the broad White River valley about 20 miles east of the Alaska-Yukon border, and 16 miles northeast of the Alaska highway.

Reports of the recent extremely cold weather were compiled and dispatched by the writer G. C. Heddle and the staff of radio range operators who also act in the capacity of weather observers. James Granger had the honor of being the radio operator observing when the temperature dipped to the 77.6 mark.

At no time during the cold snap was there much wind and most of the time it was dead calm. Smoke rose straight up from all the chimneys.

A heavy snow that fell a few days before the cold spell was a great hindrance to Sergeant Tolmie, commanding the RCAF detachment and the crew responsible for maintenance and to Mr. Heddle who has to travel a seven mile stretch of road to the range transmitters. On two occasions he had to walk through heavy drifts in 65-below temperatures.

During the cold wave, when the daily minimum temperatures were ranging from 65 below to the extreme of 77.6, Sgt. Tolmie was a busy man trying to keep all the facilities on the station operating normally.

PEARSON SAYS CANADA TO SPEND $2,000,000,000

Many Millions of Dollars Will be Given Europe

Ottawa, Feb. 1. (CP)—Canada's defence effort, including her aid to Europe, will be boosted during the next fiscal year, External Affairs Minister Pearson said today.

He indicated at a press conference that, at N.A.T.O.'s suggestion, Canada has accepted one or two adjustments in her defence program but has discouraged suggestions that Canada should donate raw materials to Europe.

Sparring cautiously with reporters over just what more Canada has been asked to do in Europe, Mr. Pearson said:

Will Increase Spending

1. Canada will do more next year—starting April 1—in defence than she did this year, and that statement embraces the effort in Europe. (Over-all defence expenditures are likely to go beyond $2,000 000,000.)

2. One or two adjustments in the defence program will boost expenditures. (These are reported to include a speed-up in preparations to field ground and air formations in event of war.)

3. Canada's aid to Europe next year may reach a considerable figure, including "many millions of dollars" for infrastructure costs, that is for airfields, communications and the like. In the last two fiscal years, but mainly since the fall of 1950, Canadian aid has totalled $325,000,000.

4. It has been suggested by N.A.T.O.'s committee of "three wise men"—named to study how the whole western defence effort could be nourished —that Canada send free raw materials to Europe. Canada "thinks that is an undesirable principle".

Meeting in Lisbon

This whole question will come up this month at the N.A.T.O. council meeting in Lisbon at which he will preside, Mr. Pearson said. He will leave here Wednesday for preliminary talks on the agenda in London. Defence Minister Claxton will go over later.

Canada is hopeful, Mr. Pearson said, that the Lisbon meeting will approve an important revision on the N.A.T.O. set-up under which the council—N.A.T.O.'s top body —would remain in continuous session.

Canada would then name a permanent top-level delegate to the council in much the same way as she keeps a delegate at the United Nations. He would not be a cabinet minister.

PARLIAMENT SUMMONED

Moscow, Feb. 1 — (AP)—The Supreme Soviet, Russia's parliament, was summoned today to begin its annual meeting March 3. Among the items usually presented to the supreme Soviet for ratification is the Soviet Union's budget, including defence expenditures.

400 African Chiefs in Bright Robes Greet Royal Couple On Arrival in Kenya Colony

Nairobi, Kenya, Feb. 1 (CP) — Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh stepped into the blazing African sunshine today, right into a royal welcome from 400 African chief resplendent in bright robes and leopard skins.

Brass and silver arm bangles jingled as the towering chiefs leaped in the tribal welcome gesture. Lion headdresses nodded in time.

The four-engined Canadair North Star airliner which brought the royal pair from London touched down at 10.12 a.m. (2.12 a.m. EST) at Eastleight airfield, Nairobi. Governor Sir Philip E. Mitchell, in white uniform, stepped forward as the visitors climbed from the blue and silver British Overseas Airways machine which brought them from London.

Now comes a week's rest in this British colony of rolling plains, snow capped hills and great herds of African wildstock. Then the couple set out for the rigors of a five month tour which will take them to Australia and New Zealand.

Chiefs of the Turkhana and Suk tribes from Kenya's northern territories, with their leopard skins and high white and black plumed headdresses, had trekked 500 miles to cheer the Princess.

Other chiefs who wore cloaks of monkey skin mingled with Somali chiefs and the representatives of the Nandi and Masai tribes. Some in European dress wore the medal ribbons of two world wars. Their robes turned the airfield into a riot of color.

King Notified

As the royal pair stepped down from the plane news of their safe arrival here was telephoned at once to London airport, which passed on the report to the King and Queen.

The big airliner took just one minute more than 19 hours to make the 4,013 mile flight from London They left London just after noon yesterday and stopped to refuel and change their plane crew at the RAF base at El Adem, Libya.

On the airfield to welcome the slim, young princess were prominent African chiefs of this British East African colony and their families. Also present were the chiefs of the British army, navy and air force in Kenya, the mayor of Nairobi, and their wives.

Immediately after her arrival, the Princess inspected the RAF honor guard drawn up to greet her.

The crew of the couple's big silver and blue plane reported they had crossed Africa at 17,500 feet, making an average speed of 256 miles an hour.

Will Remain Week

The Princess and the Duke will remain here a week. Part of the time they will vacation at a hunting lodge the colony gave them as a wedding present.

Next Thursday they will sail from Mombasa, Kenya's chief airport, aboard the liner Gothic to continue their tour to Ceylon, Australia and New Zealand.

In London, a spokesman at the couple's London residence, Clarance House, announced they would return home by way of the Panama Canal and Bermuda.

Aboard the Gothic, they will sail from Auckland, N.Z., June 10, will stop at Pitcairn Island, and they will make stops in the Panama Canal zone at Balboa, June 25-26; Cristobal, June 26-27, and at Bermuda July 1. They are due at Southampton July 9.

Railroading Business in Canada Hits Billion-a-Year Bracket

Ottawa, Feb. 1—(CP)—Canada's railroading business has hit the $1,000,000,000-a-year class for the first time in the country's transportation history.

Unofficial figures cimpiled today indicate that the combination of near-record traffic volume and increased freight rates pushed the carriers' 1951 gross into the 10-figure mark for an all-time high in their straight railway earnings.

However, rising expences kept their income well below the war and post-war highs.

A gross intake of close to $1,100,000,000 is the estimate for the companies' earnings on railway operations within Canada. That does not include steamships, hotels and other enterprises or Canadian-owned rail subsidiaries in the United States.

Though the companies' books are not yet closed on 1951, the indications now are that the Canadian National Railways grossed about $550,000,000 on its rail division, with the Canadian Pacific Railway taking in about $433,000,000. Income of the smaller companies would bring the aggregate up to some $1,080,000,000.

These calculations are based on actual figures for 11 months, supplemented by experts' estimates for December. The net operating income—after taxes—on rail operations would be roughly $60,000,000 for all the carriers.

Net is Down

But although more cash passed through the railways' tills than the previous $959,000,000 top in 1950, the net is down from the $92,000,000 of that year.

In fact the estimates indicate it will not greatly exceed the $53,000,000 of 1939, which is attained on gross revenues of only $367,000,000 — just about one-third the 1951 figure.

In actual volume of revenue freight hauled last year was 2nd highest on record for the railways, topped only by the peak wartime year of 1944. The 1951 total is estimated at $63,400,000,000 ton-miles, against 65,900,000,000 in 1944 and 31,400,000,000 in 1939.

Prospects About Some

Prospects for 1952, according to railway experts, are for a traffic pattern roughly the same as 1951, baring unexpected developments. That would mean the gross revenue would be somewhat higher, for freight rates have gone up by a total of 17 per cent since the start of 1951.

The net revenues are highly problematical. Their size will depend on any further fluctuations in costs of materials and equipment and the outcome of wage negotiations between the railways and their unions during the year. The two-year contracts covering the bulk of the railways' union labor expires Sept. 1, and the employees will be looking for increases.

Three Children Burned to Death In New Brunswick

St. Leonard, N.B., Feb. 1 (CP)—Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Beaupre were burned to death early today when their home in this Madawaska county town was destroyed by fire.

Flames spread through the wooden home soon after Beaupre had risen to light the furnace. He returned to bed and soon after the house was in flames.

Beaupre said that he and his wife were unable to reach the room where the children, aged 2, 4 and 5, slept.

Bashfully Turns Back on Princess At Welcoming

Nairobi, Kenya, Feb. 1 — (AP) — A three-year-old African boy bashfully turned his back on Princess Elizabeth today and grabbed the spotlight at this British East African colony's welcome to its future ruler.

The child — named Prince because he was born the same day as Elizabeth's son Prince Charles — was delegated to hand her a bouquet when she visited the new African maternity hospital soon after her airport arrival with her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, on the first leg of their five-month Commonwealth tour.

Wide-eyed and solemn in white shirt and short blue trousers, Prince turned his back on the Princess and shyly backhanded the flowers. Elizabeth gently pulled him around and took the bouquet, to the delight of the large crowd of Africans.

Barking Dogs Disturbed Clerk So He Shoots 5

Princeton, Ont., Feb. 1 — (CP) — Police today charged Philip Church, 19, a bank clerk in Paris, 10 miles east of here, with illegally shooting five dogs "because their barking disturbed him."

Church, also charged with possession of an unregistered revolver, said he was disturbed by dogs barking in the neighborhood and decided to take some action.

"Some people won't like what I did, but a lot of other people in the village will thank me," he said.

He will appear in court in Woodstock Feb. 6.

New Record Set

Zurich, Switzerland, Feb. 1 — (Reuters) — A four - engined DC-6 airliner of the Swiss Air Line set a transatlantic record by flying from Gander, Nfld., to Shannon, Ireland, in four hours, 36 minutes on the night of January 30-31, Swiss Air Line claimed today.

It was claimed to be the first Transatlantic flight by an airliner in less than five hours.

Previous record was five hours and three minutes, set by Pan-American Airways Constellation in January, 1948.

George H. Corsan Noted Vegetarian And Health Enthusiast Dies at Miami

Toronto, Feb. 1. (CP)— George Hebden Corsan, 94, internationally known nut grower who defied the advance of old age by sticking to a rigid diet of nuts, fruit and vegetables, died last night in Miami, Fla.

His son George, said here he received word of the death of the leathery, thrice-married nut king and dietary enthusiast who spent his summers on his nut farm at Echo Valley in suburban Islington and his winters on his 16-acre nut-and-citrus-fruit plantation, El Corsand, in South Miami.

Only last spring Corsan recovered from a broken neck suffered in a 20-foot fall from a ladder while examining grafted buds on an English walnut tree at Islington. It proved only a temporary setback to Corsan, who left hospital in three weeks.

Against the reported opposition of family and friends, he married Lillian Armstrong, 60-year-old retired Toronto school teacher and fellow vegetarian, in Miami Jan. 2, 1951.

His two previous marriages ended in divorce.

About the time of his last marriage, to keep his weight to a trim 155 pounds, he climbed a palm tree daily during the winter. In summer, he occasionally brightened his morning swim by a dive from a 35-foot board.

He was born in Lockport N.Y., June 11, 1857, the son of a banker. In his boyhood the family moved to Hamilton. At 14 he ran away from home and during his teens and early 20's he worked on farms in many parts of Ontario.

Then he became interested in health cults and studied physical culture for three years at the Hygienic College of Physicians and Surgeons in St. Louis, Mo.

At 42 he won the Canadian swimming championship and seven other events in a meet here. From 1903 until 1922 he taught swimming at the University of Toronto and roved across the continent, teaching swimming and preaching health and vegetarianism.

Between 1927 and 1929 he built an 850-acre bird sanctuary for W. K. Kellogg, the corn flakes manufacturer, at a cost of $2,250,000.

He took up nut-culture in 1933 and developed 60 of the 400 varieties he grew on his 3 1-2 acres at Echo Valley.

Surviving besides his widow are two daughters, Mrs. Olive Anthes, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Mrs. Gordon Hoffman, of Aurora, Ont.; and four sons, George of Toronto; H. H. Corsan, of Hillsdale, Mich.; Wilfred, of Detroit and E. E. Corsan, of Islington.

The family said he will be cremated in Florida. At his own request, half his ashes will be left in Florida and the rest brought to his Islington farm.

Carries Out Two Children Then Operates Alarm

Toronto Lad Wins High Praise from Fire Chief

Toronto, Feb. 1 — (CP) — Sheldon Muise, 14, was credited with saving the lives of 19 persons as fire swept a downtown rooming-house early today.

The boy discovered the fire, carried out two small children, then stationed himself at the hand-operated fire alarm until the arrival of firemen.

District Fire Chief Fred Wilson praised the boy and said "at least two children would have died if it wasn't for Muise."

He remained at the alarm, despite dense smoke which nearly suffocated him, until all of the 19 tenants had left the building.

Young Muise said he was baby-sitting for the rooming - house landlord when he first sensed something wrong shortly after midnight.

Noticed Smoke

"I was in the kitchen and I noticed smoke coming from under the door where the kids were asleep," he said. "I opened the door and the room seemed filled with flames."

He tried to pick up Donna Gilgard but found the five-year-old too heavy so he grabbed her baby brother, Howard, and then pulled the two of them from the room

"They were so sleepy and slow I had to carry them," said Sheldon. "I guess I was pretty rough because they started crying, but I got them out of there."

Stayed at Post

Once the children were outside Sheldon groped his way through thick smoke to the hallway fire gong, installed recently at the insistence of the fire marshal's department, refusing to leave his post until all occupants of the house were out.

Others he rescued included a crippled man on the top floor who insisted on taking his suitcase with him. Sheldon took the suitcase while the man hobbled from the house on crutches.

Ontario's Farm Production Hits New Record

Toronto, Feb. 1 — (CP) — Ontario's farm production was worth a record total of $1,274,357,000 last year, Agriculture Minister Kennedy said yesterday. This was almost $150,000,000 more than in 1950 when the total output was valued at $1,126,321,000. The year's tobacco crop showed an increase of $14,000,000,000 over 1950.

Price Relief Seen For Consumers

Ottawa, Feb. 1 (CP) — There's price relief in sight for the Canadian consumer.

Pressure on prices, sparked by panic-buying and heavy stock-piling at the beginning of Canada's three-year $5,000,000,,000 defence program has eased. And there's been a noticeable cutback in production.

Government statisticians gave an indication of the trend in the January issue of the Canadian statistical review.

"The recent period," say the review, "has been one of internal adjustment, with prices and production showing a tendency to level off.

" . . . prices which a year ago were rising sharply partly due to forces of a speculative nature, have recently shown less tendency to increase. Inventories have also shown a levelling off after large increases in the first three quarters of 1951."

But while some business men are cutting down on their stock-buying and thus easing pressure on the demand for certain goods, workers are still almost fully employed.

Employment Rising

"Employment and incomes," added the review, "have been rising continuously. Salaries, wages and supplementary labor income for the first 10 months of 1951 were 17 percent above the same period of 1950.

"Retail sales have not maintained the rate of increase recorded earlier in the year; nevertheless for the 11 months of 1951, they were 11 percent above the same period of 1950, in value terms."

This trend in easing up of pressure on prices showed up in the latter half of 1951 in wholesale prices in both Canada and the United States where they receded from peaks established earlier in the year.

In Canada, a significant trend developed when the cost-of-living index for November declined one-tenth of a point to 191.1 from the peak of 191.2 in October. The tiny decline was the first in 23 months. The index is based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100. The survey for December will come out Monday.

HEAVY COSTS ASSESSED IN CASE

Appearing in magistrate's court today before Magistrate T. Y. Wills on a charge of careless driving, Roy Polmanter, Hillcrest, was convicted and assessed $5 fine and $72 costs. He was given one week to pay the fine and costs.

The charge against Polmanter arose out of an accident on January 11th when the truck which he was driving on George Street was struck by the locomotive of a C.P.R. train.

Parked Vehicle Goes Into River Near Footbridge

Lorne Solmes, driver for Gilchrist Bakery, rubbed his eyes in disbelief last evening, when he returned to the parking lot at the rear of Front Street stores near the footbridge to find his delivery truck in the Moira River.

Solmes had parked his vehicle shortly before six o'clock and had gone to Front Street to have a cup of coffee. When he returned he found his truck had run ahead and into the river. Fortunately the water was comparatively shallow at the point where his truck entered the water. The service of a garage towing truck was necessary to get the truck back onto dry land.

Sale of Motor Vehicle Licences Slow Says Issuer

The driving public as a whole are not breaking any legs in a rush to secure their motor vehicle licences, it seems.

Issuer Fred Symons said today that sales were slow and slightly below those of a year ago at this time.

The new stickers, while not productive of any complaints, as yet, provide a source of merriment for some motorists, but in general the driving public has accepted the gummed pieces of paper in their stride.

No deadline has been announced as yet. Last year it occurred during the first week in March. Some 7,000 licences and sticker-markers will be sold in the city and district this year.

Delegates to the annual convention of their association were selected on Wednesday night by members of the White Cane Club at a meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. Chosen were Mrs. Sarah O'Shea and Mr. James Brennan. The convention is being held in Kitchener, Ont., in May.

The meeting heard an interesting address by Mr. H. Duff, Newfoundland. Entertainment was provided by Miss Beverley Buck, who sang delightfully, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. M. Duff. It was announced that White Cane Week will be held in this district starting February 16th.

Members of the Kinette Club provided refreshments following the meeting. A vote of thanks was moved by Miss Tillie Dunning, to the guest speaker, the artists and the Kinettes.

Marmora—The rarity of a double funeral in Marmora and the respect which the two men Thomas E. Potts and Wilbert Bedore were held in the organizations to which they belonged was responsible for an overflowing congregation at St. Andrew's United Church on Thursday afternoon.

Members of Harmony L.O.B.A. 600 also paraded. The home in which they died being a neighboring building to St. Andrew's and the cemetery also but a short distance from the church, hearses were not used. The large attendance of brother Orangemen marshaled by Percy Bateman of the Springbrook L.O.L. included the Grand Master for Ontario East, Right Wor. Bro. Fred Bateman; the Deputy Grand Master Right Wor. Bro. R. Sanderson; County Master E. Coulter and several past County Masters.

Five Persons Slightly Hurt When Canadian National Flyer Crashes Into Freight Train

North Bay, Ont., Feb. 1 (CP)—Five persons were slightly injured when the crack Canadian National Railways flyer, "The Northland" early today plowed into the rear of a freight train standing on a siding with the last of its 85 cars jutting out on the main line.

Several freight cars were smashed and three were catapulted from the rails. Traffic was blocked for six hours by the accident which occurred several miles south of here at 12.30 a.m.

Railway officials said four of the 50 passengers and a news agent were injured.

Leaps to Safety

Harry Cook, a brakeman, standing on the platform of the freight caboose, leaped to safety a second before the crash, while the fireman and engineer of the passenger locomotive crouched on the floor of the cab as a mass of debris swept over the engine.

Railway officials said the freight, powered by two diesel units, had pulled into the siding to allow the Timmins bound train to pass. The caboose and several rear cars abutted on the main line and the passenger train tore through them and veered into the siding.

The caboose and a box car were wrecked and three other freight cars were derailed. Fire from a stove in the caboose set one car ablaze after it was heaved at a grotesque angle about the front of the big mountain type passenger steam locomotive. Flames shot high in the air, illuminating the scene and attracting motorists from miles around.

Canned Goods Scattered

Thousands of cans of string beans and other goods were scattered over the rails and the sides of the tracks from the smashed box cars. A number of persons were observed removing cases of merchandise and many passengers kept a can of beans as a souvenir.

Seat cushions in the front end day coaches were wrenched from their positions. The passenger train continued on to North Bay with an auxiliary engine from the Ontario Northland Railway.

"The Northland" is a CPR train until it reaches North Bay where it becomes an O.N.R. unit.

Railway officials declined to re-release the names of the injured.

Thomas Harris, North Bay, passenger on the train said that he felt the air brakes go on, then a series of jolts. Most of the passengers remained on the train after the wreck.

Barbara Ann Is Cover Girl On Life Magazine

New York, Feb. 1 (CP) — Life Magazine makes Barbara Ann Scott its cover girl in the current issue and says "the hottest feud ever to strike the refrigerated world of ice extravaganzas is being waged this year" by Canada's ice star and the seasoned Sonja Henie.

Miss Scott, appearing in Arthur Wirtz's Hollywood Ice Revue at Madison Square Garden in New York, was signed up after Miss Henie had a falling out with Wirtz. Now Miss Henie is touring with her own troupe.

Life says:

"There is little doubt that the 23-year-old Barbara Ann . . . has a more fetching figure than the 39-year-old Sonja, or that she could beat Sonja hands down in an Olympic contest today.

"But in the professional arenas, where a wiggled hip and a well-aimed kiss (Miss Henie blows kisses to her audience) can mean far more than a perfect Axel Paulsen, the battle of the Queens is more a contest. Barbara has beauty, breath-taking form and the sparkle of youth, but to match Sonja's well educated wriggle, roguish eyes and superior showmanship she calls on two sexy supporting stars."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 1 — (CP) — Industrials and western oils pushed steadily higher today in early afternoon stock market dealings but golds and western oils eased from early advances.

Papers, steels and refining oils led industrials with a broad list of advances ranging to about $1. Utilities, foods, manufacturing companies and miscellaneous issues also drew firm support. Constructions, banks, textiles and retail stores held gains and losses in balance but agricultures weakened.

Western oil gains ranged from pennies to about 50 cents. Anglo-Canadian, Calgary and Edmonton, Gridoil, Jupiter, Kroy, Scurry, Trans Empire and Selburn strengthened steadily.

Base metal leaders were firm. Consolidated Smelters, Golden Manitou, Hudson Bay, International Nickel, Noranda and Steep Rock edged upward. Mindamar climbed strongly in active trading. Senior golds were steady. Dome, Giant Yellowknife and Lake Shore climbed fractions while Bralorne and Wright-Hargreaves slipped pennies. Junior producers dipped sharply, however, while prospects and holding companies strengthened.

Marketing Act Ultra Vires Says Supreme Court

Charlottetown, Feb. 1 (CP) — The Federal Agricultural Products Marketing Act, passed in 1949, was declared ultra vires here yesterday by the full bench of the Prince Edward Island Supreme Court.

The court was sitting on a test case brought by the Prince Edward Island Potato Marketing Board, established under authority of the act, against the Charlottetown firm of H. W. Willis, Inc.

The board had sought to license dealers, make levies establish minimum prices and regulate consignment sales.

The court held that the board, being purely a provincial organization, and in no way responsible to the parliament of Canada, cannot receive delegated powers from the federal government.

Judge J. C. Anderson Elected President, Reports Presented At Red Cross Annual Meeting

Following an enjoyable supper last evening in the Parish House of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society held their annual meeting, with Mrs. W. C. Mikel presiding.

Owing to a car accident at West Hill, the speakers of the evening, Miss N. Hinton, director of the Divisional Homemakers and Nutritional department of the Toronto branch, and Mr. Ross Newham, director of Blood Donor panels of the Red Cross Clinic of the Province of Ontario, were unavoidably detained.

Reports Read

During the interim, the following reports, the most important of which will appear in detail elsewhere in this paper, were heard: the financial statement for the year 1951 was read by C. S. Lowther, treasurer; the report of the blood donor clinic, prepared by Judge J. C. Anderson, and read by Mr. E. E. Follwell; the Homemakers Service report, by Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson; this report contained three letters of thankful appreciation for help and assistance rendered to three families in time of need; the report of the Women's Work Committee, prepared by Mrs. M. Bulger and read by Mrs. C. E. Argue; the Red Cross Blood Donor clinic, record department, prepared by Mrs. V. Lewis and read by E. E. Follwell; the Junior Red Cross by Miss Tickell, and prepared by Miss Mary H. Dwyer.

Slate of Officers

The slate of officers as suggested by the nominating committee was read by Mrs. H. McCabe with Mr. M. P. Duff presiding. As no further nominations took place, the nominations were declared closed with Judge J. C. Anderson as president for the year 1952-53.

Received Charter in 1918

An interesting interlude was the showing of the first minute book of the Belleville branch of the Red Cross Society. Out of hundreds of names therein, only two women from Belleville were mentioned, one of which was Mrs. W. C. Mikel as secretary. The first meeting was held in the armories in 1914 and in 1918 the society received its charter and since that time has been steadily growing.

The guest speakers, ~~who had arrived~~, were introduced to their audience, Miss N. Hinton by M. P. Duff and Ross Newham by E. E. Follwell.

Miss Hinton gave a concise report of the scope and aims of the homemakers work stating that it was carried on in 24 different communities and of the assistance given to new couples living in new localities where the Red Cross was called when help was needed.

Homemaker's Assistance

In other countries, as Sweden, the homemaker's work on similar lines of assisting in homes where the mother is ill, or where, as in the case of older people, the homemaker comes in bringing cheer and comfort. The homemaker also looks after children where the mother is not at home, not only in foster homes, but in other homes. The homemaker endeavors to fill the mother's place, to relieve worry, give sympathy and understanding and keeps things running smoothly till mother returns.

This means that the children are kept on routine, the meals are provided for father, when he returns tired and weary from work, all of which means a great deal to the home. "Father", said Miss Hinton, "is becoming more domesticated, has more time to know his children, and appreciates what his wife does in the maintaining of the home." The homemaker also assists in shopping and shows the best way of buying to advantage. "Homemakers are here to stay," added the speaker, and the staff of homemakers in Belleville is a fine one.

Pins Presented

Miss Hinton also presented homemakers pins to Mrs. Lillian Hall, and Mrs. Phoebe Ray, for splendid work done in the homemaker's department.

Ross Newham was introduced by E. E. Follwell and spoke of the growth of the Red Cross from the time of its birth on the battlefield of Solferino, in the mind of a great-hearted philanthropist Henri Dunant, whose unchangeable purpose was, "To bring relief to human beings in all cases of exceptional necessity; first of all in wars, then in other catastrophes," which purpose should be achieved by voluntary helpers urged by the spirit of the Good Samaritan and that every country under the sun should be embraced within its scope.

Red Cross' First Step

The first step, officially, in the history of Red Cross, was the international treaty signed by 17 nations in the year 1864, known as the first Geneva Convention, and has been enlarged and amended until in 1949 has been respected by 63 nations, many of whom were engaged in total war.

Incorporated in 1909, and in the First World War did a magnificent job. In 1928 Ontario's premier, G. Howard Ferguson said: "It would have been a great calamity in the humanitarian sense, if the Canadian Red Cross had disbanded after the war. It has taken up intelligently and vigorously, a work that is essential to the greatness of our country." Since then the program has been, the improvement of health, the prevention of disease and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world.

Belleville Branch is one of the oldest branches in Ontario, and during the last war great services have been provided through its voluntary help. In 1944 the workroom of the Belleville branch turned out 16,500 articles; during the first six months of 1945, 3,000 bottles of blood for the armed forces were collected.

First Donor Clinc

In the first Blood Donor Clinic, of the present campaign, 252 attended the clinic; last week 116 employees of the Northern Electric donated blood, making a total of about 240 donors from the plant.

The plans of the Red Cross are: an immediate commitment of 10,000 bottles of dried plasma annually, representing approximately 30,000 bottles of whole blood. In May the first clinic was held, and at the end of December, 24,568 bottles of blood had been collected, which shows that a stockpile for civil defence and disaster services may be had.

Mentioning the "Area C" (Hamilton) Mr. Newham stated that a total of 30,735 bottles of blood had been collected last year, and that 12,427 patients received 18,235 bottles of whole blood and 1,388 bottles of plasma. The excess plasma was turned over to the Armed Forces. This amount of blood given to patients in Area C through the Red Cross represents a saving of over $365,000, a figure based on the average charge of $20 per transfusion.

In closing, Mr. Newham thanked the volunteer workers whose enthusiasm and hard work make possible the success of the Belleville Clinics, and the volunteer donors whose giving of their life's blood, is saving the lives of their fellowmen in the armed forces.

Mr. John McKenzie, who gave ton blood donations was presented with the Red Cross Blood Donors Award.

Mrs. Don MacKinnon moved a vote of appreciative thanks to Miss Hinton, and Mr. Frank Follwell, M. P., to Mr. Ross Newham for their splendid addresses on the work of the Red Cross activities.

Mr. Alan Sprague, chairman of the Red Cross Campaign also gave a brief report, mentioning that the Red Cross was in need of a meeting place to gain more publicity for itself, and a roof over its head; that owing to Mr. L. Buck having to leave the city on business, the meeting in March would be advanced one week to the 3rd. and that the quota had been raised from an allocation of $13,000 to that of $16,000. He also stated that he was especially pleased to devote his time to the furtherance of the campaign.

Homemaker Service Reports Year of Great Activity

The Belleville Red Cross Homemaker Service report as presented at the annual meeting of the Red Cross Society last evening in the Parish House of St. Thomas' Church, by Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, showed a splendidly full year, with many assists being given to those in need. The report follows:

In 171 homes during the past year, the homemakers have worked 1,290 1-2 days, being 63 more homes than in 1950. Cared for 360 children, with 14 cases being refused for lack of staff in 73 cases of 360, the mother was ill; there were 64 maternity cases; four mothers called away; four illnesses of children and one death.

One hundred cases paid the full fee of four or five dollars, which fee was raised to the above amount in June of this year to partially meet the increased cost operating services; 57 cases paid from one to $4 and 14 were non-pay. The supervisor made 596 calls during the year; 11 regular educational meetings were held with the homemakers attending all lectures and demonstrations of the Red Cross Food Clinic.

Good nutrition and low cost meals stressed; six demonstrations held using powdered milk, table settings and decorations; the preparation and serving of three economical dinners; the bathing of the baby, making a formula and proper bed making.

Report on P. Health

Miss Carrie Genik, supervisor of the Belleville Public Health Department gave an account of her work and its relationship to the Red Cross Homemaker service, Miss Nesta Hinton director of the Homemaker and Nutrition service, Ontario Division, also gave an address on the service and duties of the homemaker.

"Food notes" were distributed to mothers and teachers, containing valuable information on food and health; 2,000 dodgers were given out during the campaign to children in schools, as well as 300 aims cards being distributed.

Loan Cupboard

Incorporated in the homemakers report was that of the Loan Cupboard, which is filling a need in the community. The equipment is kept in the VON offices at the Kiwanis Centre and with the co-operation of the VON some families have been helped.

The various activities include the purchase of one wheelchair; the donation of another by Mrs. Marvin making a total of four chairs, one of which six families have used during the past year; one hospital bed has been on loan for over one year; crutches for eight families; back rests to two families; bed pans to eight families; three bath towels; two pairs of pillow cases; one wash cloth and air ring.

Two new members, Mrs. Don MacKinnon and Mrs. Howard Graham were obtained, with Mrs. MacKinnon conducting a splendid food clinic, comprising three lectures, "Foods for the Family," "Know the Foods You Buy," and "Value Your Cooking," and one demonstration, "First Aid for Ailing Budgets." Mrs. Howard Graham has taken over publicity and through the kindness of the Ontario Intelligencer will have a monthly article on Red Cross activities published.

Thanks are tendered to owners and staff of CJBQ for their continuous advertising the service since the homemaker department was organized. It is the only station in Ontario to give so much free time to the Red Cross, to Mrs. Laura Hagerman and to Mrs. Edna Clifton of, the welcome wagon for distributing the Aims Cards, and to the many others who have helped in so many ways during the past year.

Aids Given

In addition to the work of the homemaker service, the supervisor relieves many appeals for help, a few of which have been, a mother without food for her three children over the weekend; a new Canadian seeking aid in having her mother located in a distant city and brought to Belleville; a man wishing to find a friend in British Columbia; helping a new family from Europe to obtain stove, iron, child's crib and mattress, and in interesting a woman's club in their welfare; a war bride in unfortunate circumstances was assisted in finding work and an attempt was made to rehabilitate her; but the efforts were unsuccessful. She returned to her homeland.

A deserted mother with four small children was also helped; twenty families were given used clothing and one layette provided by the workroom; Mrs. Edgar and three children, who had lost all in fire at Christmas time, were supplied with food, clothing and accommodation, working with the city's assistance, and train fare to Saint John, N.B., for pregnant wife who was hitchhiking from Toronto who became ill en route.

Women's Work Committee Report to Red Cross Meeting

Mrs. Mary E. Bulger, chairman of the Women's Work Committee, submitted a comprehensive report on the activities of the year.

The report follows:

"The Canadian Red Cross Society is an organization of thousands of public spirited citizens who have joined together with the sole aim of alleviating the sufferings of their fellow men by their voluntary efforts. The activities of the society are varied and one of the more important divisions in each local branch is the Women's Work committee.

"This committee is comprised of numerous women in each city who unselfishly donate their time and skill in sewing garments, knitting children's wear and making medical supplies from material supplied by the society. In Belleville this humanitarian work is carried on by various women in church groups, Women's Institutes and auxiliaries and by individual women in their own homes. Materials and directions are furnished to them from our work-room in St. Thomas' Parish Hall and completed articles are turned in there. As these finished articles are received they are packed and shipped to the divisional headquarters in Toronto.

"As the need varies each year, according to available supplies in the central warehouse, groups are asked to work on specific articles and the materials and patterns for these specific items are issued to each branch.

600 Articles Completed

"During the past year our women workers in Belleville have completed over 600 articles which have been turned into our work-room an' shipped to Toronto. The appeal this year was primarily for children's clothing and our quotas included bathrobes, boys' shirts, children's sweaters, socks, etc.

"The headquarters of the International Red Cross Society at Geneva, Switzerland, maintains a large warehouse of supplies which are available for any European disaster. Many of the articles sent by our branch to Toronto are shipped on to the central warehouse.

"To illustrate the efficiency of this system, supplies from the Canadian Red Cross were the first relief received by the Italians last fall during the flood disaster in that country. To give further help to the victims of this Italian disaster, the Canadian Society established a remarkable record for speed. A cable was received in Toronto from Geneva appealing for additional supplies of women's and children's clothing. An emergency meeting was called immediately at which $15,000 worth of supplies was authorized. Within twenty-four hours of the receipt of the cable an R.C.A.F. plane, loaned by the government, took off from Malton with nineteen cases of relief supplies. Two ladies, who are members of the Toronto Women's Work Committee, accompanied the shipment and personally arranged distribution. In all probability, some of the children's clothing in this shipment was produced right here in Belleville.

Success Due to Women

"Any success that we have enjoyed is due to the numerous women who have worked so faithfully during the year. Our local committee suffered a distinct loss this year in the death of Miss A. Lounsberry who will be sorely missed by our knitting group. Our results are, of course, dependent upon the number of our workers and we would welcome assistance from any group of women or individuals who feel that they could give some time to this very worthy work.

"A disaster relief service is being set up in Canada in conjunction with the Civil Defence program and the necessity of building up a stock of supplies for this endeavour will necessitate the efforts of many additional volunteer workers.

"The need for clothing and supplies is greater than ever — materials and instructions are available, but everything depends on obtaining more helpers.

"In closing I would like to take this opportunity of expressing my sincere appreciation to the local executive for the help and co-operation extended to our committee, to the women who have helped so faithfully at the work-room in the distribution and packing of cases and, last, but certainly by no means least, the women who have done the actual work on the items which we have been able to supply."

TODAY'S HIS BIRTHDAY

The Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, celebrates his seventieth birthday today and all Canada joins in wishing him many happy returns.

Mr. St. Laurent may not be, as he was flatteringly described in a recent magazine article, "the ultimate Canadian," but he is certainly a Canadian of the best type and a big man by any standard of judgment.

Mr. St. Laurent has not been a lifelong, professional politician of the type with which Canada is too familiar and is still oversupplied. He entered public life as recently as December 10, 1941, when he was sworn in as a privy councillor and appointed minister of justice and attorney-general for the Dominion of Canada. Later, on the retirement of the then prime minister, Mr. St. Laurent became prime minister. Since then, he has fought one general election, with results highly unpleasant to the opposition groups.

Before he entered public life, Mr. St. Laurent was a lawyer in Quebec City. He was one of the country's best known lawyers, and reputedly one of its most competent. Most of his clients were large corporations which could afford the best counsel available.

As was inevitable, some of Mr. St. Laurent's actions have evoked criticism, for he is not only the head of a government but the leader of a political party; but it is undeniable that Canada has progressed greatly under his guidance. It is undeniable also, and highly significant, that we have heard more about national unity and less about national disunity since the beginning of his regime.

Not many men, when approaching sixty years of age, would sacrifice one of the most lucrative law practices in the country to enter the strifes and uncertainties of politics, but Mr. St. Laurent did so. He did so from a sense of duty and perhaps from a feeling that his own bi-racial origin might help unite this country in these troubled times.

Regardless of whether he leads his party into another general election, Mr. St. Laurent has served Canada well and has earned the gratitude of all Canadians.

FARMERS ARE INDIVIDUALISTS

Opposition to the introduction of government health insurance in the United States is growing in agricultural circles, it is pointed out by the Christian Science Monitor.

The largest of the American farm organizations, the American Farm Bureau Federation, with a membership of 1,452,000 families, at its annual convention, passed a resolution saying: "We oppose any form of compulsory health insurance."

A short time previously, the National Grange, the oldest and the second largest U.S. farm group, voiced similar unqualified hostility toward any plan of national compulsory health insurance or socialized medicine.

The Monitor adds that the last United States census had set the number of farm families at 5,400,000 and that "farmers carry extra weight in Congress and in many state legislatures because of the distribution of representation." It continues that nearly all the support for national compulsory health insurance comes from organized groups in the large centres of population.

In some respects at least, conditions in the United States are parallel to those in Canada. Demands for the institution of any such socialistic project as compulsory health insurance, (note the presence of the word compulsory), come always from urban residents and rarely from the man who tills the soil.

AN IMPORTANT CASE

Are funds contributed by a company toward a co-operative advertising fund to be considered part of the sales price of its product, and as such subject to excise and sales tax?

The revenue division of the Department of Finance says they are. Philco Corporation of Canada has launched an appeal against this ruling. The appeal is to be heard by the Tariff Board February 22.

If the revenue division's contention is upheld, it will mean, according to the Montreal Gazette, "a substantial increase in federal revenue and probably also a boost in retail prices for quite a few products, especially automobiles, radios and electric refrigerators."

DOG-CATCHERS PASSE?

Just how far may we expect the modern craze for giving everyone and everything a high-sounding title to go before reaction sets in and people begin again to call a spade a spade?

Over in Etobicoke Township, which is near Toronto, it seems, they have a dog-catcher, but he is not called by any such commonplace and plebeian title as a dog-catcher—he is listed as a "canine control director."

If Etobicoke's dog-catcher is officially described as a canine control director, we wonder what kind of fancy title they have for their dog-catcher in some really ritzy Toronto suburb, such as Forest Hill Village?

STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN

If she asks you for a date, stop to think before too late.
This is leap year and there's something on her mind.
If she tells you she can cook, stop and listen, take a look!
There's a reason and it won't be hard to find.

Since the spring is coming soon, if she gazes at the moon
And remarks, "The man tonight is plain to see,"
Then wonders all his life if he's lived without a wife,
Change the subject just as quickly as can be.

When a maiden sets her cap to attract a timid chap
Who is slow to pop the question she would hear,
With her artfulness and wit she can speed him up a bit
When an extra day is added to the year.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON GIVING

There is full meaning to that familiar phrase, "it is more blessed to give than to receive." No one, who has ever practised this, need have further evidence. Often we hear the expression, "give until it hurts." I like a better phrasing. I think that we should give until it makes us happy. No use to give at all if you don't reap happiness from it. As the poet has so well said: "The gift without the giver is bare."

There is another saying that has become familiar. It is that "we only keep what we give away." Great givers always seem to have an abundance left over! It's the kindly movement of love in the world that makes it such a precious universal asset. To give love we must give something especial of ourselves. Old Scrooge, the Dickens character, never realized how rich he was until he began to give himself and his money away to make others happy on that Christmas Day.

None of us really experience the essence of happiness until we begin to give something of ourselves, or our possessions, away. And this giving doesn't have to be in material things, though at times this may well work in. A simple kindness, or a word of encouragement, at the right time, has often meant more than any possible gift of money.

There are silent givers, as well. Those who have written great books, that have come down to us over the years, and which continually live, are verily gifts that their authors meant, and hoped, might influence many to a happier and more useful way of life. Their gift to posterity. Never do I enter my library and view the books that line all the walls without whispering to myself: "What gifts!" I came across a book by Conan Doyle, which he called "Through the Magic Door," and bought it. It tells of the door to his library, and upon entering it he takes down his treasures and shares his talk with his reader.

Often it may be the smallest gifts, given in a big way, that mean the most! In the New Testament, the Gospel of John, you will read these words: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." That is what is happening in Korea. Theirs is the supreme gift to Freedom!

NORMAL AMOUNT

Kingston, Feb. 1—(CP)— The 279 cases of measles reported in this city since Jan. 1 are normal for this time of year, Dr. A. R. J. Boyd, city medical officer, said yesterday. There was nothing alarming about the outbreak, which affected only one adult, he said. Of those stricken, 77 were of pre-school age and 143 in either kindergarten or lower grades.

MORE FAILURES

Kingston, Feb. 1—(CP)—Either the Christmas examinations at Queen's University were more difficult or students weren't as prepared for them as in the past. The university yesterday announced that failures were slightly higher than last year—almost four per cent more failed all but one or two exams.

OUR TOWN

BY JACK SCOTT

SNOWBOUND

Speaking of being snowbound (as we happen to be at this writing) I'm reminded of an incident upon a winter's eve some two years ago when my wife and I were skiing at Mount Hood in Oregon.

We'd enjoyed a rather heroic dinner by candlelight in the dining room of the magnificent Timberline Lodge, a castle thrown up just below the marshmallow cone of that great peak, and had gone to join the skiers draped about the crackling log fire in the main lounge.

A group of them, I knew, were seniors from Stanford University and I was delighted when one of them, a fellow I'd met earlier that day on the run they call the Magic Mile, invited us to join their party.

My wife and I were introduced about (there were, as I recall it, five couples) and then, without being impolite, everyone turned expectantly to a blond, wind-burned young man.

Someone said, "Go on with the story, Clark," and I realized we'd interrupted something. The blond boy Clark looked at us expectantly and I said, "Please go ahead."

* * *

"Well, as I say, Anne and I had not seen each other for two years or more," Clark said. "I was at Stanford, she was at Washington. So, when a gang of us decided to come up here for a week of skiing, I asked her to join me at the lodge.

"We'd climbed that first day to the high shelter. Thought we'd have lunch there, then make the run back to the lodge in the afternoon. We had lunch all right. Then the blizzard hit us. I've never seen anything like it! You literally couldn't see a ski pole's length in front of you. And so we knew we were trapped.

"Well," he went on, "as you know, we were snowbound there for 48 hours. At first we had the telephone that hooks up the shelter with the main lodge. I was able to tell them down here that we were okay. But it went out soon afterward. And for two days Anne and I were absolutely alone. Yes, it was quite an experience."

* * *

At this point Clark lit a cigarette and I had the uneasy feeling he'd finished his story. I'd now become extremely interested in this adventure, the kind of thing you might expect in a motion picture or a pleasant dream, but rarely in real life. I was dying to know the whole story.

"Were you cold?" I ventured.

"You've never been to the high shelter?" Clark asked and I shook my head.

"Why," he went on, "it's almost a miniature of the lodge. Wonderful great fireplace, big divan in front of it, small kitchen well-stocked with canned goods—Why! We even found some warm bathrobes and slippers. You could live there for a year without ever coming out."

"All it needed was a bar," I suggested.

"Had that too," Clark grinned. "Emergency rations. Brandy. Very good stuff it was. We had a little talk about it and decided it was sure enough an emergency."

* * *

Clark had been speaking in a droll, offhand manner, but at this point he seemed to become more serious. I had the feeling he was reliving those 48 hours.

"I don't know what it was," he said, "but the moment we knew we were cut off a kind of peace descended on us. We might have been on another planet or in another world.

"We'd sit there with the lights off and a big fire blazing and listen to the sound of the blizzard howling down the chimney and talk as we'd never talked before—or ever will again, I guess. Afterwards Anne said she'd got a whole new perspective out of those two days. It's hard to explain but I had the same feeling."

We'd all now become very serious and when Clark said, "Everyone ought to be snowbound at one time or another," we found ourselves agreeing soberly. Then someone suggested a hot rum or something and the mood was lost.

* * *

My wife and I were weary from skiing and we left the college gang early. But not before I'd asked the question that I had to know.

"It would be a nice ending to the story," I said, "if you'd married the girl."

Everyone burst into laughter and turned again to Clark.

"That, you might say, is the hell of the story," he said. "Anne is my sister."

Gas Price War On

London, Feb. 1 (CP)—Another gasoline price war may be in the making in London.

The cause appears to be a drop in sales volume. One service station dropped its price 42½ to 39 cents a gallon for premium gas yesterday.

Within hours another station dropped from 40½ and 42½ to 36 and 38 cents.

Both were holding the lower prices today.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Of all the curiosities of the white race which must amuse the Chinese and other oriental nationalities, our scorn of face-saving must be among the top ten. For if there is anybody who goes about face-saving in a big and organized way, it is the British, the Americans, the French, the Germans, the Russians, the Italians and so on through the gamut of all the various shades of what we call white. The orientals recognize face-saving as a basic characteristic of human nature, and make open and frank allowance for it in all dealings.

But we white folks, heaping lofty and amused derision on face-saving in lesser breeds without the law, waste more time, words and effort on trying to save our faces than on trying to save our skins. The nearest we allow ourselves to come to accusing one another of face-saving is to dub one another as stuffed shirt.

Across the road from my house lives a small black dog which has the habit of rushing out at all passers-by, marking at them excitedly. To save their faces, most of the passers-by turn, in one degree of dignity or another, and scold the dog and tell it to go home.

The little dog immediately slinks back to the house, and the citizens continue their way with a sense of dignity unimpaired. After they have gone a little way, the small dog saves its face by mounting its front steps and sending a couple of arrogant small barks after the retreating citizen, as though to say: "See? I chased you away!"

Face-saving is common to all living things—dogs, roosters, bulls, especially those living things inclined to bark, crow, bellow, including, of course, men, white, black, yellow, brown.

COFFEE IS GOOD FOR THE HEART

from now on.

Wiseacres or fatheads who choose to do without coffee because it is "bad for the nerves" or "causes insomnia" or "poisons the heart" miss much of the joy of life and derive little if any benefit from their abstention.

The effects of a moderate dose of caffeine, say 1½ to 2 grains, the amount present in a large cup of coffee, are evident within one-half hour after the dose is taken and continue for 3½ or 4 hours. Within 4 or 4½ hours the drug is entirely eliminated or burned up in the body and hence no longer active.

Since the duration of the effect of caffeine or coffee is less than five hours, a cup or two of coffee taken before 7 p.m. will not prevent sleep after 12 p.m.

On the other hand there is no question that a cup or two of strong coffee every three or four hours will stave off sleepiness for many hours.

A cup or two of coffee just before an examination will enable a student to do his best intellectual work, provided he has not been indulging in coffee to excess prior to examinations, and, of course, provided the student is over 16. Caffeine or coffee is harmful to children, in any circumstance.

Contrary to a widespread popular notion, founded on the claims made by vendors of coffee substitutes, that caffeine or coffee "poisons the heart" and contributes to or aggravates heart disease.

The truth is that coffee is good for the heart (of an adult) and one with heart disease, particularly coronary disease, generally gets nothing but good cheer and benefit from a cup or two at breakfast and another cup, if desired, at lunch or early dinner.

Caffeine or coffee, like calcium, nitries, papaverine and some other medicines, tends to dilate the coronary arteries or prevent constriction of their fine branches (arterioles). This assures a full quota of oxygen, via the blood stream, for the heart muscle.

Nothing "poisonous" about that, is there, wiseacres?

Come on, have another cup of coffee while we wait for Micky—our hired girl—to bring on the first stack of pure all-buckwheat pancakes — package of Prize buckwheat just arrived from national headquarters, the Birkett Mills, Penn Yan, N.Y., where I served five years at hard labor before I discovered how to make a living.

You know, there is something to be said about pure buckwheat as a health food, and one day when I'm full of it, maybe I'll enlighten you about it. Altogether too much misapprehension concerning impurities in the blood and skin rashes ascribed to buckwheat.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

WHERE DO YOU STAND?

"Yes, I believe in God." He shrugged his shoulders as much as to say, "So what?" I presume that in that short declaration be believed he had settled a problem that has badgered the mind of humanity from the beginning of time, namely, whether or not there is a personal beneficent power higher than ourselves who has credited the world, and who sustains it.

The mere declaration that we believe in God has no more significance than an observation we may make about the condition of the weather. The burning question is wether or not we are doing anything about our belief. A shrug of the shoulders and a "so what" settles nothing Furthermore, in what kind of God do we believe Is our God just impersonal cosmic force or is our God the Being such as the Old and New Testaments show forth with such logic consistency, and clarity?

Philosophy talks about God as an abstraction, but religion cannot do this. Religion has to go after the problem and try to answer the questions that it raises. And if there is a God—and religion says there is—then the question is whether we are on His or on the Enemy's side. Religion makes no place for a "no man's land."

Mickey McDonald Most Wanted Of Ten Notorious Lawbreakers

Ottawa, Feb. 1 — (CP)— The R.C.M.P. today put Donald (Mickey) McDonald, Toronto gunman, at the head of a crime roll of their 10 "most-wanted" lawbreakers.

The 44-year-old former Toronto salesman, believed to have fled to the United States after breaking out of Kingston penitentiary in 1947, tops a list of men wanted for murder, forgery, narcotics charges, bank robbery, swindling and criminal insanity.

The list, Canada's first announced roll of public enemies, was prepared by the R. C. M. P. at the request of newspaper men. It gives the wanted men in the chronological order of their alleged offences.

Besides McDonald— wanted for bank robbery in Windsor as well as the prison break — the criminals are given as:

Walter Pavlukoff, 38, Vancouver laborer, wanted for the killing of bank manager Sidney Petrie in a holdup at a Vancouver branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce Aug. 25, 1947;

Hugh Kennedy, alias McIntosh, 34, of Winnipeg and Toronto, wanted by Toronto police for escaping custody while on the way to Kingston penitentiary Nov. 27, 1948, to serve eight years for forgery;

Donald Winslow Henderson, 35, university graduate and bush-cutting contractor of Calgary, wanted by Calgary police for the murder of Yvonne Levesque August 11, 1949;

Michel Sisco, alias Antoine D'-Agostino, 44, restaurant owner in Montreal, wanted on narcotics charges since Feb. 1, 1950. A native of France, he was convicted at Toulouse in 1948 for treason and sentenced to death in abstentia;

Melville Wilkie, 41, laborer of Shallow Lake, Ont., who set a fire in his house that burned his wife and child to death in Owen Sound. Ont., in 1933. He escaped from the Ontario Hospital for the Criminally Insane at Penetanguishene, Ont., on July 14, 1950;

John Mallock, 36, Winnipeg salesman, wanted in Vancouver for selling narcotics,

George Michael Mallock, 37, Winnipeg carpenter, brother of John, wanted on the same charges as John. Both failed to appear for trial in January, 1951;

William Patrick Ryan, 62, of England and New Zealand, described as an international swindler. He is wanted by Vancouver and Toronto police for horse-race betting swindles. He is accused of fraudulently obtaining $5,000 at Toronto last April 4 and $10,500 at Vancouver last Oct. 11;

Edwin Alonzo Boyd, 37, Toronto laborer, wanted by Toronto city police for bank robbery and escaping from Toronto jail Nov. 4, 1951.

The man at the head of the list — McDonald — cut a wide crime swath through eastern Canada a few years ago with two companions, Nick Minnelli and Ulysses Lauzon. McDonald is the only one of the trio still unaccounted for.

Lauzon was found shot to death in the southeastern United States, and Minnelli was picked up in Los Angeles.

MARMORA

Agricultural Society Directors Re-appointed

Marmora—The annual meeting of Marmora Agricultural Society was held on Tuesday evening with the president, John McAvoy in the chair.

The president gave his report and thanked the members for valued support given in 1951. He felt that more enthusiasm had been shown in the past year than for some time.

The choice of Labor Day for the day of the Fair had proved advantageous and was responsible for a better attendance at the event. With the present industrial situation in the village, and its situation on the Trans Canada Highway, there was no reason why the interest in Marmora Fair could not be further extended.

Crop Competition

The field crop competition with 15 entries and the calf club with its 11 members had been commendable features of the year's activities.

Ground improvement in sight were briefly commented upon by the speaker who voiced the opinion that the rink commission and Agricultural Society should get together on the project of having a fence erected across the front of the grounds.

He paid a tribute to the support given by the two local municipal councils and to the help afforded at a desired time by the Hydro commission. He concluded by saying that with the right support, the biggest and best rural fair in Hastings County would be possible here.

T. J. Bateman secretary treasurer, presented a summary of the year's finances.

S. Fitzgerald, district director and acting president of the Central Ontario Fairs Association, who was present, gave an informal talk. He contended that directors should be on the job all day and should be wearing their badges for identification. All should recognize the truth that, "Our own fair is the show window of the district." He finished with suggestions for the best operation of a midway which evoked keen discussion.

At the close of his remarks, last year's directors were reappointed. The board of directors will hold a meeting in a week or so to complete business including the election of officers for the year.

Truck and Tram Freedom Curbed In Toronto Bill

Toronto, Feb. 1 — (CP) — Street-cars and heavy trucks will have their freedom curbed if a city of Toronto bill is passed at the coming session of the Ontario legislature.

Should the bill be approved, street-cars no longer will have the right of way over other city traffic. Another clause would authorize city council to pass by-laws requiring heavy trucks and buses to use curb lanes on city streets to be designated by council.

The bill also would authorize council to widen the paved or travelled portion of a highway and prohibit the Toronto Transportation Commission or Gray Coach Lines from incorporating any other subsidiary company without consent of council.

Nurse Revived After Heart Stopped Beating

Chicago, Feb. 1 — (AP) Darline Timke, a student nurse whose heart stopped beating for an hour and 45 minutes, was revived by massage of the organ and use of an electrical device, doctors at Presbyterian Hospital disclosed.

A charge of 110 volts was sent directly through her exposed heart for a half second, the doctors reported, after three physicians alternated in massaging the nurse's heart to keep her blood circulating through her body.

Miss Timke, 21-year-old senior student nurse now on duty at the hospital, discussed her experience of last Dec. 12 with reporters Wednesday. She said she suffered from temporary amnesia after the operation and for a time was living two years in the past.

Doctors said there was no permanent brain damage. They said her memory is almost normal and they expect full recovery.

Miss Timke's heart stopped beating during a minor nasal surgery operation.

Physicians decided to use a device called a defibrillator after heart massage failed to restore its normal beat. Dr. William G. Hobbs, medical director at Presbyterian, said the machine had not been used previously on human beings in Chicago and there are only a few recorded cases of its use.

Hastings Co. Holds Interesting Folk School

From Friday evening of last week till Monday evening of this week the Hastings County Folk School was held at the home of Miss Alma and Mr. Roy Moorcroft, under the leadership of Clifford Waite, director of Folk Schools, and Cecil Belyea, of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. Mrs. Harry Love acted as house mother, and prepared the meals for the 16 students who attended.

Delegates

Delegates representing east Hastings district Women's Institutes; Foxboro; Hazzards and River Valley Farm Forums; Ivanhoe; Cooper; Eldorado and Bannockburn Women's Institutes and Cooper Junior Institute, joined together in the busy program of discussions, singing, dramatics, public speaking, film showings, crafts, worship and recreation.

The theme of the school was "Farm Organizations in the Community," and the topics dealt with included: the Federation of Agriculture's place in furthering the farmer's interests; the marketing of farm commodities; the role of the church in the community and the importance of public speaking and conducting of meetings in the development of future leaders. An instructive tour was made of the Eldorado Cheese and Butter factory Co-Operative.

Made Recordings

Phil Flagler, of CJBQ, Belleville, farm commentator made recordings of some of the activities including folk games and songs; and reports on the discussions of art, culture, snow sculpture, music appreciation and hobbies. These recordings were played on the air during the week. On the final evening, Monday, the school went to Hazzards' Orange Hall to meet with the local Farm Forum group. A delightful evening was shared during which the Folk School students gave reports summarizing the activities of the school.

A skit "Zanibar, the Master Musician" was put on by Clifford Waite who also gave a serious talk on the work of Frontier College.

Ron Longwell, chairman of the Hastings county folk school committee gave an evaluation of the school in which he pointed out how much this school has been thoroughly appreciated by all who attended. It was felt that other schools would be desirable and that they should be of longer duration.

Allen Ketcheson and Philo Harris both moved votes of thanks in appreciation for the games and songs led by the school members in which all present heartily joined. Bountiful refreshments were served by the ladies of the forum.

Woman Meets Success Selling Big Machinery

Calgary. (CP) —Selling heavy machinery and earth-moving equipment to tough-talking engineers and foremen on construction jobs is something that had always been left to the men, but 48-year-old Mrs. E. M. Vye proved it could be done by women—and just as well.

The pleasant, soft-spoken Calgary mother is the only known woman in North America who makes her living as a salesman of the big machines.

It all started 11 years ago when the manager of Wilkinson and McClean Ltd., realized he would need women in his firm to replace the men going into the armed services. He didn't think he could get anybody to sell equipment, so he advertised for a woman who could at least keep in contact with the firm's customers.

Mrs. Vye successfully applied for the job and set about keeping relations good between company and client. Perhaps even to her own surprise, she found herself studying the business and graduating to the sales class.

Since that time she has sold hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of equipment and is one of the firm's most valued representatives.

Mrs. Vye, a widow, took the job in the first place to support herself and her daughter. Now her daughter has married, Mrs. Vye herself is married again, but the machinery business is in her blood.

Making good in a man's world didn't come easy for Mrs. Vye.

"The fact that I was a female was one of the toughest hurdles to overcome," she says. "Engineers and others I had dealings with made no particular attempt to be chivalrous and it was hard to convince them I had as much to offer as any other salesman."

As for selling technique, she gives this pointer:

"What I don't know I admit I don't know. Then I try to find out."

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH,

Marmora.—With a good and representative attendance of the congregation, St. Paul's Church annual vestry meeting was held in the Parish Hall on Monday evening with the rector, Canon J. M. Brownlie, presiding.

After the meeting had been opened with prayer, C. R. Whittemore, was asked to assume secretarial duties for the evening.

In his report, the rector eulogized church officers and organizations for their part in seeing the parish through another prosperous year.

Memorial Gifts

He referred to memorial gifts for the interior of the church and interior improvements which had been made to the rectory. He conducted 17 burials, baptized 12 and prepared 12 candidates, nine of whom were adults, for confirmation and performed one wedding ceremony.

The auditors' report read by A. Pordham, was accepted.

G. Kerr touched upon the general fund which showed receipts to be well over $3,000.

D. Robertson, in his report as Missions' treasurer, showed receipts to be $369, the greater portion of which, went to the clerk of Synod, to fully meet the apportionment.

Exclusive of its Deloro group, the Ladies' Guild, through Mrs. W. D. Lavender, reported over $1,200 being raised with about half being allocated to the Parish Fund and other pressing needs being met, leaving a creditable balance on hand.

Parochial Needs

Deloro Group's report was given by Mrs. A. Pordham. Their financial receipts reached a total of over $300. Most of this was allocated to parochial needs.

A vote of thanks was tendered the Guild as a whole.

Mrs. J. M. Brownlie followed with the report of the Woman's Auxiliary. Over $100 were raised, the pledge met and other objectives attained thereby.

W. J. Cottrell, speaking on behalf of the Organ fund, disclosed that its cost had been fully met with a balance on hand and other payments due. Although no increase in membership could be reported, the financial statement of the Sunday School compared well with former years.

Besides the annual current expenses $25 was granted to Missions and $10 to the Organ fund, with a creditable balance still on hand. This was given by Mrs. W. D. Lavender.

Canon Brownlie gave the final report, it being the flower fund.

A motion was passed that the wardens and vestry clerk bring in a slate of sidesmen to constitute the sidesmen's body for 1952. A few matters in connection with parochial affairs were discussed and later action taken on them before the vestry was closed with the benediction by the rector.

The ladies then served refreshments.

Quebec Snowshoers Revel In Parades, Cold No Deterrent

Quebec. (CP) — Parades are nothing unusual for this old capital where fife, drum and trumpet are brought out for any kind of celebration. But for this one, Quebecers craned their necks out of windows when the rat-tat-tat of drums sounded.

It seemed unbelievable that any brass band would be out in the late January cold. The thermometer hovered near zero.

Then they saw the reason.

Oddly-dressed men and women —nearly 200 strong—were marching up a zigzagging hill. They were the raquetteurs (snowshoe runners) going to a district meeting. Four bands blocked traffic for about five minutes.

Warmly Dressed

Drum majorettes in short skirts led each band, but they wore long woollen stockings to ward off the biting cold. Even a little girl, no more than three feet tall, took part in the pageant.

For the snowshoers it was just another casual walk to their meeting place. For Quebecers it was just another parade and they quickly slammed windows shut.

The raquetteurs are still to be found in Quebec province, holding winter competition over country fields covered by several feet of snow, and the old-time snowshoe that looks like an oversize tennis racket still hangs in many a French-Canadian home. Groups in Quebec city, at every opportunity, don the old costumes of coureurs de bois and file out in parade.

The raquetteur wears the old style tuque—a woollen cone the size of a 10-pound paper bag that tapers to a "pompom" (stringy wool tuft).

Colorful Garb

A red scarf tight around his neck, he carries a heavy-wool topcoat reaching down to mid-thigh, wears woollen pants and red stockings. Indian-type mocassins are a favorite with the expert snowshoer. The coats are of different colors, but best-loved are those in white or dark grey.

Of course, a snowshoer would not feel well-dressed unless a long ceinture flechee (sash) adorned his waist. The red again is preferred, but many a hardy raquetteur will boast of his multi-colored ceinture flechee.

Quebecers have more than their share of parades.

Many a convention in the old capital means a parade. The same applies for the stag party of a future bridegroom, the winner of a political appointment, the return of long-lost relatives and many other occasions.

The real pageants when nearly the entire population lines the streets are the Santa Claus and the St. Jean Baptiste Day parades, the latter on June 24 in honor of French-Canada's patron saint.

Aussie Lotteries Provide Millions in State Revenue

Sydney, Australia. (CP)—Lotteries are a thriving business in Australia.

With this in mind some Sydney university senators have suggested that a lottery would help to reduce the institution's £250,000 deficit this year. Much as the senate liked the idea of raising money, it decided a lottery would be "too undignified" for the oldest seat of learning in this part of the world.

But no such considerations of dignity surround the New South Wales government's best paying business, which in 22 years of lotteries has made a profit of about £22,000,000.

Most of this comes from Sydney people, of course, but there's a steady flow of money from many countries, particularly Canada. Last October a ticket in the name of Frank Ernest Matthews, of Vancouver, won a prize in the lottery, but he had been killed in a traffic accident five weeks before.

The New South Wales Lottery Office is Australia's biggest single gambling organization. It is devoted to satisfying one of the average Australian's greatest loves —gambling—and neither advertises nor pays incomes tax. The state government started it in the 1930's during the depression to raise money. The profits go straight into consolidated revenue.

Almost every day of the year, except Sundays, there's a lottery drawing, and for each drawing there are 100,000 tickets. Each costs 5/6, for a first prize of £6,000. Every week or so there is a special lottery, with 10-shilling tickets and a first prize of £12,000. Hundreds of agents all over Australia handle tickets, and in Sydney their runners wait outside the lottery office at 4 a.m. to be first in line when the doors open at 9 a.m.

As each numbered marble is drawn out of the barrel girls start preparing cheques so that all prizes are ready soon after the drawing is finished.

Statistician N. G. Pope says "lotteries are held in just about every country under the sun, but for head of population I reckon we 'eat' other people's figures." After looking at the winning figures for years, he still doesn't hold out any hope of a winning system. Exactly as many numbers below 50,000 have won prizes as have numbers above 50,000. Number 11 is the lowest number to win first prize, but number 1 has won several smaller prizes. Eighteen numbers have won first prizes more than once.

Some workers in the lottery office buy tickets regularly but Marcus S. Quinlin, director of state lotteries,—is not one of them.

'It would never do for me to win first prize," he says.

G. I. A. Honors Mr., Mrs. R.P. Orne

An enjoyable party was held in the Engineers' Hall, Pine Street, on Tuesday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Orne, who recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. About 100 friends neighbors and Sisters of the G.I.A. assembled.

A few games of progressive euchre were enjoyed, after which Mr. and Mrs. Orne were brought to the hall, which was beautifully decorated in gold and white, and conducted to seats of honor on the platform, where they were welcomed by the chairman of the evening, Mr. H. Drury. He congratulated them on this outstanding occasion, expressing the good wishes of those present.

Mr. Drury called on Miss Beverly Buck, who rendered two beautiful solos "Because", and "I Love You Truly", accompanied by Mrs. M. P. Duff.

The Rev. Canon J. B. Creeggan and Rev. Everett Smith, of Christ Church, each congratulated Mr. and Mrs. Orne and made mention of the pleasant association they had enjoyed with them.

The chairman then called on the president of the G.I.A., Mrs. Percy Kerr, who read an appropriate address and presented Mr. and Mrs. Orne with a lovely mirror.

Mr. and Mrs. Orne each graciously thanked those present for their kindness.

Mr. Ed. Brown contributed two appropriate solos "In a Wonderful World of Our Own", and "The Anniversary Song" accompanied by Mrs. M. P. Duff.

Miss Geraldine Jerome, who is a talented artists on the accordion entertained with several numbers, which were enjoyed by all.

Mrs. R. Orne was then asked to cut the wedding cake, which had been beautifully decorated by Mrs. E. Jerome.

Refreshments were served, consisting of fancy sandwiches, ice cream, cookies, wedding cake and coffee.

Much credit goes to the ladies of the G.I.A. for their able assistance.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her husband sent her back home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I used to live in a little one-room building behind his parents' house. We had furnished it with new furniture bought on time payments.

Well, my husband let the furniture go back, and wouldn't get us an apartment to live in. He wanted me to go back and live with my own parents and he would live with his, until our baby was born.

Now we are getting a divorce, and he wants the divorce but doesn't want me to charge him with non-support. I called up one day and asked him if he would like to drop the whole thing, get an apartment and go back together, but he won't give me a definite answer. Every time I talk to him, he keeps putting off a decision, and if I say anything he doesn't like, he tells me that he had decided to get an apartment and go back with me, but now he won't.

What do you think I should do? I would like it so much if we could live together.—Mrs. C.C.

Dear Mrs. C.C.:

No matter how much you may care about your husband and want to be with him, I'm afraid you're not going to get very far unless he changes his attitude. I don't believe you're going to be able to talk him into wanting to try again, and if you did, I doubt if things would go much better than they did before. Putting a broken marriage together again after a separation, and unless both sides are equally anxious to make it a success, there is little use in trying.

Why don't you just drop the whole thing for awhile and see what happens? Give your husband a chance to make up his mind by himself what he wants to do, without any persuasion from you. Wait a reasonable length of time and then, if he hasn't come to you himself and asked you to try again with him, I think I would go ahead with the divorce on the non-support charge, whether he likes it or not.

Don't concentrate on husband-hunting

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in my twenties, and am puzzled because I cannot seem to find any men friends my own age. I go to dances now and then, but sit out every dance, and have become very discouraged. Sometimes older men ask me for dances, but they do not appeal to me. It seems peculiar that I get along rather well with older people and generally make good impressions on them, while younger men seem to be scared away.

Could you please tell me what I can do to meet men my own age and in that way possibly find one I could admire and love enough to marry? I do not want to be an old maid.—D. J.

Dear D.J.:

It always seems to me a serious mistake—though a most natural one—for a girl to have marriage so exclusively on her mind that she is conscious of it all the time. Marriage, like almost everything else in life, comes as a result of the kind of person you are, and usually it is the girl who concentrates first of all, on being companionable with everybody, on having lots of interests so that she has a good time wherever she is and whatever she does, and on being invariably kind and thoughtful toward other people, who attracts men friends, as well as women friends. There is no quicker way to scare men off than to let them get the impression that they are being inspected as possible husbands.

The best advice I can give you is to get busy and develop some new interests that will automatically bring you in contact with young people of your own age.

You live in a large city where there should be plenty of such opportunities if you have the initiative to look for them. If you you don't know where to start, go to your local Y.W.C.A., and find out what activities they have there in which you could take part. Once you have made a beginning somewhere, one thing will lead to another if you keep your eyes open.

Food for Thought

Readers' Friday Column

QUESTION:

Happy holidays are over, turkeys are stuffed, families likewise. Now we are getting back to normal. My formal New Year's dinner is over. I have been thinking I would like to have a party. When thinking of beverages some people do not care for liquor. I thought of being a bit different by serving tea as well as sherry, etc. Then a thought came to me. Maybe an egg-nog would be a change instead of tea. Then a brainwave—how attractive an Ice Punch Bowl with egg-nog would be. There my bubble burst—ice too cold for eggs. What say you? Would you please give me a slam bang up recipe for party egg-nog?—E.C.

ANSWER:

The ice punch bowl is a novelty that creates a sensation, and is not too cold for the eggs, but needs an expert to manage it. The egg-nog would have to be extra rich to bear the dilution by melting ice, and would have to be served within an hour after it was poured into the ice punch bowl, for by that time the bowl is nearly half melted away into the canister in which it stands.

PARTY EGG-NOG

(5 pints)

Beat separately the yolks and whites of 10 or 12 large eggs. Add 3-4 cup sugar to yolks while beating, and 1-2 cup sugar to whites while beating, until stiff. To the yolks add 1 pint rich cream and 1 pint whole milk or 1 quart cream. The next ingredient you must add according to your own judgment: 1 pint double strength coffee or 1 pint pineapple juice and 1-4 cup maraschino cherry juice or 1 pint of the traditional spirits. (Write to me if you want the details.) Fold sweetened whites into the yolk mixture. Chill thoroughly. Sprinkle egg-nog in serving bowl with freshly grated nutmeg.

QUESTION:

Thank you very much for your wonderful letter. I hadn't realized I had asked for so much . . . you answered my every question and thoroughly too . . .I love to bake and try new recipes. I taught myself to bake when I was first married five years ago by reading the —— —— and following directions exactly. Pies, the pastry especially, were the hardest of all, because I hadn't ever tried it before or even watched anyone make it. So it was really hard work for me and I "sweated blood" for the first two times. Cakes were the easiest because the directions were easiest to follow and I didn't have to have any previous knowledge of it. . . cookies I placed too close together . . .and they all ran together. I think my husband put up with an awful lot, looking back. I really tried hard, though and would study a cook book as though it were a text book. (I'm a registered nurse and married right after graduating and had never had to help mother—thus my excuse for absolutely no idea of cookery.) Now I have two children—a boy four and a little girl who will be two next month, so I don't have as much time to bake all of the things I would like to try, and I usually have to limit my baking to simple, easily done things like apple and lemon pies, cookies, chocolate cake, and bran muffins. But on weekends my husband helps me make raised doughnuts, which we love and sometimes we try yeast buns, etc. Thank you for your grand recipe for the doughnuts, soft molasses cookies and Banbury tarts. I have them carefully filed,—I shall not lose these and will be using them constantly.

I especially love your column —I am filing your meat recipes and have used the one for Breaded Pork Chops. As you have probably guessed I need. . guidance in all departments of cooking. My "pork-chop cooking knowledge" consisting only of frying it. Keep the column going. After reading your letter my husband said "Sounds good." —M. B.

ANSWER:

Wonderful. I'm ever so glad. I printed this letter for the benefit of other struggling young cooks. Cooking can be fun—but a helpful husband is a wonderful blessing.

SETS RECORD

Sudbury, Feb. 1 —(CP) — Bill Ruita of Azilda, Ont., set a record for beaver skinning yesterday at the opening of the annual convention of the Ontario Trapper's Association.

Ruita, a 210 pounder with 25 years' experience in his art, peeled a lush beaver pelt in seven minutes and 40 seconds.

Among the 125 trappers here was Tommy Saville, whose Indian wife made news 40 years ago in Toronto by hacking blaze marks on telephone poles to mark her way back to her hotel.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Today's manners memo

A real meanie is the excessively-rude Miss A who gives an invitation to Miss B in front of Miss C., who is not included in the invitation.

"Dressing for the opera" has undergone tremendous change

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to New York next month, and am to attend an opera at the Metropolitan Opera House. I am to be the guest of a member of the company. Do people dress formally at every evening performance? Will you please advise me what to wear? (I am sixty years of age.) I am most anxious, of course, for everything to be just right—E. P. K.

Dress at the Metrpolitan Opera has undergone a tremendous change in the past few years, and now, except for the boxes particularly of course the parterre boxes . . . "The Golden Horseshoe" . . . informal dress is the more or less general custom. If your seat is in a box, you should wear either evening dress or dinner dress, an evening coat or fur coat—or jacket if more convenient—no hat. But if your seat is in any other part of the house, even in the orchestra circle, you will find yourself correctly dressed if you wear a simple afternoon dress or short dinner dress (either black or of a becoming shade of blue or any not-too-light shade.

(You will find that the basic black or navy-blue dress, street-length, simple of smart design, will be a great dress-fortification for you in New York, so appropriate for so many occasions . . . including post-opera or post-theatre traffic!) You will be most comfortable wearing as little headdress as possible. . . a small, small dinner hat, if you wish, or a half-hat, or an interesting bandeau, or (extremely popular at the moment) a sparkling little veil worn over the hair, most convenient because it is not only charmingly decorative and generally very becoming, but needn't be removed all evening. And wear gloves of light shade, of the length suitable to the sleeves of your dress; or, if you prefer, the very brief gloves, white or light beige. (P.S.: If you have any slightest doubt as to what your friends expects you to wear don't hesitate to ask her. . . she will be quite used to being consulted.)

The problems about children in the bridal party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our daughter is to be married soon. A church wedding. Please tell us the correct procedure for the processional, with these as members of the bridal party; maid of honor; bridesmaid; junior bridesmaid; two flower girls, about the same age and the same height; and a ring-bearer. (The ring-bearer and the junior bridesmaide are same age and the same height.)—L. L.

Not an easy processional to plan. For better balance, it would be better to have two bridesmaids. Also I particularly don't understand how the ring-bearer and the junior bridesmaid could be "of the same age", since the usual age of a junior bridesmaid is from 10 to 14 or 15, and the usual age of a ring-bearer is four to five.

The processional might be: first, the ushers, two by two; next, the junior bridesmaid, alone; the bridesmaid, alone (or, better, two bridesmaids, to walk together); the ring-bearer walking alone; the two flower girls, walking together; and last, the bride with her father. (I wish you would write me again telling me definitely the ages of the various children in the bridal party, so that I may give you more definite suggestions.)

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Reconditioning the hair

With short hair, it is not unusual for the would-be-curly girl to have four permanent waves a year. While all methods are good these days, it is wise to prepare the hair for a week before the appointment. Let it have a rest from waving. Give it a breathing spell. When the wave is flourishing and ringlets are in form, a girl is likely to forego the use of the hairbrush, is likely to give no attention to her scalp. Unless the hair receives a certain amount of grooming it will lose lustre, the attractive lights and shadows that are its chief charm.

Oily hair seldom changes under the treatment, but dry hair may become a bit crisper. It is this type of halo that especially needs toning. It takes a strong wave, if the operator is experienced and understands timing, and it may last longer than it does in soft, stringy locks. But in three months the growth will be extended an inch and a half and need trimming, so back the poor dear trots to the beautytorium to go through the hopper.

When the hair is dry, so is the scalp. Sebaceous glands have slowed up. Hence the need of lubricating.

Reconditioning lotions and ointments are to be found at cosmetic counters, but in many beauty salons a light-gravity mineral oil is used. This is recommended for home treatment because it is more easily washed away than heavier lubricants.

The treatment should be given at bedtime, so that the oil will seep into the scalp and remain on the silky shafts for an extended period. Letting oil stay on for an hour or so brings only surface benefits, merely softens the scales on the scalp. A full night of soaking will so loosen dead scales that the morning shampoo will remove them.

Begin with a rousing brushing with a brush having bristles that do not bend or soften. Treat a strand at a time, holding it away from the head and using a rolling motion of the brush.

Part the hair at various places and apply hot oil along the partings. You can use a small brush or pledgets of cotton for the purpose, but a large medicine dropper gives a wider distribution.

The next step is a brisk massage to stimulate the blood streams in the scalp. Spread out fingers and thumbs; keep the fingers stationary and do circles with the thumbs.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

These Peterborough Eagles can give their friendly enemies the Petes a boost into top spot in the senior "B" group here tonight simply by tacking a defeat on the Hawks when they clash in Memorial Arena. For the Petes eked out a 7-6 win over the "getting-stronger-all-the-time Kingston Sacs on Wednesday night and by so doing gave the Hawks the shove-over-buddy signal and at the moment are comfortably ensconced on the top perch with the Hawks.

The Eagles, who add a couple of shock troopers with every game, have won three of their last four starts and have become a powerful force in this senior "B" struggle. Kingston, likewise is putting additional fire power in the front ranks so from here in it looks like a dogfight.

The Hawks have dropped their last two encounters one to Kingston 6-5 and the other to the Eagles by an 11-3 count. Tonight they'll have to show their best wares if they want to grab back undisputed possession of first place. It should be a wing-ding of a tussle.

The plans for the senior and junior "B" Boys Tournaments have not as yet been finalized, but it is expected these two tournaments confined to schools with less than 225 boys registered, will be held in Toronto either on March 15th or one week later on March 22nd, 1952.

The annual meeting of the COSSA will be held on March 15th, 1952 in Room 104 of the Ontario College of Education. Delegates will be on hand from all four districts when President Glen Clark of Picton C. I. calls the meeting to order.

Each of the 38 rinks entered in the four-day spiel will play three games of 10 ends. The four rinks establishing the highest margin of score in three wins will play to a finalist for the Sewell trophy. No team may count more than a plus of 10 points in one victory.

A Royal Montreal entry by Mrs. J. A. Robertson, won 11-5 over Mrs. T. F. Doughty, Peterborough earlier last night.

Rocket Resumes Record Hunt, Scores Only Goal in 1-0 Win; Boston, Chicago Draw Blanks

(By The Canadian Press)

Montreal's rocketing Maurice Richard is on the way again toward the all-time scoring record of the National Hockey League.

The Rocket counted the only goal when the Canadiens blanked New York Rangers 1-0 last night before a Montreal crowd of 14,394. It was Richard's first effort after a six-game layoff because of a groin injury.

The goal, his 25th of the season was also his 317th of his N. H. L. career, only seven short of the all-time mark set by Nels Stewart of the old Montreal Maroons.

In the other game of the night, Boston Bruins took an undisputed hold on fourth place, just behind Montreal and one point ahead of New York, by tying 0-0 against Chicago Black Hawks. Canadiens' victory put them only half a game behind the second-place Toronto Maple Leafs.

Despite his six-game absence, Richard's counter put him in a tie for most goals scored with Gordie Howe of the league-leading Detroit Red Wings. However, Howe leads the loop in the scoring statistics with 47 points.

Second For McNeil

Richard was off form last night but made the most of his big opportunity midway through the final period. Taking a short pass from rookie Dickie Moore, the Rocket found a momentary loophole to drive a hard, low shot past goalie Chuck Rayner.

The lone score gave goalie Gerry McNeil his second shutout of the season.

The game at Chicago was witnessed by only 3,218 fans, an all-time low attendance for big league hockey in that city. The closest approach to a goal, in the third period, came from Woody Dumart's rap past Harry Lumley in the Chicago nets. It was disallowed because rookie defenceman Jack McIntyre was in the crease at the time.

Only four penalties were called, two to each side. Lumley made 22 saves against 25 for Jim Henry of Boston.

Henry may get more work in Saturday's struggle against Toronto Maple Leafs. Word from Toronto is that Howie Meeker, ace wingman who has been out with torn leg ligaments, may be in harness again.

Detroit takes on Montreal in other contests. Sunday Toronto meets Chicago, Montreal goes to Boston and New York visits Detroit.

Nick Mickoski Paces Mohawks In 4-2 Victory

Nick Mickoski, rangy left wing of Cincinnati Mohawks, is beginning to find his scoring eye in the American Hockey League.

Mickoski, striving to return to the parent New York Rangers of the National League, scored once and drew two assists last night as the Mohawks downed the Indianapolis Caps 4-2.

Cincinnati enjoyed a 2-0 lead going into the third period but Bert Hirschfeld and veteran Ed Bruneteau scored in less than four minutes to tie it up at 2-2.

Mickoski then set up a pair of goals for Wiggy Wyle that clinched the decision. Ian MacIntosh scored the other Cincinnati first-period goal. Mickoski led the Rangers in goal-getting last year but couldn't get started this season. At the rate he's going with Cincinnati he probably will be back in short order.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Dick Savitt bade farewell to Australia yesterday after adding new sting to the bitterness that has developed between him and the Australian tennis public.

As the towering Wimbledon champion from Orange, N.J., boarded the plane in Sydney for home with teammate Hamilton Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., reporters asked Savitt if he had anything to say regarding his stay in Australia.

"I have only one statement," the tempestuous American said. "Your newspapers stink—and you won't print that."

Savitt guessed wrong. Both the Sydney Sun and the Daily Mirror printed the statement. The Sun quoted Savitt as adding:

"The newspapers take the enjoyment out of an international visit."

The newspapers were highly critical of Savitt's deportment in the Australian championships here last week and in some of the tournaments preceding them.

Possibility of a heavyweight title match between champion Jersey Joe Walcott and Harry (Kid) Matthews appeared slim today. In Miami yesterday Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club, said he would not release Walcott from his IBC contract. "The only thing I'm interested in is Walcott's fight with Ezzard Charles, former heavyweight title-holder," he said.

Huskies Picked To Walk Off With Ski Honors

Banff, Alta., Feb. 1 (CP)—The experts are picking University of Washington Huskies to walk off with the major honors in the sixth annual international intercollegiate ski meet opening here tomorrow.

The Seattle team will vie with seven other American and two Canadian ski squads in the two-day, four-event meet. Tomorrow the competition opens with the giant slalom, followed by the cross-country racing. Sunday the downhill and jumping events will be held.

A look at the last five years makes it plain why Huskies are favored.

Won Three Times

The Washington team has won the top award three times—twice in succession—and is defending champion this year. And to make the evidence more conclusive, Huskies have competed only three times.

The University of British Columbia should draw second rating in view of its victories in the other two years.

Last year Washington took the competition's grand prize again. The team boasted two noted skiers—Gordie Morrison of Banff a member of Canada's Olympic team this year, and Christian Mohn, F.I.S. world championship jumper.

So from the entry of 10 it appears Washington is the odds-on favorite.

The other nine are state college of Washington, Pullman; University of British Columbia, Vancouver; Montana State College, Bozeman; Wenatchee Junior College, Wenatchee, Wash.; Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash.; College of Puget Sound, Tacoma, Wash.; Montana State University, Missoula; University of Portland, Portland, Ore.; and the University of Alberta, Edmonton.

Alberta plays host to the meet under the direction of Normie Rault of Edmonton.

Kingston Has Chance To Win Trophies

(By The Canadian Press)

Kingston was the only city to emerge today with a chance of winning both of Ontario's top curling trophies—the Ontario Tankard and the Governor-General's trophy. Oshawa, which took both trophies last year, dropped out in earlier rounds of the double rink competition.

Curling enthusiasts converge on Toronto today for the semi-finals and finals. Yesterday Toronto, Oshawa and Guelph clubs played host to quarter-finalists.

Salem, Ore., Jan. 31—(AP)—A convict in the state penitentiary asked the state tax commission yesterday whether he had an income tax refund coming. He listed three names and said he had paid taxes—and served time — under each. Commissioner Ray Smith said he'd look it up.

The Great Casey (Stengel) Speaks; Subject--1952 Yankees Prospects

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Feb. 1—(AP)—In the firm belief that any complete sentences uttered by Casey Stengel deserve to be passed along to baseball fans, we are happy to present a selection of the famous manager's observations during his first press conference of the 1952 season.

There may be instances in which the reader will not be too sure what Casey is talking about and will wish that the pilot of the world champion Yanks might have taken his hand away from his mouth while speaking, but think nothing of it. That is one of the professor's principal charms. We give you him:

"Now these fellows I've got, every club is asking about them, but I won't give up five players for any one player. These boys I've got they can hit that ball over your head and they want in.

"These kind of players, the club's got 'em and I'm selfish and don't want to give 'em up. We win this here pennant, so why should we trade? Strangers sometimes annoy you. Sure, I get anxious to get that fellow Garver (Ned Garver, St. Louis Browns pitcher) last year, but I had to change my mind about giving up too many players.

"They keep saying I'm bringing 'em along too fast, these young fellows. How about Mantle and McDougald and Morgan? They didn't hurt us too much last year did they? How about that Branch Rickey, he's bringing 'em along at Pittsburgh, isn't he? He'd better.

"'Who's going to take Joe DiMaggio's place in centrefield? Why, somebody ought to be able to catch a ball out there. All he's got to do is keep running until he gets to the ball. That's all that fellow with the Giants (Willie Mays, presumably) did, wasn't it. I hear he did pretty good.

"Maybe I'll have to put Gene Woodling out there, but I'd rather keep him in left. Nobody in the league can play left field at the stadium like he does. If I could tell you how good Mantle's leg is going to be maybe I could tell you whether we'll win another pennant. But I don't know and neither do you.

"Tell you one thing, I've got the best third baseman in the league. Fellow named Joe Collins. Only ones I put above him are Fannin of the Athletics and Robinson of the White Sox. Luke Easter? He was crippled last year. He was a liability to Cleveland. If his leg's well, that changes the picture, we'll put him third.

"Don't ask me what's going to be my lineup. I can't even tell you during the season. How do you know I'm going to lose Jerry Coleman and Bobby Brown? Maybe Coleman won't be able to pass that marine examination. Sometimes you can't pass an examination after four or five years.

Good Pitching

"I'll have good pitching. Some of 'em will be a year older is all. Allie Reynolds is going to be all right. His arm is only swollen up about twice its normal size now. That's a fine sign. I've never seen a club that had too many pitchers.

"Cleveland should be the club to beat. They finished second last year, didn't they, and they haven't lost anybody. The White Sox should be better. Boston, they've got a lot of problems if they lose Williams and Stephens both. But maybe Williams won't pass that examination either.

"Yes, we've been having a little rain out in Glendale. Fact is, it's the most damn rain we ever had. When a man walks in the house he doesn't look for his wife, he looks up to see is the ceiling's leaking. If it aint leaking everything's all right."

Glen Roys Tie For Top Spot; Nip Flyers 46-32

Glen Roys basketballers swept into a tie for first place with Peterborough Marines in the Bay of Quinte Basketball League here last night when they decisively defeated the Trenton RCAF Flyers by a 46-32 score.

Both teams have one game left. Marines are scheduled to meet Flyers with the Glens taking on Picton Athletics.

The Glens left no doubt to their superiority last night although the game was a hard-fought affair. They grabbed a commanding 22-9 lead at the half and outscored the air crew 24-23 in the second period.

Junkin, Flyers star, again turned in a scintillating performance. His defence work was outstanding and he was the stumbling block to not a few potential Glen scores. Offensively he was the best man on the floor accounting for 18 of the Flyers 32 points.

John Batchellor turned in a fine job for the Glens going both ways. He racked up 16 points to lead the scoring with Muirhead clicking for eight and Ketcheson six. Dube got eight for Flyers.

"Kip" Summers star guard of the Glens was carried from the floor with a leg injury in the first half. The extent of his injuries was not known at time of writing.

Teams:—

Belleville — Page 2, Lockyer 3, Summers 2, Muirhead 8, Watson 3, Dudley, Batchellor 16, Kane, Ketcheson 6, Garrow 2, Soules 2.

RCAF — Watson 4, O'Hara 2, Dube 8, Stadel, Junkin 18, Campbell, Blythe.

Minor Hockey Leagues Scores

Close, hard-fought games featured the doubleheader of the Belleville Hockey Association juvenile league last night with Glen Roys and the Police Department hooking up in a two-all tie duel and Belleville Locks edging the Belle Cleaners by a 3-2 score.

In the Midget League twin bill the Big "A" team downed Canadian Tire by a 5-1 count while Quinte Battery and Moose Lodge battled to a one-all draw.

Vesterfelt starred for the Big "A" squad in their victory over Canadian Tire scoring three goals and assisting in another. Buskard and Farnsworth accounted for the others. Woods was the lone sniper for the Tire boys.

Jackson got the Quinte Battery's lone goal unassisted with Milligan scoring for Moose. Parks and Noakes drew assists on the play.

Goyer picked up two scoring points in the Glen Roys' two-all tie with Police in the juvenile league, scoring one and assisting Bovay to get the other. Bellinger also drew an assist on Bovay's goal. Myers fired home both Police Department scores with Burrows getting a helper on one of them.

Cook fired home a pair for the Belleville Locks with Cameron getting the other. Barker and Philip got assists. Canning and Casey scored for the Cleaners with Stollicker and Nelson being credited with helpers.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Partners negotiate for their common good. No player in his right mind should refuse to cooperate with his partner. There is no excuse for the double-cross between a pair.

When you double for takeout you are negotiating for a bid from your partner. If no bid intervenes, you are forcing him to make a bid of some kind; regardless of how weak his hand.

There was the deal you see here:

NORTH
♠Q 5
♥10 9
♦10 7 6 3 2
♣J 10 8 6

WEST	EAST
♠A K 10 6 3	♠8 7 4 2
♥J	♥7 6 5 3
♦K J 9	♦8 5 4
♣A Q 7 3	♣9 5

SOUTH
♠J 9
♥A K Q 8 4 2
♦A Q
♣K 4 2

South started with an opening bid of one heart. West doubled for a takeout. North passed. East must now bid something. Instead, this east looked at his bunch of rags and passed.

East stoutly tried to defend his pass. He said there was no use getting into trouble by making a bid with his worthless hand. He said there was not much harm in letting south make one heart doubled.

Not much harm, he said. South made his one heart doubled and two extra tricks for a score of 460. Any bid by east that would have been defeated would not lose that much for his side.

East should have bid one spade. West would or could have gone to four spades which would have made for a score of 620. So, east lost 1080 points by his pass. A big swing.

The reason for the double is to find out in which suit east has the most cards; preferably in some unbid major. Doubler says he can take care of the situation with such information.

If west had not doubled he would have bid. So, any bid that east makes would be no worse. Even with nothing in east their loss will be small. Or less than opponents could have made.

So, what is east afraid of? Going down a trick or two that would have happened to his partner anyway? Even this is not as bad as pulling the double-cross.

Tweed Juveniles Lose to Madoc

Tweed — In a free-scoring game in Madoc Tuesday night, the Tweed Juveniles lost 15-9. Tweed played without their regular goalie Don LePage.

B. Hunter played between the pipes the first and second periods and R. Geraldi finished the game.

Madoc grabbed a 6-1 first period lead. They made it 12-4 in the second. Tweed got started in the third period but were too far behind.

The play was almost even and the difference in goalies made the game.

Grant MacMillan led Tweed with three goals. The others were scored by Fisher, with two, Countryman, Whalen, Larkin and Hunter.

TO BELLEVILLE!

AT THE BELLE — Musical and romantic. The second feature Saturday matinee is "Eldorado Pass."

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 1 (AP)—Joan Fontaine, who became a single woman this week, says she won't marry again—until she gives up her career.

Her divorce from film producer William Dozier became final this week. She was formerly divorced from actor Brian Aherne. Now that she again has no martial ties, she intends to stay that way. For the present, at least.

"I've tried it twice, and it just doesn't work," she said. "It's too tough trying to lead the double life as a film actress and wife. You can't do a good job of both.

"Goodness knows, I tried. But I think it's virtually impossible for the right kind of man to be married to a movie star. Even though he has steeled himeslf against it something happens to a man when he steps off a train and someone says, "step right this way, Mr. Fontaine."

"That hurts. Any man with self-respect can't take it, and I wouldn't want to marry the other kind. It's also tough for a man to watch all the flowers arrive for his wife, and the phone calls and the attention she gets. It's hard for him to see his wife off to work at 6 in the morning and have her come home after dark, too tired even to talk to him."

Absences Hurt

The absences are too much of a strain on a husband, she added. During the last year or two, she made a picture in Italy, another in England, made a goodwill tour of South Africa, attended film premieres in Washington and San Francisco—and visited other United States cities for the film industry drives.

I asked when she would be willing to give up her career in order to provide a father for her two daughters (Debbie, 3, and Martita, 6, adopted in Peru.)

"Probably when I find the right man," she smiled.

Sunday School Lesson of the Week

Successful Sinners

By ROY L. SMITH

A man is never in a more dangerous position than when he becomes a successful sinner. His success blinds him to the fact of his sin.

The gangster who makes money finds it hard to believe he is a gangster; his money keeps telling him he is a successful business man.

The politician who accepts a bribe and gets away with it is deluded into thinking he has earned the graft-money by "serving the public."

The man of dubious morals who is selected to office by a big majority is apt to assume that the voice of the people is the voice of God and thereafter he forgets all about morals.

A Boorish Host

On one occasion Jesus of Nazareth was invited as the honor guest at a dinner tendered Him by a rich and prominent citizen. The host seemed to have had the hope that, by entertaining the popular teacher, he might attract a little attention to himself.

> The Uniform Sunday School lesson for Feb. 3: "A Pharisee and a Repentant Woman." Luke 7:36-50.

He betrayed his own crudeness, however, when he failed to extend the ordinary courtesies of the time. He probably thought Jesus was a yokel who would consider it an honor to sit at his table, and would not be aware of the social usages which prevailed at good dinner tables.

With fine gentility Jesus reminded him of his boorishness and made him appear to be exactly what he was—a fourflusher!

A Nameless Woman

The informality of the East made it possible for a woman of the street to get to Jesus' side, and there perform a very beautiful act of adoration which outraged the smug and crude host.

There are those who have tried to make it appear that Mary of Magdala was the woman in the case, but there is nothing in the scripture to support the argument. In fact, nowhere in the New Testament is there any word whatever indicating that she was in any sense a woman of ill repute. To charge her with being a person of easy virtue is utterly unjust.

But whoever the woman was at least this much must be said for her—she was under no delusions concerning herself. She knew herself for exactly what she was, and that was the beginning of her redemption.

Telling Ourselves the Truth

Nothing is more difficult than telling ourselves the truth about ourselves. Very few of us are willing to call ourselves sinners; most of us listen eagerly to the preacher who tells us that we are victims of a system or of circumstances.

There can never be any real redempiton of life, either for the individual, the nation, or society, until we are willing to tell ourselves the truth about ourselves.

It must have been a terrible experience when the woman finally said to herself, in profound shame and humiliation, "I am a harlot." But the moment she did she was well started on her way back.

There is a great danger that, in fighting communism, we will be blind to the sins which flourish unrebuked under our democratic system. Even the righteous need to come under conviction occasionally.

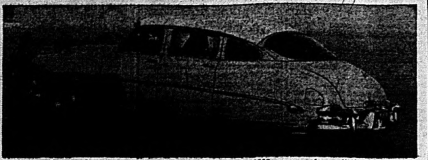
Hudson Announces New Cars for 1952



Hudson Motors of Canada Limited announced its new 1952 cars — four distinctive lines, the Hudson Hornet; a new model, the Hornet's lower priced running mate, the Hudson Wasp; the Commodore and the Pacemaker. They feature new Hudson-Aire Hardtop Styling at standard sedan and coupe prices and will be displayed to the public in dealers' showrooms in February.

Hudson's exclusive "step-down" design permits new streamlining and beauty, with styling which heretofore has been confined to premium-priced models.

The Hornet series is powered by the H-145 engine. The Commodore series is available with a choice of 127 horsepower six-cylinder or 128 horsepower eight-cylinder engine. Both lines are available in six-passenger coupes, sedans, convertibles and the Hudson Hollywood.

The Hudson Wasp series is powered by H-127 six-cylinder engine and is available in six-passenger coupes, sedans, broughams, convertibles and the Hudson Hollywood.

The Pacemaker has a 112 horsepower engine and is available in six-passenger coupes, sedans, broughams and business coupes.

The Hornet and Commodore series have an overall length of 208 15/32 inches and a wheelbase of 124 inches. The Wasp and Pacemaker series have an overall length of 201½ inches and wheelbase of 119 inches. The Hornet and Commodore Custom have an overall width of 77¾ inches. The Wasp and Pacemaker have a width of 77 1/16 inches.

Wants to Know Why He Was Not Paid in Army

Detroit, Feb. 1 (AP)— Young Riccardo Del Vecchio hopes to get some word by noon today on whether and when the United States army intends to pay him $1,297 he claims due him in pay while he was fighting in Korea and getting his feet frozen.

The army's finance centre in St. Louis has been ordered to file a report in Washington by noon today on why Del Vecchio, a Second World War veteran, who has been home from Korea four months now —without any pay, there or here.

"You wonder," he muses, "how the army—where you sign everything 20 times—could lose track of a guy. It is a good thing there were free cigarets and candy bars in Korea. . .

"We were fighting and freezing, but whenever payday rolled around I was the little guy who wasn't there. I didn't get paid. I've been trying since I got home, filling out forms, signing forms, on and on. But I haven't got my pay or my disability pension, either."

Neighbors Rally To Aid Family Homeless by Fire

Picton — Neighbors and friends are rallying to assist Mr. and Mrs. Bertie Carter and their eight young children, who lost all their possessions when fire destroyed their home at Bethesda, near the village of Demorestville, Wednesday night.

Collections of donations were started yesterday in the communities nearby and in Picton. A community shower is being held in Bethesda hall, Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter and their children, all less than 13 years of age, were visiting his brother, Kenneth Carter in Ameliasburgh township, when the fire totally destroyed their home. Fire seems to dog the family as Ken Carter lost his barn and considerable livestock, by fire, two years ago.

The fire was first noticed by Donald Breakenridge, who was passing. The front part of the house was then ablaze. By the time neighbors had been aroused, it was impossible to carry out more than a few articles from the kitchen. Little insurance was carried on the house and coontents.

Dr. Logan's Wife

By Diana Gaines

"Civic unity?" Jennet echoed weakely.

"Well, by that I mean ways of bettering the lot of the minorities, lending a hand to the persecuted."

"You sound very bitter."

He sighed. "Yes, I guess I do I had a bad time last month over that loyalty oath. I spoke out against it, got pretty excited, stepped on a few egos, and since then I've felt the cold shoulder from a lot of the men who used to be friendly. Except for Pelletier, I'm not sure I have a friend on the staff." He dug into his eyes with thumb and forefinger. "I don't know. Maybe I'm just being paranoid."

"No, I don't think you are," Jennet ventured to say, wanting to warn him, yet not daring to betray Gus's confidence. "It seems to me I've heard bits of gossip— in the lunchroom and around. Why don't you go up and talk to the superintendent? Tell him you made a mistake and you're sorry about it."

"Are you kidding?" he said sharply. His eyes were hard and cold, the color of nickels. "I'm not on their side. Men like Maxwell Cota scare me. All he cares about is protecting his real-estate investments. I know all about his holdings from Fred, this friend of mine who's speaking tonight. Cota is one of the most ruthless absentee landlords in this city. He's making money from human misery. And that scares me."

"All right, all right," Jennet said, "don't yell your head off at me, I'm not going against you. And I think Cota is sort of disagreeable myself. I don't know him well—I've just chatted with him at cocktail parties, but he does strike me as an extremely unattractive person."

The auditorium was large and cool and dim. Jennet followed Peter down the aisle, leaning backward to resist the incline which sucked at her feet. About 50 people were scattered like salt through the front rows of the vaulted hall. Jennet's quick survey of the heads told her that more than half were students, the rest, dowdy respectable oldsters of the lecture-hound variety.

Peter showed her to the front row said in a lowered voice, "you don't mind sitting way up front, do you? We can sit here on the side."

Peter mounted the steps to the platform. He leaned his elbows on the pedestal, his shoulders hunched like a cowhand at a pasture fence, and his face too—the stone-clean bones, the ruddy coloring, the hair shocked as by a wind — seemed to belong to the outdoors. The acoustics gave his deep voice an echoing ring which had theatrical value. He explained about the Banning Club for the benefit of new comers made a few references to past meetings which brought chuckles from the students.

"Homes," he said, "that's what we're going to hear about tonight. Homes. Homes in Los Angeles, our city of sunshine and palm trees and flowers— and rats. The tourist journeys from every corner of the United States to see our beautiful city. He gapes at our palm-lined boulevards, our manicured gardens, our super-markets, our sun-tanned children. But he doesn't see our slums. He doesn't know that just a few blocks from the down-town shopping district are rickety tenements, tar-paper shacks and chicken coop shanties."

Jennet sighed. It was not only going to be a bore, but unpleasant too. Of course there were slums wherever there were large cities. Did this self-righteous Quixote expect everyone there to take a broom and personally sweep them out? She began to wonder if Peter weren't a bit of a prig.

". . . some men claim there are no slums—only dirty housewives. We have with us tonight a man who disagrees. It is my privilege to introduce Mr. Fred Chaney whose fine work in the field of public housing is nationally known. Mr. Chaney."

The sound of applause was lost to the shadowy arch of the ceiling, but its beat was steady and determined. As Peter jogged down the steps of the stage another man climbed the far ones. Her eyes were on Peter—she could hear the coins jingle in his pocket as he bounced down with the loose movement of the tap-artist. Small as the pond was, he was the big fish here, and natural love of celebrity made her proud that he was coming to sit beside her. The seat creaked as he settled himself. In the dimness, she whispered "on you a soap box is becoming."

The man did not make himself at home on the rostrum as Peter had. He was short—the podium came high on his chest—and his voice had a hoarseness.

Jennet lowered her head and closed her eyes.

". . . and next door to this ramshackle three-storey building is a cowtail factory. Do you know what a cowtail factory is? It is a factory where the fresh tails of horses and cows are plucked for hairs and the hairs used for upholstery of furniture."

She was suddenly acutely embarrassed by the rumbling of her stomach.

". . . a third of a million people in Los Angeles today are penned into the same tiny dismal areas that were allotted to them before the war when their numbers were small."

The speaker talked on and she crossed her arms over her stomach, hugging the noise of it.

"Friends, I see my time is almost up. . ."

Jennet perked up. It would end, then. She squinted hard at her watch which said only a quarter to nine. Gus was not even home yet. Gus—in conference with the hospital heads not three minutes away.

Peter catapulted out of his seat at the instant of clapping. Standing in the pit at the base of the stage, he held his arms up and when there was quiet he praised the speech and vouched for its accuracy. Then he beckoned to the speaker who had resumed his seat and who now came to stand alongside of Peter.

"Who's first with a question?" Peter invited, his arms up again, and there was a show of hands Something in the evangelical abandon of Peter's pose and the crowd's response of fluttering extremities snapped the last thread of Jennet's endurance. She got up and left the hall.

Some two hours later, Gus Logan and Walter Pelletier followed the same path through the campus up Sunset, north on Whiteoaks. The car pulled up to the Logan house, its motor idling while the men continued to talk.

"What gets me" said Pelletier is that they put it to the end thinking to get home and they'd railroad it through. Those meetings are always so long and deadly. By the time you've listened to the minutes and the committee reports and the special business letters and gone over each of the applications for new staff appointments, you're punchy. You're willing to say uncle to anything that stands between you and bed."

"That's no lie." Gus' face under the coachlight shifted its geometrical patches. "But Walter they had it figured closer than that. Did Cota sound you out on this thing?"

"No, why would he? He knows how I feel about Peter Surinov. Peter's one of my boys. I hired him and I've stood behind him on everything—even his quarrel with the oath. Remember, I was the only committee member who voted against it. I'm willing to admit that the country needs some check on subversion, but mandatory oaths and unenforceable bills are not the answer."

Baby Sitter Faces Charge of Murder In Infant Slaying

Blood-Stained Beer Bottle Found Beside Tied Child

Toronto, Feb. 2 (CP)—Charged with the beer-bottle slaying of three-year-old Susan Kellough, baby-sitter Diane Bound, 22, will appear in court today.

The slim, freckle-faced blonde was arrested yesterday shortly after the discovery of the battered body of the child in her suburban Scarborough Township home. She had been tied to the four corners of her crib in a spread-eagle position and bludgeoned to death.

Near the body was a note which said in part: "If I can't have children, neither can you."

Susan was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Roy Kellough. The Kellough's younger daughter, Penny Ann, 11 months, was found asleep and unharmed beneath the cellar stairs.

Taken at Friend's Home

Miss Bound was arrested at the home of friends in suburban East York. Police said her friends became suspicious because she had been drinking and they knew she was taking care of the Kellough children while the father and mother worked. Mrs. Kellough was telephoned and called her next-door neighbor to see if her children were all right.

The neighbor slipped a catch on a window and crawled inside. He found Susan lying tied up in a pool of blood. Tangled on the livingroom chesterfield were papers and books. In their midst was a blood-stained beer bottle.

A neighbor said yesterday was to have been Mrs. Kellough's last day of work. The couple had planned to work until they could pay for decorating two upstairs rooms.

Miss Bound, born in Timmins, Ont., is the first woman to be charged with murder in Scarborough Township history.

Surrenders Life In Order to Help Fellow Workmen

Sarnia, Feb. 2—(CP)—A man who offered his life on the beach at Dieppe and again in Normandy surrendered it Thursday in a vain attempt to bring help to fellow workmen at Froomfield.

Pat Thompson, 31-year-old veteran of the 11th Field Squadron, R.C.E., was not working with two others who lost their lives in a flash fire at the Canadian Oil Refinery construction job.

Official reports yesterday disclosed he deliberately entered the blazing heater unit and made his way down through flame and smoke to do what he could for the men trapped inside.

The story of his heroism can never be fully told, for those he gave his life to help also perished in the flames.

It is known, however, that moments before the blast, he was working alone on the outside platform at the top of the 65-foot atmospheric heater unit.

Whether he heard the cries of the men caught in the fire inside, or merely knew they were in need of help, is not known.

There is no doubt, however, that he entered a door at the top of the unit, climbed 25 feet down a vertical steel ladder, and jumped and climbed down a further 15 feet to the blazing wooden platform from below, Thompson was lying face down on the charred planks.

Three of 50 MIGs Engaged Damaged in 30-Minute Fight

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 2 (AP) — Eighteen United States F-86 Sabre jets damaged three of 50 MIG-15 jets today in a 30-minute air battle over northwest Korea.

The sky fight, ranging from 40,000 down to 30,000 feet, was fought over a 40-mile area near Sinuiju.

The Fifth Air Force made no report of any Sabre losses.

Earlier, a flight of Sabres sighted about 50 MIGS and exchanged firing passes but made no damage claims.

On the ground, a tank-supported Allied patrol clashed briefly Saturday with reds on the central front in an otherwise quiet war.

Eighth Army headquarters said the patrol engaged a red platoon northwest of Kumhwa and later was reinforced by tanks. The Allied infantry elements withdrew under cover of the tank fire.

There was no report of any major ground action Saturday. The Fifth Air Force said it lost 14 planes in the week ended Friday—two below the seven-day record. Thirteen were destroyed by improving red ground firing, the 14th., a Sabre jet, crashed after a mechanical failure.

During the same week, Allied jet fighters destroyed one MIG and damaged two. There were no Allied losses in air battles.

There was only limited action across the 155-mile ground front Friday. Snow flurries limited observation for the few patrols that ventured out of their lines.

Allied warships continued harrassing and blocking activities on both coasts.

Last Child Drowns

Warwick, N. Y., Feb. 2 — (AP) — The last of John Langlitz's four children — all of whom died violently — met her death yesterday.

She was Jean, 10, who was drowned when she fell through ice in a small pond.

A playmate, Frances Fatima, 9, also fell into the water. Both girls were pulled out by Mrs. Robert Wright but only Frances survived

A two-year-old Langlitz child fell into a well several years ago.

A daughter was struck and killed by a car in 1946.

In 1950 a son was killed in action in Korea.

Subdues Pilot

New Delhi, India, Feb. 2 (AP) —Thirteen irate airline passengers subdued their pilot who became drunk in flight and tied him in a seat to permit the co-pilot to make an emergency landing at Nagpur, a civil aeronautics spokesman reported today.

The passengers, nine of them foreigners, handed the pilot over to police after the Nagpur landing. The spokesman said his pilot's licence was suspended.

He said the flier, a hefty Australian, was enticed from the plane's control cabin— after he permitted the plane to fall practically uncontrolled from 10,000 to 4,000 feet—on the promise of another drink."

Allies Reject Communist Request To Restrict Behind-Line Inspection

By ROBERT B. TUCKMAN

Munsan, Korea, Feb. 2—(AP)—Allied negotiators today rejected a communist proposal to restrict behind-the-line inspections during a Korean truce to three communist and three U.N. ports of entry.

The Allies have proposed inspections at 12 ports of entry on each side.

Col. Don. O. Darrow, senior Allied staff officer said the whole problem still is under study. He gave no hint whether the Allies might agree to inspections at fewer than 12 points behind the red lines.

For the second straight day the reds did not answer a United Nations proposal to start work immediately on the final item of the armistice agenda — recommendations to belligerent governments.

This would permit discussion of a favorite communist topic—withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea.

The reds also would not name the three neutral nations they want to represent them on neutral inspection teams. The U.N. has chosen Norway, Sweden and Switzerland.

The staff officers completed a second reading of the U.N. blueprint for policing an armistice and agreed on a number of minor changes.

Several points remained in dispute, however, and Brig.-Gen. William P. Nuchols, official U.N. spokesman, said "tomorrow they will get to the meat of the differences."

The staff officers aren't even discussing the key issue of whether the reds may build airfields during an armistice.

The staff officers also were unable to agree which side should hold five islands off western Korea. The U.N. has agreed to withdraw from most North Korean coastal islands. It wants to retain five which lie south of Parallel 38 but north of the line which probably would divide north and south Korea during an armistice.

Rear-Admiral R. E. Libby said the joint sub-committee working on prisoner of war exchange "made absolutely no progress of any sort."

Both the prisoner sub-committee and the staff officers discussing truce supervision will meet at 11 a.m. Sunday in Panmunjom.

THREE KILLED WHEN TRANSPORT TOPPLES ON AUTO

Truck Swerved to Miss Car Out of Sideroad

Hamilton, Feb. 2 (CP) —A birthday party turned into tragedy last night when three members of the group were crushed to death by a transport truck that toppled over on their automobile.

Four others were taken to Hamilton General Hospital. Early today their condition was described as "poor."

Killed were: Andrew Alderson, 53, of Hamilton and two teen-aged girls identified only as Dolores and Lois. In hospital are Beverley Alderson, 16; Marvin Bevan, 16, Ronald Zurda, 15 and Ralph Younger, 16, the driver. All were believed from Hamilton.

Killed were: Andrew Alderson, 53, Ronald Burda, 15, and Lois Hackensen. In hospital are Beverley Alderson, 16; Marvin Bevan, 16 Roy Younger, 16, the driver, and Delores Jardine. All were believed from Hamilton.

Beverley was due to celebrate her 16th birthday at a party in Burlington. Her mother was in a preceding car with other guests and did not learn of the accident until afterward.

The accident occurred near Wolfe Island, two miles west of here, when a huge highway transport swerved to miss a car driven out of a sideroad, and toppled on top of the sedan carrying the party of seven.

It took more than one hour and 20 persons unloading the truck and lifting it before the last two victims were freed from the automobile, crushed down to within two feet of the road.

Thed river of the truck, Maurice McArthur, of (R.R. No. 1) St. Thomas, was unhurt. He said he pulled out to avoid the old car coming out of the sideroad.

"I shot across to avoid him," he said. "I swerved it on purpose to prevent it turning over, but one front wheel locked and she tipped."

The truck engine caught fire. The blaze was put out by Doug Swire, son of the owner of a nearby motel, who dashed out with an extinguisher.

"It was awful," he said. "I could hear the trapped people escreom hear the trapped people screaming but there was nothing I could do."

Five-Day Hearing Is Concluded

Toronto, Feb. 2—(CP)—A five-day hearing into the estate of the late publisher of the Toronto Daily Star, Joseph E. Atkinson, concluded yesterday.

A. S. Marriott, senior master of the Ontario Supreme Court, will report to the Ontario Court of Appeal, which directed that the review be made. The Appellate Court asked further particulars of $375,000 charged against the estate by the National Trust Company for services as its executor.

The bill was appealed by the public trustee, Armand Racine, on the grounds it was excessive. Mr. Marriott ruled yesterday that questions concerning the salaries of Mr. Atkinson and the directors who now operate the paper were not relevant and therefore inadmissable as evidence.

12,000 African School Children Start Royal Couple On Second Day of Tour

Nairobi, Kenya, Feb. 2 — (Reuters) — A roar of cheers from 12,000 African school children started Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh on the second day of their royal visit to Kenya today.

The children formed a kaleidoscope of color on sun-lit lawns of Government House.

The royal couple are staying with the governor of Kenya, Sir Philip Mitchell, and Lady Mitchell, until tomorrow when they leave for picturesque Sagana Lodge, 100 miles away, to spend four days. Kenya gave the lodge to Elizabeth as a wedding present.

Asian schoolgirls in white and green saris, Africans in Boy Scout and Girl Guide uniforms and Europeans in red and purple blazers formed up in ranks on the lawn to greet the royal couple.

Cheering became deafening as the princess, looking cool and smiling, and wearing a pink taffeta spotted dress with full skirt and a large bow at the neckline with matching felt hat, waved from the terrace.

The duke was wearing a single-breasted grey business suit.

The royal couple then toured Nairobi city where, since 5 a.m. this morning, native crowds have thronged the streets waving flags and bright streamers.

At a civic luncheon, she thanked the people of Kenya for their wedding gift of the lodge. "I cannot tell you how much we are looking forward to it," she said.

She and Prince Philip will spend four quiet days there before continuing their trip to Ceylon, Australia and New Zealand for the main part of the royal tour.

She also praised the work of the city fathers in hacking out a modern western city from the East African jungles.

"Only a little more than 50 years ago, about the date of my father's birth (Nairobi) was a savage place, the home of innumerable wild animals, and uninhabited except for an occasional band of nomadic herdsmen," she said.

"The contrast we see today is a striking tribute to the men and women of all races who have made it a great centre of commerce and finance, the crossroads of East Africa."

This afternoon, the royal couple are to visit Kenya's national park outside Nairobi, in the hope of seeing some of Africa's wild life roaming there free and unafraid.

The park is in its natural state. A notice at the gate says: "Lions are in this area. Do not leave your car."

Canadian Federation of Labor Told Immigrants Imported To Flood Labor Market

Hamilton, Feb. 2 (CP) —Unemployment and problems raised by immigrants trying to find work provided fertile ground for discussions today at the annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Labor (CIO-CCL).

Delegates representing an estimated 200,000 provincial workers yesterday heard their president, George Burt of Windsor, describe the present jobless situation as a "National scandal."

Mr. Burt, who also is the Canadian director of the United Auto Workers said in his keynote speech that employment has weakened the position of unions of Canada and is responsible for the increased resistance of employers to wage demands.

Jolliffe Speaks

The 350 delegates demanded that immigration be planned so that newcomers to Canada would have jobs and homes. They adopted a three-point resolution aimed at reducing employment.

They also heard E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario CCF leader, say that "anti union" forces in Ontario are "beating the drums" for a reduction in living standards for the workers, implying it is necessary because of the defence program.

Mr. Jolliffe said he would be a candidate for the leadership of the party at the CCF's next convention in April.

The federation in its resolution asked for a public works program, federal defence orders to industries operating on a reduced work week, increases of 50 percent in unemployment insurance and payments of cash relief to jobless not receiving such insurance.

Mr. Burt said the unemployment problem is so acute that it theatens the existence of trade unions. He suggested the federal government give it priority over defence efforts because a man without a job "is not receptive to talk about democracy and liberty."

Plans Ottawa Trek

He declared the federation is prepared to recommend to the Canadian Congress of Labor that it organize a national trek to Ottawa if it felt this would bring action.

One delegate Mike Fenwick, secretary of the Oshawa Labor Council, claimed the federal government is "deliberately fostering unemployment" as an answer to inflation.

In later debate on immigration, Mr. Fenwick accused the Canadian Manufacturers' Association of fostering increased immigration "to flood the country with cheap labor and rob the unions of the benefits they have built up over the years."

But Larry Sefton of Hamilton warned against blaming immigrants for unemployment, which he said was the responsibility of the government. Lack of industrial planning made immigration a problem.

"We know we need immigrants to develop the country," said Mr. Sefton, "but we have to protect ourselves by taking into account the housing situation and the availability of jobs."

Judge's Handling Gets Trial Off To Speedy Start

Los Angeles, Feb. 2—(AP)—A soft-spoken, southern-born judge with a firm hand on the legal tiller steered the trial of 15 communist party leaders off to a speedy start.

A jury of eight women and four men was chosen yesterday, cutting valuable days off a trial still expected to run three or four months.

The quick selection, courtroom observers agreed, was due largely to the way United States judge William C. Mathes cut through a maze of 305 questions which defence lawyers wanted put to the prospective jurors.

The five-man defence staff — not including William Schneiderman, alleged acting party chief who is defending himself—gave up challenging members of the panel after 47 persons were questioned. By then, defence and prosecution attorneys had agreed on the jury of 12, plus four alternates.

Judge Mathes, 52, in quiet, measured tones, asked each prospective juror:

"Can you lay aside any prejudice and sit with impartiality? If you were a defendant, would you be willing to be tried by a jury composed of people in the same frame of mind as you?

He told them constantly:

"The law holds that membership or even holding an office in the communist party is not a violation of the law. It all boils down to this: would any of you jump to the conclusion the defendants are guilty just because they are members of the communist party?"

The defendants, all Californians,, are charged with conspiring to teach and advocate violent overthrow of the government. The maximum penalty under the act is 10 years in prison and $10,000 fine.

The grand jury indictment links them with 11 national party heads convicted in a New York trial in 1949.

The prosecution will open its case Tuesday.

OFFICERS AND MEN

Ottawa, Feb. 2 (CP) — The army has officially dropped the term "other ranks" under regulations implemented to carry out the provisions of the Defence Act passed in 1950 by parliament.

The personnel of the army used to be broken down into two categories, officers and other ranks. From now on, it is officers and men.

RYAN CONVICTED OFMANSLAUGHTER IN WIFE SLAYING

Judge Says Decision Sound, Fair Verdict

Hull, Que., Feb. 2 —(CP) — A Quebec court of King's bench jury, after three hours deliberation last night, returned a verdict of manslaughter in the case of Gerald Ryan, 22-year-old Timiskaming, Que., lumber camp cook charged with the September murder of his teenaged bride.

The strapping, six-foot Ryan was accused by the Crown of strangling his bride of two months, 17-year-old Rose Ryan, in their apartment above the Timiskaming lumber camp cafeteria last Sept. 15.

Ryan, who sat calmly throughout his four day trial, went to his defence counsel, Joseph Ste. Marie of Hull, and shook hands when the verdict was announced. Mr. Justice Valmore Bienvenue told the crowded courtroom Ryan will be sentenced later.

The judge told the jury that it had had a difficult case to decide and termed its decision a "sound and a fair verdict."

Conviction for manslaughter leaves Ryan liable to a sentence up to life imprisonment. Conviction for murder would have brought a mandatory death penalty.

Mr. Justice Bienvenue took more than an hour in his charge to the jury. He told the jurors not to let pity color their verdict and said that "murder—clearly proved — should not and shall not go unpunished."

Nothing Against Character

He noted that nothing had been said against Ryan's character. Everyone said he was a good worker and of quiet mood. After the argument with his wife and the alleged murder, Ryan had called the police himself.

"But I must tell you," said the defence council, "That Ryan did not intend to kill his wife, but took her by the throat just to scare her."

He added the jurors "Must render a verdict according to your conscience."

"I have no doubt in this case there is no question of murder or manslaughter, but death should be accidental. Ryan saw red and had no intention to kill his wife and I hope you will give him the benefit of the doubt."

Tribute Paid Attorney

The judge paid special tribute to the work of youthful Crown Attorney Marcel Cinq Mars of South Timiskaming who has been at the bar only three years. He had presented the case with great skill.

Briefly the judge reviewed the case as presented by 31 Crown witnesses—how Ryan and his bride of two months had quarrelled at a party on the day before the slaying; how young Rose Ryan had been choked by the accused on a previous occasion; how Ryan had admitted to two police constables that he had killed his wife and a similar confession made to a fellow worker.

He pointed out that the facts of killing were not disputed by the defence, which had called no witnesses. But the defence's case was that death had been unintentional, that Ryan had acted in a fit of rage without intent.

Canada Gives Europe $325,000,000; Will Donate $220,000,000 More

Ottawa, Feb. 2—(CP)—Canada is not accepting a North Atlantic Treaty suggestion that she send Europe a free supply of raw materials and basic commodities such as metals and food grains.

External Affairs Minister Pearson said the idea is "Undesirable in principle." and Finance Minister Abbott, just back from his second trip to Europe in recent weeks, agreed and explained why.

Canada's foreign markets have now shrunk to such an extent that sales of such raw materials are vital dollar-earners which help this country to balance her trade with the United States. Without these sales her economy would be in jeopardy.

The disclosure developed yesterday out of one of Mr. Pearson's periodic press conferences. He told the conference that he will leave Wednesday for London for discussions prior to the Feb. 16 N.A.T.O. council meeting in Lisbon where he will be joined by Defence Minister Claxton.

Mr. Pearson also had some comment on the position of Gen. Eisenhower as supreme commander of western defences in Europe. He indicated that the Atlantic Pact powers expect the general to remain in Europe until June even if he decides to run for the presidency of the United States.

He explained later that he did not intend to imply that Gen. Eisenhower will definitely leave in June because he did not know whether the general would or not.

Mr. Pearson told his press conference Canada will be spending more on defence generally in the new fiscal year beginning next April 1. He indicated that Canada as a result of the N.A.T.O. committee studies is accepting one or two adjustments in her defence program which will boost expenditures.

He did not go into detail on further aid to Europe other than to say that infrastructure costs—cost of airfields, communications and the like—will run into many millions.

Canada's mutual aid to Europe including arms shipments and air training has run to $325,000,000 in the last two fiscal years. There are reports it will total more than $220,000,000 in the next fiscal year in addition to the infrastructure expense.

Possibility Seen Of Britain, Egypt Settling Quarrel

Conditions Gradually Return To Normal After Riots

Cairo, Feb. 2 — (CP) — Possibility of settlement of the Anglo-Egyptian dispute sharpened today amid indications that Egypt's ambassador might return to London.

At the same time it was reported Britain would move to resume negotiations and that Egyptian guerrilla action in the Suez Canal zone was called off.

Schools throughout Egypt, except in the Canal zone, Alexandria and Cairo, reopened today as conditions returned to normal after last Saturday's bloody rioting.

Egyptian newspapers said Amr Pasha, recently recalled from London, might return to his post as ambassador to Britain.

The Wafd newspaper Al Misri said Premier Maher Pasha's cabinet soon will be reshuffled and that Sir Ralph Stevenson, British ambassador, will take preliminary steps to renew Anglo-Egyptian negotiations.

Cabinet Summoned

"It is not yet known if these negotiations will be between Egypt and Britain only or whether other powers will take part in them," the newspaper said.

As Maher Pasha called his cabinet together today, the newspaper reported a new attempt by King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia to mediate the bloody dispute between Egypt and Britain.

A communication from Arabia was expected to be handed to Maher Pasha today, the newspaper said. Last month Ibn Saud proposed to the previous Egyptian government that it and Britain settle their quarrel over control of the canal zone and the Sudan. Under his plan Britain would withdraw her troops in favor of British-trained Egyptians within a year. The future of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan would be solved by the Sudanese themselves.

The reported new note from Ibn Saud was believed to be a follow-up of this plan.

Willing To Talk

Maher Pasha opened the way for negotiations with an announcement through his spokesman last night that he is willing to talk with the British.

Maher Pasha's spokesman said "if a reasonable basis for negotiations consistent with Egypt's national aspirations is forwarded to us, we are ready to discuss these proposals immediately."

These aspirations, as expressed in laws last October by the WAFD-dominated parliament, are departure of all the 50,000 British troops guarding the canal and unity of Sudan with Egypt.

The premier, a political independent, was handed the reins of government by King Farouk Sunday after the former regime of the Wafdist party failed to control anti-British rioting in Cairo.

A calmer trend has been noticeable since Maher Pasha took over and peace generally has been restored, both in Cairo and the canal zone.

Rioters Arrested

The independent newspaper Al Ahram reported today that police raids resulted in the arrest of 88 more participants in the violent Cairo demonstrations which left 67 dead and many of the capital's finest buildings burned. Al Ahram had previously reported to police raids on 230 homes of rioters, with the arrest of 86 and confiscation of truckloads of loot, including guns.

The weekly newspaper said guerrilla groups decided to suspend Suez Canal zone activity in order to give the new government a chance to study the dispute in "a peaceful atmosphere."

Another independent newspaper, Al Ahram, said Cairo-Suez highway traffic is expected to resume during the weekend. British soldiers will no longer search Egyptian vehicles and passengers on the road, it reported.

May Relax Curfew

Usually reliable sources here disclosed there are hopes the 9 p.m. curfew, apparently being efficiently observed, will be relaxed soon.

Meanwhile the new premier took further steps to restore world air traffic landings at Farouk airfield. Several lines diverted planes to other Middle East airports since the riots.

There were suggestions, meanwhile, that last Saturday's rioting, burning and looting was not as spontaneous an outburst as it might have first appeared.

Delegates Pelted With Eggs, Tomatoes

Paris, Feb. 2 (Reuters) —Delegates in the main hall of the United Nations General Assembly were pelted with eggs and rotten tomatoes by a group of youths today.

The youths threw their missiles from the public galleries down on the scrambling statesmen.

They also scattered won leaflets ridiculing "chattering politicians."

The leaflets were signed by the "anarchist federation," a group consisting largely of left bank art students.

The leaflets said people are tired of listening to the delegates talk and wanted peace and freedom — not to die for either Stalin or Truman.

"By your hypocricy, your impotence and your cynicism, you are all war criminals," they said.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Feb. 2—(CP)—Cold weather returned to northern Ontario last night where sub-zero temperatures were recorded again this morning. This cold air is advancing slowly southward across central Ontario and will bring temperature drops to the Georgian Bay and Haliburton regions today. This cold snap will be short-lived, however, with milder weather indicated for these regions tonight and Sunday.

A disturbance moving rapidly eastward across the prairies will cause snow to overspread northern and central Ontario tonight and will likely cause a few showers over southern regions Sunday, a band of rain extending from just south of Lake Ontario and Lake Erie to the Gulf of Mexico still threatens extreme southern section of the province for Sunday.

Appeal Upheld By Napanee Jndge

The appeal of Welding Gas and Supply Company, Dundas Street, West, from a decision of the local court of revision which declared the company wholesalers, has been allowed by Judge Smith of Napanee. The appeal was heard some weeks ago in the county court buildings with judgment being reserved.

The assessment department of the city had declared the firm wholesalers and this was upheld by the court of revision.

In allowing the appeal Judge Smith found that the company was not a wholesaler within the statutes of the assessment act and said the firm should be classed as a retailer. Louis Maraskas, local solicitor, acted for Welding Gas and Supply Company during hearing of the appeal.

GROUND HOG DAY

Spring on Way, No Shadow For Groundhog

If you are the type who believes in legend, and that if Brer Woodchuck fails to see his shadow on Candlemas Day. spring is around the corner, then you should be happy.

For Old Man Marmot, Brer Woodchuck or Gus Groundhog, call him what you will emerged from his underground lair this morning, looked around and the only shadow he saw was that of the missus who has been tailing him all winter anyway.

For the sky was as gloomy as a jilted widow when Brer Woodchuck poked his inquisitive snout above his snow-covered burrow this morning and according to legend it won't be long before the dew-worms are shoving curious noses above-ground and the old man starts oiling and cleaning the fishing gear.

But that is legend purely and simply. Don't take it for granted. Gus Groundhog has been fooled aplenty, even as you and I, in years past.

Of course, some people will have it that Ole Groundy has to noon to make his appearance or disappearance. We figure the legend holds as good at eight o'clock as at noon.

In any event, if, as was said before, you believe in legend, then spring is not far away.

As far as we are concerned, if the weatherman continues his wacky antics, any woodchuck would be plain crazy to come up and stay up, regardless of whether he saw his shadow or not.

68th Anniversary Salvation Army To be Observed

On Feb. 3rd, 1884, Major Moore opened the Salvation Army Corps in Belleville and for 68 years the Army has carried on its work in this city. Sunday, Feb. 3rd, will mark the 68th anniversary and Major Arnold Brown of Belleville, and now stationed at the National Headquarters in Toronto, will conduct three special services. In addition to the regular morning and evening services, there will be a special afternoon service commencing at 3 p. m., and this will be in the nature of a "Salute To The Veterans." Special recognition will be given to a number of local Salvationists for long years of service.

The Salvation Army has served in Belleville, carrying on an aggressive evangelistic work, and at the same time conducting its diversified welfare program for the benefit of all in need, without respect to race, color or creed. The welfare program of the present day is so extensive, that the Army has had to enlist the services of many of its friends. An advisory board under the chairmanship of Dr. E. A. (Bert) Howard, and consisting of Harry J. Fuke, A. McLean Haig, Bram Humphreys, Charles Lundy, Ted Schwab and Gilbert B. Scott is giving helpful service. Almost 200 canvassers helped the Army surpass last year's campaign quota of $7,000, the appeal being conducted under the chairmanship of Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater, with Harry J. Fuke, A. D. McLean, E. Gus Porter, Mrs. H. McCabe, Mrs. Clarence Holmes and Ted Schwab on the executive

The Army's Christmas Cheer effort is well-known to Belleville citizens. In the effort just concluded the Christmas kettles made a re-appearance on Front Street, one being manned by Kiwanians and the other by members of the Salvation Army Men's Club. Almost $800 was received from this source, and added to this radio station C. J. B. Q. conducted a late evening request program, while both the radio station and Ontario Intelligencer combined to publicize the Army's appeal, and the result was that a record amount of Christmas cheer was given out.

Major Herb Honeychurch states that officials and members of the Army in Belleville give thanks to God for the privilege of service in His name, and give thanks to all those friends who have helped the Army in its endeavors.

Y's Men Start Renovation Job

Y's Men turned workmen on Thursday night when under the direction of Bert Hiles they commenced a project of renovation of the Y.M.C.A. auditorium which will continue each night for the next two weeks until the task is completed.

As a matter of diversion Harold Bankier led in a spelling contest of "simple" words supposedly in the English language. Winning honors went to Bert Hiles who was dubbed champion of the British "Hiles." Archie Boyd had some difficulty in keeping the meeting running smoothly, most of the members being over anxious to get at the work project.

Mrs. Anne S. Higham Speaks On 'Spotlight On Middle East'

Last evening, the Women's Canadian Club was privileged to have as guest speaker, Mrs. Anne Stewart Higham, who addressed an intensely interested audience on "Spotlight on the Middle East".

Mrs. Higham, who was introduced by Mrs. E. Hickey, president of the Club, has for thirty years been associated with the east, having organized a Y.M.C.A. work in Turkey, and through this association has learned in no small degree, to understand the problems of the east, with the "story behind the story".

Reviews Past

"Today the 'Middle East' is in the news and it so happens," said Mrs. Higham, "that every country that has aspired to power has been defeated in the Middle East." Mrs. Higham took her audience back for a hundred of years, giving a concise review of that portion of the world, laying emphasis on the resentments that lie beneath the surface of the trouble there.

"Why are the Arabs angry at Britain and America?" asked the speaker, and answering her own question, she listed several points that were responsible for the state of affairs existing today. One of which was that the Arabs desired an Arab kingdom, for to them, it meant a greater Syria, Lebanon and Jordan.

Another reason was the apparent aloofness of the British wives of the British officials and the fact that at certain clubs as the Turk Club and Shepherd's Club, which they later burned, no Arabs were admitted. Still another reason of resentment was the negative attitude of the British which did not augur well for public relations. The British have a fault of not divulging their good deeds, which if they did, would make for much better understanding.

Most Important

"How the Arab feels and thinks is more important than what really seems to be the trouble on the surface." The British should explain in a more forceful way, so that the eastern mind can grasp the real meaning. This is exemplified in the Anglo-Iranian agreement as nearly everything the Persians are now getting, was contained in the original agreement, but not clearly understood.

Other forces apart from the hidden and smouldering resentments are the dynasty rivalries, which are serious and account for the present unrest in the east. Each harem wife desires that her son shall carry on the traditions and so there is constant intrigue and riots.

Islam Religion

In speaking of the Islam religion for desert lands, Mrs. Higham feels that it is a good religion, as it resembles in a marked degree the Hebrew and Christian faith. It has, though, one bad fault, that of the plurality of wives. When speaking to an Arab regarding this, she was confronted with the reply that if the Arab can afford more than one wife, it is all right, however, he feels that the only difference between his land and that of America, is that the Arab takes his wives all at one time, while in America, the American takes his one after the other in quick rotation.

England's interest in the middle east was not that of colonization, but principally for the trade routes which are vital to her. Now the increased interest is in air power which has enabled the traveller to cross impassable deserts in record time. One can now go from Cairo in the morning and be in Persia the next.

Mrs. Robert Tanner, on behalf of the Club, most graciously tendered a vote of appreciative thanks to Mrs. Higham for her charming and comprehensive talk on the "Spotlight on the Middle East."

Coffee was served following the address.

Workman Slips Beneath Wheels, Loses Left Leg

Orville Yateman, 48, of 18 Geddes Street, Canadian National Railways employee working at the coal chutes in the Belleville yard, lost his left leg late yesterday afternoon when he slipped beneath the wheels of a train.

He was taken to hospital in Bush's Ambulance where Dr. E. G. Kennedy amputated the leg above the knee.

Details of the accident are meagre but it is presumed Yateman was walking along the track west of the coal chutes when he slipped and fell under the wheels of a switching engine. The accident occurred shortly after five o'clock. Yateman was in charge of the four o'clock shift at the coal chutes. The accident is being investigated by railway officials.

Unusually Large Wolf Seen Near Northport

Picton — An unusually large wolf is reported as having been seen in the area between Northport and Green Point, and two others in Athol township. The big fellow was seen by Tommy Kostoff of Picton, who was hunting in the vicinity with Harry Bowers, Sr. He had only a .22 rifle and though he hit the animal, it escaped after leaving a trail of blood for some distance. Gerald Valleau of the same district reports seeing a wolf which he described as twice the size of a dog, while Edward Kimball has noticed tracks in the snow near his hen house.

Several have seen two wolves in Athol township, near Salmon Point. One was shot there a few weeks ago, while the previous year there was an extensive, organized hunt before a pair, which had done great damage, were shot. It is believed the pair now at large are part of the litter of the pair shot last year.

Europe as I See It

By Raymond R. Canon

(Article 55)

Germershein au Rhein — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — As Christmas approaches once more I begin to wonder what it will be like in this part of the continent, for each country over here has its own type of celebration. Some are completely unknown to us in Canada, others we know in a slightly altered form. One thing is certain; the children look forward to it with as much anticipation as they do in Canada, and many of the people, remembering that Christmas is essentially a religious holiday, fill the churches for special services which are held on Christmas day.

I spent last Christmas, (1950). in St. Gallen, Switzerland, and found there were several interesting differences. Preparations begin just as early as in Canada, so the stores are all gaily decorated weeks in advance. About the end of November there appear for sale wreaths with four candles placed in them. These have a special purpose. Each family will usually buy one and place in on its side in some prominent place in the house. On each of the four Sundays before Christmas one of the candles will be lit, until on the final Sunday only the wreath remains.

Children Sing Carols

During the week preceding Christmas the school children go to the hospital where they stand in the corridors and sing carols to the patients. At the same time they take with them presents which are distributed. I had spent some time in the hospital, but had left just before this time. However they did not seem to want to leave me out of it, so they came right to the house where I was staying, which was a pleasant surprise not only for me, but for the Swiss family as well.

Christmas is actually two days in Switzerland, for the 24th is included as well. In the evening of this day there is a special dinner prepared and afterwards everybody opens the presents. No rushing downstairs early Chirstmas day to see what Santa Claus has left. In fact, Santa Claus is relatively unknown in Switzerland. The children do not know anything about his living at the North Pole, do not write letters to him, and do not expect him to come down the chimney.

By the time the presents have been opened and the excitement has died down a bit, it is almost midnight, so Christmas carols are usually sung until the church bells begin to ring. Since every church has at least one large bell, the ringing resounds throughout the valley. Certainly a very fitting way to end one day and to bring in another.

Christmas Day Quiet

Christmas day is quite quiet, with another special dinner being prepared. The day is considered as a Sunday so that the regular church services are held. The rest of the day is spent in visiting or just staying home chatting or singing carols.

In Spain, Christmas is actually spent over a period of two weeks, beginning on the twenty-fourth. In the evening a large dinner is prepared at which is served, besides the traditional chicken or turkey, two special dishes, which are made only at Christmas. They are turron, an almond paste, and mazapan, a small home-made bread.

On the twenty-fifth another dinner is prepared, again with turkey, but this time in a different way. The turkey is stuffed with a wide variety of things, including ham, chorizo (a type of sausage), various other kinds of meat, apples, and bread.

Instead of having Santa Claus, the Spanish children know only the three kings who came from the east to present the baby Jesus with rich gifts. They are called Melchior, Gaspar and Balthasar, with Melchior being black and the other two white. This is so that all of the people of the world, as the Spanish saw it centuries ago, will be represented.

Gifts Presented Late

These three kings show up quite late with their presents, for it is not until the sixth of January, when festivities come to an end, that the children wake up and find their presents. Instead of having to put up a stocking before the fireplace, they put out an old shoe, as large a one as possible, and in the morning the presents are found in and around the shoe.

Another noticeable difference is that the Spaniards have not been accustomed to having a Christmas tree, although this has become more widespread in the past few years. Instead they arrange in the corner of some room a miniature scene of the birth of Christ. A small stable is placed there with the manger inside. Sitting beside it are miniature images of Mary and Joseph. Nearby are the shepherds tending the sheep. If possible a shining star is placed overhead, and a small bulb is put inside the stable, so that in the evening, when all the lights are turned out except those two, the effect created is extremely impressive.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By
WINIFRED E. WILSON

ORCHESTRA SEATS

Even though a large number of our feathered friends leave us for many months, we Canadians have particularly good orchestra seats for the birds' most outstanding performances. On their breeding grounds birds are in their best voice. For this reason, some songs are rerely heard in the United States except in the most northerly or mountainous districts. But Canada is a vast nesting place for countless birds. Here they may be seen at work as well as at play. Besides the year-round residents, winter brings us certain Arctic birds that never cross our boundary.

As the days lengthen, migrants start to move up from their southern holiday resorts. On arrival in Canada, dressed in their best suits, the males are singing the finest songs in their repertoire. They begin by singing for very joy, then to entice the ladies and reserve for their brides the choicest spot for a home, later to protect their chosen territory from molestation and hold their wives, and finally to keep their young families together.

In winter, each individual thinks solely of its own welfare, and can only be seen flitting about in search of food. But in summer we Canadians have the privilege of getting to know them intimately, peeping into their homes, witnessing their way of life. Who can watch unmoved the love scenes of spring and listen calmly to the male's ecstasy of song?

How fascinating to follow the building of the Myrtle warbler's nest from the time the first small spruce twig is laid on a bough of an evergreen tree to the moment when the home is lined with hair and feathers, awaiting occupancy! Before long, four little speckled eggs lie on a soft mattress. We wait impatiently while the loving couple make sure that those precious eggs are kept warm. Sometimes the dutiful husband carries a tiny insect to feed his wife, who is too busy incubating to go marketing for herself. At last the joy of discovering the first wee baby bird! Soon the parents are hard-pressed to keep all the little mouths filled. Who can resist the temptation of spying on their family life?

VALLEY OF THE DEAD SEA

(Article 19)

Jerusalem, Israel — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — I have just completed a journey during which I travelled down from Jerusalem, through the Judean hills, thence southward past Beersheba and into the heart of the desert of the Negev — into the valley of the Dead Sea.

"Then the Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah, brimstone and fire from the Lord out of Heaven. And He overthrew these cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground." (Genesis, chapter 19.)

On the shores of the Dead Sea lies the land of Sodom and Gomorrah. That part of the country is the lowest land area on earth, lying fifteen hundred feet below sea level. Here, you see nothing but mountains of salt and the rising mist of the salt sea present a picture of complete desolation. In the summer the temperature rises to 125 degrees and even now, in the winter time, the temperature is over 90 degrees. There is one particular pillar of salt which is spoken of as being Lot's wife, after she was turned to salt at the time of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Beautiful Scene

The salt mountains contain many caves and by use of a torch we entered one which wound its way for about 300 yards, coming to an end at a large space in the very centre of the mountain.

Standing there, it felt as though we were on the inside base of a volcano; sunlight penetrated through a hole in the roof, illuminating the walls and glistening on the salt. The whole scene was so breath-taking that words could never adequately describe the beauty.

The Dead Sea presents a fascinating phenomenon; a large body of water with a percentage of salt so high that no form of life can exist in it — not even seaweed. The salt content is so high that the water feels oily to touch.

The shoreline is not, as you would expect, covered with sand but with a thick crust of salt. A mist continually rises from the sea, through which the mountains of Trans-Jordan are visible in the distance.

A large potash factory stands on the south shore of the sea and, although not operating at the present time, has been in operation for over 20 years. The plant draws water from the sea into large pools. The heat soon evaporates the water leaving a sediment from which potash, bromide, salt, caustic soda, and many other chemicals are extracted. It is interesting to note that this plant is capable of producing 70,000 tons of salt per year.

Potash Exported

Before the Arab-Israeli war, the salt was transported to the north shore of the Dead Sea in small boats and taken from there to Jerusalem. Thence to the Mediterranean port of Haifa by rail from where it was shipped to all parts of the world. During the Second World War, the potash plant played an important role as it produced much of the potash used in making explosives for the British army in the Middle East.

At present the potash plant is temporarily closed for repairs, but is expected to be in operation soon and producing some of the chief exports of Israel.

UNEMPLOYMENT UP

London — (CP)—The number of persons registered as unemployed in Britain in mid November was 290,500—an increase of 26,700 compared with the previous month. Sales resistance in some areas is believed to be a factor.

GRACIE TO WED FEB. 13

Rome, Feb. 2 (AP) — Gracie Fields said last night she expects to marry Boris Alperovici, radio repair man, on the Isle of Capri, February 13.

PILOT TO EMPEROR

Stockholm — (CP) — Capt. J. Smith, well-known Swedish aviation engineer and test pilot has been appointed cheif pilot to Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia. He will also organize and train the transport section of the Ethiopian Air Force.

PROUD CIVIC REPORT

Oslo — (CP) — Not a single murder was committed in Oslo in 1951, but reported crimes were nine per cent higher than in 1950. Arrests for drunkenness declined by more than 2,000 and there were more thefts, but sex crimes, assaults and embezzlements were fewer.

ANOTHER TERRITORIAL DISPUTE

The International Court of Justice at The Hague has been called upon to decide the sovereignty of the Ecrehos and the Minquiers. Never heard of them? Well, neither did we, until we read about them the other day in the weekly edition of the Times of London.

The Ecrehos and the Minquiers are two groups of tiny islands, located in the English Channel between the Channel Islands and the French coast. The French government claims that the Ecrehos and the Minquiers are part of France. The British government says they are part of the Channel Islands, and, as such, British territory. "These two groups of tiny islands," says the Times of London, referring to the Ecrehos and the Minquiers, "have been the subject of conflict between fishermen, diplomatists and energetic would-be residents for at least three centuries."

The Times continues: "Tough brawling for oyster beds, paper warfare between the British Foreign Office and the Quai d'Orsay, the placing of buoys and lightships and the nocturnal erection of a prefabricated house subscribed for by the French nationalists have all played a part in Minquier history. The Ecrehos, although they cannot boast of such a lively background, possess a rocking-stone of ten tons and the ruins of a thirteenth century Norman monastery."

About two hundred years ago, the Channel Island fishermen ended the activities of a quarring company on Maitresse Isle by dumping all the company's tools and equipment into the ocean. (Maitresse Isle, one of the Minquiers, is so small that it has no fresh water). As recently as 1929, a certain M. Leroux undertook to build a house on another of these islets, with the approval of the French authorities, who considered the islet part of France. After the British authorities objected, the French ordered M. Leroux to evacuate, admitting "the question of the sovereignty of the Minquiers has not ceased to be considered between England and France."

The ownership of the Ecrehos and the Minquiers is complicated by the status of the Channel Islands themselves. The Channel Islands are British territory, and the people who live there are subjects of the king of England, but the islands are not part of Great Britain. They have their own little government, something like that of a self-governing British dominion, and are exempted from taxation by the British government. They even have a language of their own - - - Norman-French, which they have preserved since the days when their islands were part of the dukedom of Normandy and when the king of England was also the duke of Normandy. Their language or dialect is, in fact, divided into four separate sub-dialects, although the total population of the Channel Islands is only about 100,000.

We await with interest the decision of the International Court of Justice as to who really owns the Ecrehos and the Minquiers. Are the islanders British, or French, or are they something in between, like the rest of the Channel Islanders?

IT'S NOT THAT BAD

In his annual report, Police Chief Lockhart W. Trinnell of Pickering urges the earlier closing of the community's "restaurants, snack bars and lunch counters which, with their attractive juke boxes, are doing more harm than the old days of the bars and saloons." In these establishments, Police Chief Trinnell asserts, "there is no age limit, no separation between males and females, and the situation is becoming appalling."

We are not familiar with Pickering, but we entertain strong doubt that the snack bars and lunch counters there are less reputable than they are in any other Ontario town or city. It is true that these establishments are sometimes used as "hangouts" by the teen-agers, but what of that?

We think that, on the whole, the youngsters of today are as well behaved as those of preceding generations and that, in general, their morals and standards of conduct are pretty good. Early closing of the juke box joints might result in them convening in other and less desirable places.

APPEARANCES OFTEN DECEPTIVE

Has every shabbily-dressed old man who lives alone and who is a bit "queer" in the head a safety deposit box stuffed with bonds, as well as several trunkfuls of folding money?

Probably not, but such cases do crop up in the news with surprising frequency. The latest instance was in New York, where an 84-year-old-eccentric, who dressed in rags and lived in a shack which lacked even a bed, was found to have bank deposits, stocks and bonds worth more than $500,000.

Most remarkable was that this New York character was a former newspaperman, most of whom do not succeed in acquiring much of this world's goods.

All of which helps to confirm our belief that it's a funny world.

THE GROUND HOG

Once the ground hog it was said,
If he today should leave his bed,
The ground above him to explore,
And see upon the drifted snow
The sun his moving shadow throw;
Of winter there'll be six weeks more.

I know not how it chanced that he
A weather prophet came to be,
Nor why on ground hogs God bestows
A wisdom unto men denied
That they such matters can decide
From shadows on the drifted snows.

Now whether false or true may be
This ancient bit of prophecy,
I cannot with conviction say.
I am not versed in nature well.
It's just a tale I always tell
The children when it's ground hog day.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 2nd., 1932.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Grills left yesterday for Boston and will sail from there for Bermuda where they will spend the balance of the winter with their son.

Mr. L. G. McIntosh, who has been superintendent of the Stephens-Adamson plant here for the past five years, Mrs. McIntosh and children, have left to reside in Aurora, Ill. Many friends regret their departure from the city.

Mr. Sam Aselstine of Deseronto was in town today renewing acquaintances before leaving to reside in Ottawa.

Forty-one transients were given shelter and fed last night at the city lodge for transients. This is the largest number to be accommodated this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Rutley of Avonmore are visiting their daughter, Mrs. B. Bevis, Ann Street.

30 YEARS AGO

February 2nd., 1922.

Perfect team play was the reason the Belleville hockey team defeated the Cornwall team in Cornwall. Belleville had few rooters, but those present made themselves heard. Cornwall has a snappy team, but they resorted to individual work and that made it "apple pie" for the Belleville boys. There were no particular stars on the Belleville team; every player was working for goals and it made no difference who scored them. The final score was 11 to 8. The following composed the Belleville team: Boland, Holway, Goyer, Arnott, Whalen, Weir. Subs, Canning and Swayne. The referee was W. Symon and he gave entire satisfaction. Timekeeper for Belleville, Symons; goal umpire for Belleville, Ken Colling; penalty keeper for Belleville, A. Goyer.

40 YEARS AGO

February 2nd., 1912.

Teams representing the jewellers of the city and Corby's Distillery at Corbyville played a hockey match at the arena and the final score was 4 to 3 in favor of the jewellers. The following composed the teams: Jewellers, C. McBride, Best, A. Wonnacott, W. Soales, A. Hamilton, W. Wonnacott and R. Bell. Corby's, Palmer, Wilson, Jose, Spear, Simpson, W. Hume and Johns. The referee was W. Dawkins and he handled the game well.

Mrs. Ed. Brewster of Campbellford is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Boulter, Bellevue Terrace, Patterson Street.

The Crescents and Ramblers, junior hockey teams, met at Arnott's Rink last night between six and seven o'clock and played a lively match, which resulted in a score of 2 to 1 in favor of the Crescents. The following composed the teams: Crescents, H. Elliott, R. Buck, R. Harker F. NcNab, A. Meagher, P, Doxtator and V. Doolittle. Ramblers, L. Donovan, D. Barrett, H. Holland, A. Martin, W. Allore, L. Manhen and W. Deacon.

50 YEARS AGO

February 2nd., 1902.

The worst snow storm here for many years commenced early yesterday afternoon and the snow fell fast and furious; the wind caused drifts of great depth and size. People went to bed with the wind blowing a gale and the snow beating against the windows. This morning the snow had ceased to fall, but the wind was still howling. On some of the back streets it was impossible for a horse and sleigh to make any progress and it is not likely that the sidewalks will be cleared for some days. The attendance at the schools was small today; one room in which there is an average attendance of thirty-six pupils had only eleven present. Milkmen due at seven o'clock this morning, had not made delivery by two o'clock this afternoon. The country roads are just about impassable and stages had not arrived up to noon today. Trains are all late. It will probably be a week before the roads become passable and normal business is resumed. The corporation men are doing good work clearing crossings. Fortunately the weather is not very cold.

BOOK DIGNITY

I don't see why books can't have dignity the same as their authors. In the early days of book publishing everything about the book showed beauty and dignity. They were not after the first seller list. They were written and made to last. Their very composition was the finest of taste, carefully and artistically set in type and on the finest paper.

To handle one of the old early books is a joy in itself. All our modern ideas came from those first books. The simply printed and simply bound, on good stock, are the books that assert their dignity, especially when the contents instruct, inspire, and teach us to live better, happier lives.

A great book cannot be too beautifully printed or bound. There is one little book in my library I love so much that I have purchased every special edition I could get my hands on.

Its entire theme is one of dignity, clothed with hope. And so it has been printed in edition after edition, each one beautiful in physical form, most of them being illustrated by noted artists.

It is interesting to note how publishers vie with one another in trying to produce a great book in a more beautiful form than others that have preceded it. This applies to many of our well-known classics. The dignity of a really good book is never lost, however, no matter in what form is is printed.

What dignity there is to the family Bible as it rests upon the table in a home, ever ready to give hope and comfort in times of stress, and at all other times. Many a traveller has found this book an oasis of hope and encouragement as he has turned to it in hotels where the Gideon organization has placed it.

All book lovers, I am sure, look with admiration upon the early illuminated manuscripts and books that the monks created. Many of them were all done by hand, taking long periods to complete. Millions have looked upon them for each displays a secreted love that joy and patience created. When you put love into anything it mirrors dignity!

A MAN'S MUSING

Thoughts out loud:

Those pictures in Time of the biggest Japanese manoeuvres since the last war, a 75,000-man force armed with United States equipment, gave me a creepy feeling. . . Several readers can't understand why I nominated Stan Francis as Radio's Biggest Goon when, as they rightly point out, Roy Ward Dickson is so available for the honor. . . A nasty snarl to Douglass Welch of Seattle for his article on buying linen in British Columbia. He wrote: "Finally we found a shop where they agreed to let us have certain pieces we really wanted providing, first, that we establish our social standing and, secondly, that we wait until the proprietor and his clerk had finished their afternoon tea." I don't believe it. . . Those Made-in-England educational toys of plastic are the most successful items I've found for keeping the children clammed up.

Make a note to hear Vancouver's contribution to the CBC Wednesday night program on February 6 at 8.30 p.m. It's Conrad's "The Duel" adapted by Earle Birney with Fletcher Markle starring, original music by David Avison, production by Bob Allen. . . . Nothing is as full of promise as a seed catalogue. . . Whatever happened to "swing" music?. . .What a thrill it must be to move into a brand new home of your own making. A friend of mine will have that experience next week and I envy him. But, of course, not his debts. . . I have a sneaky admiration for that Professor Charles Fries, of Michigan University, who told his class that grammar "ain't no good to nobody." . . . There isn't a cartoonist in North America who can touch our own Len Norris. Ah, but the poor boy is "local" so nobody will realize it unless he goes away.

People down in Los Angeles have all gone berserk with their "unusual" weather. I've just been leaning over the shoulder of movie critic Clyde Gilmore and reading a letter he got from Rufus Blair, a publicity man at Paramount. "Somebody went and put the big needle to Los Angeles' corpulent old head," he writes, "and all the hot air leaked out. I wish you'd send me a suit of long red underwear and a good lead dog who knows his way over the pass to San Francisco." . . Have you seen the newest dodge in false fronts? The "Tres Secrete" inflatable bra which you blow up after donning! I dunno. Maybe we're all crazy. . . Six letters this week from Grade Nine students writing vocational job studies on the advantages of being a columnist, all of them asking about "accident and health hazards." Answer: A spreading seat and occupational ulcers. . . Women who paint the fingernails of their little girls are beyond my comprehension.

I'm a pushover for dark cafes with checkered tablecloths, candles in old bottles and Italian spaghetti on the menu. . . Remember when it used to be considered really naughty to read Thorne Smith's "The Bishop's Jaegers"? And now there isn't a pocket book on the drug store shelf that does not make that pleasant old fable seem mid-Victorian in outlook. Yes, and if I had my ways I'd take half those trashy books from the shelves and burn 'em. . . That was a tragic crack-up of an American transport plane in the Queen Charlottes the other day. But it's well to remember the magnificent safety record of the planes making the long hop to Japan. Our place happens to be right in the line of their flight and they're as regular every night as street cars. . . Sign of the times: The thieves who broke into the Ferry Meat Market got $3,200. Beter than the average jewelry store haul. . . Wonder whatever happened to Anton Karas and his "Third Man" zither.

Very few sights as touching as a worn pair of baby shoes. . .Most gal ice-skaters seem to have gorgeous figures—or is it just that extra height the skates provide? They've got a new way of looking after street rowdies in Spain. Haul 'em out of town by truck and let them hoof it back. Probably not the democratic way, but what noisy kids need most is some way to burn off that extra energy. . . Was there ever a budgie bird who didn't fly away? You wouldn't think so if you read the "Lost and Found" columns. I could never see the point in keeping a caged bird or a bowl of goldfish. . . A little lemon juice on your windshield will keep it from icing up these cold mornings. . . Laugh at my efforts to raise chickens, will you? I'll have you know that, after six months' acquaintance with White Leghorns, I've made the Annual Poultry Issue of the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Canada's national farm magazine. My story appears right after one called "Bringing The Goose Up To Date."

By GREGORY CLARK

The hobby of bird watching is, of course, being carried on just as lively on these winter days as in the height of spring. The number of men and women who follow this sport in the United States and Canada is now known to be in the hundreds of thousands, where they were to be counted in tens of thousands only ten years ago. The reason for the great expansion of the sport is that all outdoor sports have vastly increased in recent years, and a great many people have sought an excuse for getting out of doors not in summer only but all through the year. The harmless pursuit of wild birds, the learning to identify them, and the up hill and down dale search for them, offers an escape from cities, towns, machines and the grim enclosure of our times that can be cut to suit anybody's purse and anybody's time. You can go a couple of miles or a hundred miles away, on these excursions, with equal satisfaction, as far as running up a score for the day is concerned.

The majority of the hundreds of thousands of bird watchers go out on these winter weekends just as eagerly as in summer: for a score if fifteen different species of wild birds seen on a blizzardy day is far more exciting than a score of thirty on a fine mild day.

A Winnipeg dentist writes me that he has tried to get into the game, got himself binoculars and Peterson's field guide to the birds, and has been out several times without finding more than five species, all of them common birds he could see from his kitchen window. I wrote him and asked him what time of day he made his excursions: and sure enough, he replied — "right after an early lunch."

In winter bird watching, you have to be out as soon after breakfast as you can, and be prepared to quit shortly after noon. For in winter, in the early afternoon, the birds suddenly vanish, as if on a siesta, cease moving, hide in the deepest cover, and do not become active again until an hour before dark, when they engage in another short feeding period.

INVITATION TO LOCKJAW

Lockjaw is the common name for tetanus, a fatal form of acute blood poisoning by the toxin or poison produced by the growth and multiplication of certain germs in a wound, often a seemingly trifling one.

The germ whose toxin or poison causes the convulsions which characterize tetanus—convulsions even more violent than the convulsions of strychnine poisoning—is Clostridium tetani. That is what the young whippersnappers in the profession call it —we old-timers (Gad, what am I saying?) have always called it the tetanus bacillus. But it seems there's a significant difference between bacilli and clostridia (I hope this is the correct plural—Webster, Stedman and Dorland all duck it:—a bacillus is just a rod-shaped germ or bacterium—the name means "little stick"; but a clostridium is a spindle-shape germ or bacterium, that is, shaped like a club or rod but tapering toward one end, and it grows and multiplies best when air or oxygen is excluded, as when it is embedded in puncture or other wound.

For good reason tetanus is popularly known as lockjaw.

One summer day in a country village a man perhaps 40 years old saw youngsters trying to do cartwheels and handsprings. He hadn't tried it for many years but he showed them how. He split his palm wide open and dislocated two of the bones. The village doctor was away from home. I saw the man at dusk. I committed an error in judgment which probably cost the man his life. That is to say, I washed the wound thoroughly, reduced the dislocations, and applied dressing, splint and sling. From the free bleeding and thorough washing I felt confident the wound was perfectly clean. But I was wrong. The accident happened at the side of the road where horses and other animals could have polluted the grass or soil—Clostridium tetani is a natural inhabitant of the intestine of domestic and wild animals.

Four days later the man came for the first dressing. He complained of "sore throat," and when I tried to examine his throat he could open his mouth only pencil wide. He was noticeably tense and somewhat spastic in movements and speech. He was taken immediately to his home in another city where he died of tetanus a week later.

I should have given the patient the benefit of the doubt—an immediate injection of tetanus antitoxin (serum) and a second injection 5 to 7 days later.

When I considered the wound clean I had in mind only foreign matter visible to the naked eye. Any bit of dirt, cloth, paper, gun powder, grass, dead tissue, loose skin hair, sliver of wood or metal left in a wound furnishes a good medium or base for Clostridium tetani to grow on. This is true even if the foreign matter be minute and not apparent to the eye.

The moral of this confession of a crime of long ago is this: Whether a wound, stab, puncture, burn, tear, cut, scratch, crushing injury or blow is apparently clean or not, if there is even a remote chance that the wound or the implement that made it may have been contaminated by animal droppings, it is imperative that the patient be given the protection of tetanus antitoxin, whether the wound be closed or opened to the air.

The mere presence of lockjaw germs in a wound is insignificant. The germs are harmless. Only where there is foreign matter or injured or dead tissue for them to grow on, does the situation become dangerous.

Whether rabies occurs in man or not—if it does it is so rare that we could well ignore it so far as public health administration is concerned—there can be no question today that the practice of cauterizing wounds, particularly wounds inflicted by animal bites, is an invitation to lockjaw. The dead tissue left by this nineteenth century barbarism makes a good culture medium for any lockjaw germs that may have been left in the wound by tooth or claw.

It is my belief that tetanus thus induced, is what really kills most of the victims the old timers, certify as having died or "rabies." I can't prove that this is so, and neither can any medical or health authority prove that rabies occurs in man. It is all a matter of opinion.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE MIND AND OUR AILMENTS

A doctor remarked recently that it wasn't so hard to cure a disease; the great difficulty lay in curing the person.

Even if we have an infection, our state of mind has considerable to do with our recovery. Of course there are some incurable diseases upon which no state of mind would seem to have any effect, but more often than we would suppose, our afflictions arise from some dislocation of personality. We work too hard, or we pursue pleasure too hard. We worry too much or we eat about twice as much food as we need, not because our bodies demand it but because our minds do. Doctors assure us that the hunger which prompts over-eating is largely a delusion. So is every other impulse which leads us on to excess.

If the psychiatrist could get all the mental quirks straightened out in the minds of the people, many of the doctors probably would have to go on the relief rolls. As a matter of fact, every good doctor is a psychiatrist. Most of them are treating not only disease but the disordered attitude of patients toward what they really believe to be disease.

There is plenty of real suffering in the world, real disease. For this we should have the most tenderhearted sympathy, and against such disease the legions of science should be supported in their crusade. But a lot of our ills are only in our minds.

Russia Labelled Treaty-Breaker By United Nations

Paris, Feb. 2—AP—The United Nations General Assembly approved today an American-backed resolution labelling Russia a treaty breaker for failing to live up to its 1945 friendship pact with nationalist China.

With almost half the members not voting, the ballot was 25 to nine, with 24 abstentions and two members not present.

The assembly's action in approving the relatively mild rebuke represented a triumph for nationalist China's delegate Dr. T. F. Tsiang, who has been trying for three years to get some sort of U.N. condemnation of Russia's part in the downfall of Chiang Kai-Shek.

The nationalists charged Russia violated the treaty to aid the Chinese communists and that this aid was responsible for Chiang's ejection from the mainland.

Earlier today Burma's chief delegate to the United Nations said his country will call on the U.N. —and only the U.N—if it needs help to drive Chinese nationalist stragglers out of North Burma.

His apparent repudiation of an earlier indication that Burma might seek such help from the Chinese communists came as Soviet delegate Jakob Malik repeated his charges that United States officers are leading "military action by the nationalists" in North Burma.

U.S. delegate John Sherman Cooper again today repeated the American denials of Malik's charges.

Chief Burmese delegate U Myint Thein earlier had told reporters "our government's attitude is that we believe in only one pact, the 60-nation pact (U.N. charter). If any assistance is required it will be sought from the U.N."

The Chinese troops in Burma, estimated at 4,000 to 6,0000, fled there when Chiang Kai-Shek's regime collapsed, and Chiang's government now says it has no control over them.

20,000 Truckers In Fifteen States Out on Strike

Washington, Feb. 2 — (AP) — Some 20,000 A. F.L. truck drivers in 15 southern and midwest states went on strike today in a wage dispute with operators.

The strikes virtually paralyzed operation of freight companies in the 15 states. The effects were felt immediately throughout much of the eastern half of the United States.

The strikers hit the south from the Carolinas to Texas and in Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Ohio. The long-haul truckers were ordered out at midnight by the A.F.L. Teamsters Union against approximately 500 companies.

The federal mediation service in Washington was keeping an eye on the strike situation. But there was no indication what the government's next step might be.

Burt Says Unions Handicapped In Wage Bargaining

Hamilton, Feb. 2—CP—George Burt yesterday told the Ontario Federation of Labor (C.I.O.-C.C.L.) that unions in the province are handicapped in their wage bargaining by Ontario labor legislation.

Mr. Burt, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers and president of the Federation, said this made long term labor contracts impractical.

It was useless to write a two-year contract with a wage re-opening clause because the legislation blocked conciliation until the agreement ran out.

Thus unions have only one way to obtain wage increases without breaking the law: escalator clauses in agreement which provide for automatic increases.

Another problem was the "long delay" by conciliation boards in writing their reports. This meant that many employers could carry on for almost two years on what should have been a one-year contract, said Mr. Burt.

Juryman Wants Beer

Hull, Que., Feb. 2 (CP) — A juryman at the murder trial of Gerald Ryan called for beer for the jurors today.

Juror Leo Duffy, of Aylmer, Quebec, told the court of King's Bench he and his colleagues would like to have a bottle apiece at the supper meal and at bedtime.

Mr. Justice Valmore Bienvenue said he could not issue an order for the liquid refreshments but he would see the request got consideration in the right quarters.

The jury has been sitting four days on the case of the 22-year-old Ryan, accused of strangling his young bride last September at Timiskaming, Quebec.

Refuse Bequest

Paris, Feb. 2—(Reuters)—The French eye bank has refused a murderer's bequest of his eyes after execution because cataract patients do not want to look at the world through "killer's eyes."

Michael Courtin, 23, a park laborer who killed his employer's wife and her 12-year-old daughter, is waiting to go to the guillotine and made his offer from the condemned cell. But in the future the eye bank will refuse all such bequests.

Some sufferers have refused the grafting operation which could restore their sight merely because the bank cannot assure them that the graft does not come from a murderer.

Murder Charge Laid

Toronto, Feb. 2 (CP) — A charge of murder was laid today against George Kelly following the death yesterday of John Nichols, 21, of knife wounds in the face and chest.

Police are seeking Kelly, released on bail after being charged with wounding Nichols Dec. 23.

At the time, police said the stabbing resulted from a "night of terror" for Nichols' young wife and her mother. It was charged Kelly entered their home and threatened the two women.

ASKED TO WITHDRAW

Cardiff, Wales, Feb. 2—(Reuters)—South Wales miners yesterday asked a conservative member of parliament to withdraw a statement in which he said British miners did not like Italian workers because of their "sex appeal". The South Wales executive of the mineworkers union said the statement by M. P. Victor Raikes was "insulting".

Truck Driver Killed, Twenty Passengers Hurt

Montreal, Feb. 2—CP—A truck driver was killed and 20 bus passengers injured last night when an oil truck cut a provincial transport company bus in two in a collision near Chambly, Que., some 20 miles south of here.

Truck driver, A. Beauchamp, died pinned behind the steering wheel of his heavy vehicle.

All the injured were brought to hopsital here.

Andre Poitras, a passenger in the Sherbrooke-bound bus said the vehicle skidded in avoiding an oncoming vehicle and was struck almost dead centre by the truck loaded with gasoline and travelling toward Montreal.

Quebec provincial police and passers-by aided bus passengers and gave first-aid to the injured. Witnesses said that at one time about 20 persons were lying on the highway and in a nearby field.

Butter Production

Toronto, Feb. 2 (CP)—Ontario's butter production for 1951 was 66,713,000 pounds, a decrease of 2.9 per cent from 1950, the Provincial Department of Agriculture reported today.

Cheese factories reported a 10.3-per-cent decrease for the year.

During December the wholesale price of butter at Toronto averaged 66.6 cents a pound, an increa- of one cent over November. The price in December, 1950, was 58.1 cents.

ENLISTED IN R.C.A.F.

Markham, Feb. 2—(CP)—Ross Raymer, 22-year-old drug store clerk who police first feared had met with foul play when he was reported missing Wednesday has enlisted in the R.C.A.F., police said yesterday. The youth was traced by his car which he sold to a used-car dealer in nearby Toronto. Police said the youth didn't return to work after taking his girl friend to high school and quarrelling with her.

Allied Airmen Shot Down 31 Red Jets, Lost 52

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 2—(AP) — Allied airmen shot down 31 red jets in January and lost 52 of their own planes, Far East air forces reported today.

The Allied loss was the greatest in any month of the 20-month Korean war.

Minimum Annual Wage is Urged By Union Head

New York, Feb. 2—(CP) — A guaranteed annual wage in United in United States industry was urged today by Philip Murray, president of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.).

Murray, also president of the C.I.O., said the guaranteed wage would offset unemployment.

Murray outlined his proposal in a prepared statement for a six-man panel of the wage stabilization board, which resumed a hearing on the steel workers' wage and other demands after a three-week recess.

A possible country-wide steel strike hinges on the outcome of the hearings.

Another witness for the C.I.O., economist Murray W. Latimer, said a guaranteed annual wage in the steel industry for emplyees with three or more years' service could be supported by company contributions of about seven cents an hour.

The wage plan in effect would give workers three-quarters of their normal pay in slack periods for as long as a year.

Hanging Said Inefficient Way Of Execution

London. (CP) — Doubts about the effectiveness of hanging as a form of execution have been expressed by Jessie Dobson, recorder of the Royal College of Surgeons.

Writing in the Lancet, a medical journal, Miss Dobson says: "The procedure employed in judicial hanging has been and maybe still is, an uncertain means of causing instantaneous death."

At the recent inquest on Herbert Mills, 19, executed at Lincoln Prison, Dr. R. R. Prewer, prison medical officer, was asked if death was instantaneous. He replied that after hanging a man's heart could continue to beat for anything up to 20 minutes but it did not mean that he was alive.

Reviewing 36 cases where the bodies of criminals were dissected after hanging, Miss Dobson states that in ten the heart was still beating when the body was cut down. In one the beats continued for more than seven hours and in two others for five hours. She quoted a 19th century authority who said that if the heart is still beating death has not occurred.

The article cites examples of recovery after hanging. Among them is that of a woman hanged for half an hour at Oxford jail in 1650.

Sir William Petty professor of anatomy at the university, and other doctors arranged to make a dissection. Perceiving signs of life, they administered cordials and brought her back to consciousness. The woman lived for a further nine years during which time she married and had three children.

Elizabeth's Ladies-In-Waiting Seen Helping Set Style During Tour of Australia

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London—(CP)—Twenty gowns on their way to Australia to form part of the wardrobe of Princess Elizabeth's ladies-in-waiting will be something no fashion-conscious Australian woman will want to miss.

For these designs combine the talents of two top-ranking designers—London's Worth and Paquin of Paris.

It would be almost impossible, however, to figure out which designer is responsible for such numbers as the garnet red afternoon dress of pure silk with full skirt, cap sleeves and draped, heart-shaped neckline, combined with matching coat of Lyons velvet. A floral design in garnet beading outlines the neck of the dress and picks out the pocket flaps on the hips.

The rich velvet coat lined by the silk of the dress has skirt fullness falling to the rear, leaving clean hiplines and an almost straight front. The wide sleeves are cut in one with the bodice and deep revers finish in waist fastening.

Truly regal fullines forms the skirt of a primrose and grey tulle ball gown over primrose taffeta. A feathery cascade of wattle flowers in deep gold chenille spots and diamante beading falls from waist to hem down one side of the skirt and outlines the off-shoulder heart-shaped neckline.

Exquisite severity is the outstanding feature of a cream and gold brocade gown with full skirt falling in heavy folds from a pointed waistline. The bodice has wide, waist-deep revers sweeping upwards to form the cape finish to the off-shoulder neckline.

A short dinner dress in two shades of sky blue organza has a draped, strapless bodice and full skirt. A twist of deep blue comes from one side of the waist, slots the dip of the neckline and floats down the opposite side of the skirt.

Petticoat importance is shown in a full-skirted black faille afternoon dress worn over an underskirt of clover pink taffeta. The dress has cap sleeves, deep neckline and three-quarter-sleeve bolero.

A simple travelling dress in shadow-blue tussor silk, its three-quarter sleeve cut in one with the button-front bodice has white winged cuffs finished by a white bow. It is coupled with a coat of matching faille in plain princess lines.

Styles contributed by the designers range from a straight skirted wool travel dress of ink blue to a garden-party frock of beige lace and blue taffeta. A seagreen chiffon evening dress with draped braline has graceful, floating width to the skirt. The narrow belt and straps are embroidered with diamante.

Shortage of Dollars Limits British Import of Foods; Parcels Still Appreciated

By KAY REX

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

"Rationing" remains both an important and doleful word in the British vocabulary. Money is the cause of it—particularly the shortage of dollars. This prevents Britain from importing anything but basic products.

Food parcels from this side of the Atlantic still thrill the British friend or, relative who receives them.

"We used to get prunes in wartime but since currency deteriorated we don't get them," Mrs. Mary Charley of Kingston-on-Thames in England, recently wrote to a relative in Toronto. "Of course we get fresh fruit in the market, apples, oranges and very expensive grapes."

Bananas Unknown

Bananas, she said, never appear in British shops. She was delighted with the dried apricots, prunes and pears received in a food parcel.

The United Kingdom information office at Ottawa recommends that canned meat be included in food parcels. However, this does not mean tins of such prepared dishes as Irish stew which contains a large proportion of vegetables and gravy. Plain beef in one form or another is appreciated. At present the bacon ration in Britain is three ounces weekly together with approximately one pound of meat.

Cheese also is welcomed, preferable Canadian cheddar with a rind to prevent dryness.

Other suggestions for the British food parcel: sugar, butter, shortening, and, where there are children, candy and cookies of the sweet varieties. Dried eggs also are desirable.

Certain Items Scarce

U.K. officials say there aren't any desperate shortages and nothing is missing from the main categories of foodstuffs. However, there are shortages of such items as canned salmon, cookies, dried eggs, dried fruits, jellies and evaporated milk.

When packing food parcels it is advisable first to remember the situation of friends or relatives who will receive the gifts. Old persons are at a disadvantage in shopping and standing in line, and often cannot afford restaurant meals which are unrationed. As the tea ration is small it usually is a good idea to send tea to older men and women.

Housewives who do a good deal of their on cooking probably will welcome shortening, sugar and dried eggs in their food parcels.

Frugal Fancies

The National Council of Women suggests that an another means of cutting down on food expenditures Canadian housewives serve simpler titbits and less variety at their teas and club meetings After all these foods are practically always in addition to regular meals. One kind of cake should do just as effectively as two or three.

Homemade pickles and relishes should add as much zest to meals as olives—which after all are imported.

While the small packages of processed cheese are easy to keep, it's more economical to buy cheese cut from the large mold. This will keep for a long time if wrapped in a cloth wrung out in vinegar. When cheese becomes dry it may be grated for use in cooking.

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

Sitting next to an American at a banquet this week, we jokingly asked him what he thought of that U.S. Senator's bill to annex Canada. "I have a better plan," he replied. "You Canadians can have all our land north of the snow belt, our negro population and Harry S. Truman — in fact, we'll even throw in Dean Atcheson, he really belongs to you anyway." - - - Later, we asked him if he had formed any opinions about Canadians now that he had lived among Canucks from all across the country for six months.

This American said he had come to the conclusion that there are only four types of Canadians. There are those who are still colonial-minded and lean heavily toward the British. There are the French Canadians, a distinctly separate group. There are those who are pro-U.S., to such a degree that they are really Americans. And there is a large and growing group who are nationally-minded believing in Canada for Canadians. This last group has an ideal somewhat akin to the French Canadians, though otherwise they are as different as black from white.

Coming from an American who has been associating with all kinds of Canadians for a period of only six months, this is certainly a much more intelligent impression of Canada and Canadians than that of the senator who suggested the U.S. annex Canada and take her over from England.

Empty Boxes

Have you noticed your cigarettes disappearing at an unbelievable rate? Many people actually throw away at least one cigarette out of every package. Reason for this, is that as the package empties, the last cigarette falls flat on its face at the bottom of the box because its props are gone. When it lies in a horizontal position, it is not noticed by the smoker who tosses the box away as empty.

To convince you, dig down through the garbage pails and the waste baskets and examine any discarded cigarette packages. You will be surprised at the results of your search.

Impressions

Children first going to Sunday School often get the facts muddled. As a result, their thinking becomes fantastic to the point of funny. One youngster came home last Sunday having attended the primary class for the first time. He didn't have much to say about his first experience of religious learning.

"Did you like the class?" his mother asked. "Uh, Huh." "Did you learn about the Bible?" "Uh, Huh." "What was your teacher like?" "Well, you see, our teacher is Jesus' grandmother."

"What's that?" said the mother, knowing the teacher was an old school chum of hers. "How do you know that?" Then the little fellow explained, "She must be Jesus' gramma, because all she did was smile and show us pictures of Him."

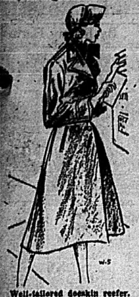
Spring Revival



Well-tailored doeskin reefer.

By VERA WINSTON

BACK again in the resort picture, and so indicative of a spring revival is the trim, reefer coat with a narrow half belt in back. This one, fashioned of red, white or blue doeskin, is double-breasted and has a classic notched collar, and split pockets placed vertically at the hips, side front. The interesting cuff detail completes a smart, wearable coat.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her restless mate

To be able to "have your cake and eat it, too," is something for which we all sometimes long. When people are torn between two alternatives, and can't make up their minds which one will make them happiest, it's natural for them to wish they could have both.

Fortunately, however, most of us grow up to learn that life is not like that; that instead of being able to "have our cake and eat it," we have got to decide which of those two things we want most, and give up the other one.

Most of us grow up to learn this, I said. But there are some who never do. A letter recently received tells of one such person—a husband who, as his distraught wife puts it, "wants to be single though married."

Never Grows Up

This man is 45 years old; plenty old enough to have learned the stern necessity of making choices in this world. But he obviously belongs to the group of those who have never grown up. He wants to hang on to the state of being married and at the same time to enjoy all the pleasures and privileges he would have if he were unmarried.

In the meantime, his wife is distracted.

"We have been living apart now for ten months," she writes, "because he said he was tired of married life and wanted to be free to come and go, to do what he pleases and when. He didn't want me to divorce him, he told me, because he 'might want to come back'.

"When he left our home, I made no scenes and tried to be a good sport, thinking that if I tried to be understanding, and let him have a little period of freedom, his mood would pass and he would be glad to come him. In this belief, I have kept our apartment going, despite the fact that on the [illegible]00 a month he allows me, I have had a difficult time making ends meet. But apparently in my case the 'noble experiment' has failed, for he seems to enjoy his present way of life very much and keeps postponing his return. He visits me about once a week to pick up his mail, and though I ask him on each visit what he wants me to do, all he says is that I should sit tight a little longer, since he's sure he will want to come back eventually.

Suggests Aid

"I have suggested to him that we both go to see a marriage counsellor, but he refuses, saying that no one is going to tell him how to live. I have asked my own doctor if he thought I should see a psychiatrist but he told me I didn't need one; that if I could only stop worrying and gain peace of mind, I could straighten myself out and cure the nervous condition this whole thing has caused in me. He thought I should make a clean break and divorce my husband, but I just can't do it. I love him, and as long as there is even an ember of my love left, I shall live in hope that he will come back. I have done all in my power to bring this about, but without success, so I ask you—what next?"

Well, it seems to me that this woman, too, as well as her husband, is failing to realize that she much choose between two things. Those two things are peace of mind, and her husband. Under present circumstances, she cannot have both, yet that is what she is holding out for.

She may think that if she left her husband peace of mind would be forever impossible of attainment. But I think she is wrong there. I think, if she did leave him, and courageously set about rebuilding her life, in time contentment and serenity could be achieved. It might happen slowly, but experience has demonstrated conclusively that it can and usually does happen.

On the other hand, if she chooses her husband, then she will have to accept, and somehow reconcile herself to, the loss of the peace of mind. Perhaps it will be permanent. Perhaps, if she is very lucky and he returns to her a changed man, only temporary.

Her two alternatives are there, It is for her to make her choice.

Food for Thought

Readers' Saturday Column

QUESTION:

I didn't expect a personal reply—it was a pleasant surprise, for I know you must be a busy person. . . . we often have scalloped potatoes and ham—both smoked and fresh. It is a favorite of mine. The corned beef hash I'm going to try tonight. A favorite at our house with the ham and potatoes is escalloped tomatoes and apples covered with brown sugar and cinnamon with a biscuit topping cooked in the oven with an oven meal is another favorite. Also canned peaches or cherries cooked under a white cake batter and served with the juice thickened and used as a sauce.

Frequently I make what my recipe calls a "batter pudding" during the winter. This has several variations but the general idea is a batter cooked in a sauce and then served upside down.

The batter is similar to cake without eggs and can be white, chocolate, butterscotch (with brown sugar) or spice with nuts or raisins, and is dropped into the sauce made of cocoa, sugar and warm water or brown sugar, margarine and warm water. It is interesting and inexpensive if the quota of fruits and other protective foods have been filled for the day and something is needed to fill hungry growing children.

Were your children always hungry? Our nine-year-old seems to have a cavity like the Christmas stocking the mouse ate the toe out of. Our twelve-year-old daughter can eat a huge dinner and in 20 minutes be hungry, and what makes me green with envy, they eat and eat and stay like string beans and it seems if I look at and smell a cake or pie I gain another pound . . . thanks for the chart and your interesting articles—Jill D.

ANSWER:

Yes—my children are always hungry. They have been famished ever since they started going to kindergarten. Only last night, and they are now 17 and 19, I watched with amazement, both of them reach behind them from the dinner table to a bowl of fruit and eat a banana, after they had had beef stew with dumplings, carrot celery, onion and a generous portion of salad a large bowl of apricots and 4 oatmeal date squares each and a 10-ounce glass of milk. Pete's the prize bean-pole, weighing about 170 lbs. but with a height of 6' 2".

Because your idea of serving a batter pudding over canned fruit, and using the juice for a sauce is such a practical one I thought I would outline it in detail here, for those who would like to copy you.

PEACH OR PLUM OR CHERRY BATTER PUDDING

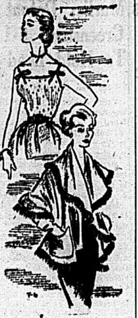
(Other fruits such as pineapple or raspberry or apricot may be used, but the three I mention in the caption are most common on our fruit shelves.)

Batter: 2 cups sifted cake or all-purpose flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-4 cup shortening, 1 cup sugar, 1 unbeaten egg, 3-4 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Sift flour measure and sift with baking powder and salt 3 times. Cream shortening well and cream in the sugar well, then beat in the egg until all is smooth and airy. Sift the flour mixture over, alternately with the milk and vanilla, a small amount of each at a time. Have ready in buttered baking dish the canned fruit drained from the syrup. Pour batter over. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 45 minutes. Serve with

FRUIT JUICE SAUCE

Make this up to 1 cup by adding boiling water. Bring to boil. Stir into it 2 1-2 tablespoons cornstarch mixed with 1-4 cup sugar and shake of salt. Stir until thick. Cook 15 min. over boiling water. If desired add vanilla or grated lemon rind and 1 tablespoon

Resort Accessories



Evening sweater and stole.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

CULLED from the resort shops is a brace of pretty accessories. First, a charming sweater blouse, a nice choice for casual evenings. It is of imported yarn, soft as a kitten's ear, in pale blue with black satin piping and bows, and for sparkle, a sprinkling of sequins. Very often there's quite a breeze even on a balmy evening down south, and there's certainly plenty of fresh air out on the deck of a cruise ship. So what better than this pretty stole, complete with collar and pockets. Fashioned of boucle jersey with fringed ends, it is circular in cut, and lends itself to individual draping. Nice over low-necked and topless evening dresses.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Important introduction rule

In introductions, your mother outranks everyone. That is, regardless of age, sex, or rank, everyone should be introduced to your mother. "Mother, may I present Colonel Wells".—"Mother, this is Miss Wallace."—"Mother, Alan Lane."

Christening in church should be seriously considered

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are planning to have our baby daughter christened soon. About a year and a half ago we moved to this small town, and we have not yet attended church here. We are Methodists, and in the Methodist church here there is a new minister whom we have never met. (1) Is it proper to have a christening at home? (2) Who should be invited to attend? (3) When should we give the minister his fee? And how much should it be?—M.D.

(1) If church regulations permit, a christening may be at home. But most people feel that the importance of this sacrament should be stressed by having the christening performed in church. Before you make your decision as to where to have the christening, why not have a talk with the new Methodist minister in his study, and ask for his suggestions and guidance? This doubtless would be helpful to you, too, in establishing your relationship to the church in this community new to you.

(2) To the tea, which would be given at your house following the christening, whether in church or at home, invite as many friends as you wish. A simple tea-menu is usually served.

(3) For the small, simple christening I judge you are planning, five or ten dollars is a usual fee. . . generally those who are not regular members of a congregation choose to give more than those regular members who support the church throughout the year. The fee, usually in cash, is enclosed in an envelop, and the child's father hands this to the minister with the filled-in forms necessary for the records.

Announcing an elopement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have read your column for a long time, and have derived many very valuable pointers from it. Then recently I have read with particular interest the questions and answers pertaining to weddings, because we had expected our daughter to be married in June. But—she eloped over this past weekend. And now I need a different kind of advice! Should we send formal announcements of this type of marriage? If so, how soon should they be sent out? And what form should they follow?—F. C.

Yes, it would be in good taste and dignified form to send out formal announcements of the marriage. . . as soon as possible. And, as I judge, the marriage was to have your approval (although certainly not an elopement), the sooner you send out the announcements, the better, so to indicate your approval, and the fact that the bride's family stands behind the marriage. The announcement form:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hill Clark announce the marriage of their daughter Mary to
Mr. Martin Graham
On Saturday, the nineteenth of January
Nineteen hundred and fifty-two
San Antonio, Texas

In each case, the vote was the same: 10 to 0 in favor.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Beautiful shoulders, white and firm

Baretop formals have made women shoulder-conscious. Unless shoulders are fair to see, a woman is not privileged to wear the strapless costume. Beauty charms are entitled to display; beauty should be camouflaged or hidden, no matter what Lady Fashion may be up to. Some candid camera shots of would-be lovelies show scrawny shoulders and prominent collar bones.

There is never any let-up in complexion care. The overhead for shampoos, wave sets, permanents, trims and rinses is something terrible when reckoned by the year. Plump ladies forego the good things of the table, often with loud lamentations, to restore the youthful shape. Shoulders and arms go their own way, yet much can be done if they are not of pleasing appearance.

We suggest that each member of this beauty class make an inspection of her shoulders—fore, aft and sidewise. You'll need two mirrors, because it is well to take a bird's-eye squint of your back while you are about it. Do you pass? Are your shoulders nicely posed? Is the skin white, the flesh firm?

With good posture the shoulders have flair and character. That is the secret of the attractive figure in general. Unfortunately, it is a matter to which few women give a thought.

Here is a test: stand close to the wall—heels, buttocks, shoulders and head touching the wall. Keep the body stretched to its tallest and your chin level. With the backbone extended, the abdominal muscles are tucked in and upward, doing away with that little bulge south of the waistline, a common result of slouchy carriage.

With this pose the shoulders will be in proper position and the arms will fall easily and gracefully at the sides. Walk away from the wall, endeavoring to keep the same stance.

When the shoulders are carried with splendor, no collar bones will appear, no matter how lacking the body may be in adipose upholstery. They sink into obscurity, as collar bones properly should. Observe the line from the top of the arm to the neck; there should be but the slightest inward curve there. If there is a hollow get busy with a heavy massage cream and friction it in briskly. Shoulders should have a creamy massage now and then, if only for the purpose of keeping the skin satin-smooth and of good coloring.

Do not under-estimate the benefits of massage. It acts favorably upon underlying fibres and the circulation, as well as on the skin.

Peterborough Eagles Edge Senior Hawks 6-4; Juniors Lose To Links 5-2

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

NOT DISGRACED:

They were beaten but you've got to give 'em credit. As a matter of fact we wouldn't say they were beaten. They did not score quite so many goals. On the ice eleven Hawks battled hard and strong against Ned Vitarelli's three-platoon system and very nearly sent them home with feathers drooping. The Hawks with five subs came up with a hard-fighting performance especially in the second period when they dominated the play and scored three goals to take the lead with nary a return from the Liftlock flock. Give 'em credit.

Montgomery's unprovoked attack on Red Doran in the second period after the Hawks tied the score marred the game. The husky Eagle defenceman was carrying a chip on his shoulder all night and his temper finally cut loose when he slashed the Hawks' coach over the head in a deliberate attempt to injure him. That sort of stuff is all right for shinny players in the back woods but when senior players so far forget themselves to attack a foeman, there should be something more drastic than a match misconduct handed out. Montgomery has played enough hockey to know better.

With all the imported Oshawa power, the Eagles were little better than the shorthanded Hawks last night. Which causes us to reiterate the statement that the Hawks at full strength are as good as any in the loop. Coach Vitarelli threw fresh platoons out there without stopping and it was the manpower advantage that swung the scale of victory.

Referee Casterton was definitely in error in imposing the match misconduct penalty on Montgomery. Rule 53 states: "A match penalty shall be imposed on any player who deliberately injures an opponent, official etc. No substitute shall be allowed until ten minutes of playing time have elapsed from the time the penalty was imposed . . ."

Of if Casterton interpreted the act to be an attempt to deliberately injure a player, Rule 45 says: "A match penalty shall be imposed on any player who deliberately attempts to injure . . . A substitute for the penalized player shall be permitted at the end of the fifth minute of actual playing time."

EQUIPMENT NEEDED!

It's surprising what queer situations an oldtimers hockey match will breed. First it was lack of condition. Something is being done about that. Next was getting the old fellas into the mood. Something has been done about that. Next came uniforms. Something has been done about that.

Now comes the big question of equipment. To the greater majority of the Wrinkles and Whiskers, modern equipment is something new. Encase a lot of them in a present-day.. day hockey player's get-up and they would feel like a freshly - wrapped Egyptian mummy. Just how Bill Green is going to navigate dolled up in a replica of Sir Galahad's tin suit is something for more than conjecture.

There were no half-bushel shoulder-pads, two-quart knee and elbow pads, hip-protectors, padded underwear, shin-guards tougher than a Zulu shield, or football helmets, in the days when the most of the sparse-thatches were chasing pucks and dodging hostile fans.

After giving the majority of the boys a dressing - room once-over it seems to us that the most important piece of equipment, collective that is, would be girdles. And most important the two-way stretch type. Those with bustles attached will be welcome. For a lot of those manly chests have dropped to half-mast since the lads were in their hockey prime. Of course two or three of 'em can wear their own, but it seems they can't buy the things at one-cent sales so they have no spares which they could loan to their buddies for the February hockey fiesta.

They could do without them. But then there's the possibility of some of the pear-shaped buckos of old rocking themselves to sleep should they fall on their faces.

Another important piece of equipment is vitally necessary if one of the oldtime goalkeeper stars is to see action. He is Derby Jeffery. Unfortunately, when he was but a toddler and learning to skate, Derby took a terrific slide on the ice and catapulted full tilt into the side of a steel collier that was ice-locked against the government dock. The boys did their skating in the open-air Bay of Quinte Arena those days.

Derby's feet in those days were the size of a normal boy of his age. But the force of impact when he struck the collier's side turned them up so far, that from that time on they have been twice the size. Today his underpinnings measure 11½ from stem to stern. And thereby lies Derby's woe. He hasn't a pair of skates, nor are there any on the horizon. His only hope is to appeal through this column to someone who has a pair in the attic, and who would loan them to him for the occasion. He's not fussy. The old-fashioned bob-skates will do. (He learned on them). Even those with the curled-up toes like a Pasha's slipper will help.

He says he can squeeze his feet into a size eleven, and with the use of two or three pairs of socks could navigate quite comfortably in a size 13½. Anyone having a pair between these sizes, is respectfully requested to leave them at this newspaper office. We're serious in this paragraph.

It Could Happen, Wanna Bet?

Toronto, Feb 2. (CP)—It could happen—but the experts are laughing up their sleeves. If it does, however, the upset will be the biggest to hit boxing in years.

Allan McFater, at 20 Toronto's pride and joy, is scheduled to meet James Carter of New York City in non-title bout here Tuesday night. If McFater is able to beat Carter, lightweight champion of the world, even McFater will be surprised.

He isn't even listed among the first 20 contenders for Carter's crown, and is hardly rated tough enough to steal a decision from the champion, let alone knock him out. The best the most ardent of McFater's supporters hope for is that the Toronto boxer will be able to last the route.

The Carter-McFater exhibition is no championship go, but advance ticket sales for Maple Leaf Gardens are reported "above average". With ring-side seats going at $4.25 and enough room for 16,050 fans. Gardens officials are hoping for one of the "best fight crowds in history."

Speedy Rugged Play Features Hard-Fought Senior Battle; Hawks Drop to Second Place

A shorthanded, hard-fighting Belleville Hawks team went down with all colors flying in a rugged senior "B" battle here last night dropping the verdict to the Peterborough Eagles by a 6-4 score before 1,235.

The loss, coupled with the Peterborough Petes victory over the Kingston Sacs demoted the Hawks to second place two points behind the liftlock squad.

Coach "Red" Doran dressed but eleven men and the team came through with a fine performance in a hard-checking bitterly-fought tilt. They bowed 3-1 in the first period but flashed back with a consistent hard-hitting offensive in the second to score three goals to grab the lead 4-3.

Eagles came back to tie the score in the third when Jerry Moher, Hawsk winger passed the puck to an Eagle parked in front of the net, and went ahead on another goal midway through the period.

Pulled Goalie

Coach Doran pushed out six forwards pulling Lefort with seconds to go but the strategy backfired and Stewart on a breakaway poked the puck in the empty cage for the sixth marker.

The game was marred by unsportsmanlike conduct on the part of Keith Montgomery, husky Eagle defenceman who was carrying a chi pon his shoulder all night. He had drawn two minor sentences and in the second period after Doran had scored, deliberately attacked the Belleville coach, striking hi mover the head with his sticvk. He drew a match misconduct.

It was a typical Belleville-Peterborough tilt with both squads carrying arms, knees and elbows high. Referee Art Casterton handed out 14 penalties, eight of them coming in the rugged second period, with both teams splitting the take.

Goyer's sizzling drive from MacDonald after 50 seconds of play opened the scoring but Hill drove a loose puck past Lefort three minutes later to tie it up. MacDonald went off and the Hawks held the fort. They drove hard and Nicholls kicked out lots of rubber. Eagles flashed back following a net-front scramble the puck trickled over the goal-line from Vitarelli's stick.

Vitarelli and Moher went off together, then Fennell got the gate but the Eagles held off the flying Hawks until help came. Eagles raced back and Samalenko skated in to slap in Wilson's rebound. Nichols was kicking out close-in shots from Goyer and Wardhaugh when the bell rang.

Take Over in Second

The Hawks took over in the second period. They flashed a furious offensive hemming the Eagles in for four minutes before Jones drove a hard sizzler past Nicholls from Doran's pass. Wardhaugh skated through the entire Eagle squad but his shot went just outside. Nicholls, Eagles goalie and Moher drew penalties for highsticking, with Hill serving for the goalie.

On the first play Jones slipped a pass to Doran and the Hawks coach golfed a puck that Nicholls never saw to tie the count, Wardhaugh got the gate and Lefort rose to heights to keep the Eagles at bay. Moher and Montgomery got belligerent and both went off. The Hawks rushed in and on the power play Reeves, it was slated bashed home the rubber.

Then Montgomery attacked Doran and laid the Hawks coach on the ice. He was given a match misconduct.

Jerry Moher inadvertently slipped the puck to Brabin on a passout from a corner and the Eagle slipped the puck to Samalenko who drove it home to tie the score. Both teams ripped up and down the ice with Nicholls standing out thwarting the Hawks attacks. Jones, Goyer, Doran and Wardhaugh missed close-in shots. Samalenko put the Eagles in the lead after eight minutes on a breakaway.

Only one penalty was handed out in the third period as both teams strove for the victory nod. The Hawks efforts were met by a solid Eagle defence and when they got in Nicholls stopped everything. At the other end Lefort kicked out plenty of Eagle rubber and was one of the stars of the game.

With two minutes to go Doran sent out five forwards and with 12 seconds remaining pulled Lefort, but the Eagles slipped away and Stewart fired the puck in the empty net for the clincher.

The teams:—

Belleville: goal Lefort, defence Bastedo, Reeves, centre Goyer, wings Moher, MacDonald; Subs., Day, Barrett, Wardhaugh, Jones, Doran.

Max Faulkner British Golf Champ Seeks Bigger Slice Golden Spoils

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 2 — (CP) — Max Faulkner, Britain's popular open golf champion and current holder of the Masters' title, leaves shortly on a globe-girdling swing around the international money circuit with newly-won laurels from his admiring countrymen.

For his double - barrelled achievement in major tournament play last season, Maxie has been awarded the Golf Writers' Trophy for having made the greatest contribution to the game in the United Kingdom during 1951. He is the first player to gain this recognition which in future will be awarded annually.

In the nation - wide poll the champion won hands down. He headed the list of candidates with a margin of 13 votes over his nearest rival, Ronnie White, the Lancashire Walker Cup player, rated as one of the leading amateurs in the country. In third place was the veteran Bernard Darwin, himself a golf writer, as well as a former Walker Cup captain and ex-chairman of the rules and of golf committee.

Wants Slice of Spoils

Among the others in the running were the Scottish professional, John Panton, Arthur Lees, only Briton to win both singles and foursomes matches in the 1951 Ryder Cup test against the United States and Harry Weetman, the British match - play champion. Miss Jeanne Bisgood, a consistent tournament winner, was the only woman to gain a vote.

Fortified with this imposing array of honors, Faulkner is setting out on his latest globe - trot determined to win a bigger slice of the financial spoils and nursing some new ideas about how to accomplish it.

"I am pretty well convinced," he said, "that the reason Americans turn in such low tournament scores is not because they are more skilful players but because they take an hour longer to play a round of 18 holes. It seems to be the only way to win and in future I shall take longer over my shots even if the extra time may gain me a bad reputation."

Faulkner said he would return home in July to defend his open title. But whatever happens to his chances he plans to take in the $10,000 round robin event in New York as well as some of the other leading North American tournaments.

"Why stay in England," he asked, "when rich pickings are to be had for the asking in the United States and the dominions? I've had invitations from several sources offering a guaranteed purse for appearance and all expenses paid." Many of these inducements could not be accepted due to overlapping dates but it showed, he said, what a golfer could do with the aid of a major title.

Marlies Defeat Greenshirts 6-1 To Hold Lead

(By The Canadian Press)

Three Junior A Ontario Hockey Association games last night failed to jar Toronto Marlboros in their first-place spot, but a couple of ties lower down in the standings were broken.

Marlboros kept their six-point lead over their nearest contender in the race—Guelph Biltmores—by defeating Kitchener Greenshirts 6-1 at Kitchener. The Dukes now have 65 points for the season.

Biltmores managed to break a tie for second place by taking a 4-1 decision from Oshawa Generals at Guelph that had no effect on the Oshawa club's tail-end spot in the league.

Flyers worked hard at Barrie to break their seventh-place tie with St. Catharines Teepees and staved off the visitors in the third period long enough to preserve a 2-1 victory. Flyers now enjoy seventh-place exclusively.

In the senior A loop of the O.H.A., Brantford Redmen won a clear title to third place when they defeated Hamilton Tigers 2-1. Tigers pulled their goalie in the last minute of play but even with three face-offs in the Brantford end, they couldn't shove the puck past Brantford's Gill Woodall.

The league-leading Stratford Indians suffered a 4-2 set-back on home ice at the hands of Owen Sound Mercurys. The game resulted in a shoulder injury for Billy Flick, Stratford right winger, that may keep him out of action until the play-offs.

The win shoved Mercs into fourth-place.

Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen had little trouble blanking the host Sarnia Sailors 10-0.

Kingston Wins Curling Trophies

Toronto, Feb. 2 (CP)—Ontario's Top curling honors—the Ontario tankard and governor-general's trophy—have gone to Kingston.

Curlers from that city carried off laurels in the final rounds of the tankard bonspiel yesterday, marking the sixth time a double win has been scored in the tankard's 78-year history. It was Kingston's first tankard victories.

Both consolation awards—the Burden and Globe and Mail trophies—also were won by a single club, Toronto Granite.

J. G. W. Sands and H. W. Reid skipped the two winning Kingston rinks, defeating Charles Haskett and R. E. Miller of London, Ont., 28-23 in the final game for the tankard. The Governor-General's trophy went to B. C. Tetro and C. Wharrie for their 29-27 victory over Elmvale's Fred Ritchie and W. Campbell.

The tankard final was marked by some brilliant shots by Reid who cut Miller out of several good counts. On the 15th end, Miller was counting three when Reid came down to get shot and the London skip couldn't dislodge it.

Mormon Elders Trim Montreal

Montreal, Feb. 2 — (CP) — Ottawa Mormon Elders downed Montreal Rosemount 46-43 in a closely - contested exhibition basketball game here last night. Rosemount led 22-20 at half time.

Ottawa, coached by Solon Low, Social Credit member of the House of Commons for Peace River, put on the pressure in the last quarter, took the lead and held it.

The Ottawa team was paced by Sheppard who scored 16 points. Second-highest was Randall with 9. Alex Mikalochki led the Montreal attack with 10 points.

Patrick Confident His Bruins Will be Around in Playoffs

By CRAIG SWAYZE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The man who faces two of the toughest teams in the National Hockey League this weekend was quite confident when he asked last night what he thought of his club's chances, both in their next pair of games and over the remainder of the schedule.

Lynn Patrick, coach of the fourth-place Boston Bruins who hold down a slim one-point margin over New York Rangers, felt his team could weather the approaching storm. Pausing on the threshhold of a weekend which moves them against the runner-up Toronto Maple Leafs and third-place Montreal Canadiens, Lynn had no qualms in what the future held for his struggling bunch of Beantowners.

Made Changes

Still conscious of the fact that many called his club to end up deep down in the six-city circuit, Patrick told sportswriters that he "sincerely meant it" when he said his team would be near the top when the chips fell in March.

("We've made a lot of changes," he continued, "some of them have worked out right and some of them haven't gone quite as well as I thought they would. But every time you make changes you have to work the new ones into the system. It practically means starting from scratch."

"But," said Patrick, "all the changes we've made have been the right ones. We've got some good kids coming along, but we've been forced to look at the present as well as the future. We're not making any money in Boston. That meant we had to get help. We dealt off players to get it."

With the Bruins moving into Toronto tonight and entertaining Montreal tomorrow, the team stands two chances of increasing its scant lead over New York who plays a single game against the Red Wings in Detroit on Sunday. Although the Blueshirts have displayed amazing resurgence against the league leaders, Boston's sudden climb to winning ways may well carry them through to a four-point weekend.

Sugar Robinson Postpones Bout

New York, Feb. 2—(AP) — Carl (Bobo) Olson and Rocky Graziano will have to wait a while longer before they get a crack at middleweight champion Sugar Ray Robinson.

George Gainford, Robinson's manager, called off scheduled title bouts with Olson and Graziano yesterday. Gainford said Robinson is suffering from an aching back and will be out of action indefinitely.

"Ray will go through with those fights but not until his back injury heals," Gainford said. "It's painful and he can hardly straighten up. We don't know when the pain will heal.

"We definitely will go through with the Olson fight in San Francisco before we do anything else, and that includes exhibitions. The bouts are just indefinitely postponed."

Peewee Hawks Trim Canadiens

The Black Hawks of the Peewee Hockey League defeated the Canadiens by a 4-2 score in an exhibition game played prior to the Eagles-Hawks senior tilt in Memorial Arena last night.

The crowd thrilled to the spirited play of the youngsters who battled all the way.

Bob Leisels, Bob Dafoe, Bernard Boulton and Earl MacDonald scored for the Hawks with David James and Jack Elliott counting for the Canadiens.

Third-Period 3-Goal Rally Gives Triple-Links Victory Over Hawks in Keen Struggle

Peterborough, Feb. 2.—Oddfellows defeated Belleville 5-3 Friday night in Peterborough before the season's largest junior hockey crowd. The sparkling victory was the fifth in eight starts since January 6 for Johnny Godfrey's crew, but it was won only after a hard-fought struggle against tough opposition, with Hawks slightly short on manpower.

It was a thrilling two-way struggle from start to finish as the two keen rivals matched wits in every kind of going and the better team won out on the play.

A strong third-period rally enabled Oddfellows to earn the verdict after two hectic frames of close-checking but very fast play. The Godfrey lads whistled three flying discs past Barclay in the finale, two from the stick of Kevin Heffernan who also tallied in the second, and one by Kenny Floyd just returned to action since his wrist fracture of December 19. There was no return mail from Hawklets this stanza.

Goalies Good

Red Wasson came up with an outstanding performance in the local net, possibly his most effective of the season as he stopped many screened shots and difficult drives from all angles, particularly in the latter stages and when links were shorthanded. In the opposing cage, Barclay was scarcely less brilliant as Oddfellows peppered him with hot rubber with little success, in the first half of actual play.

Hawks took an edge in the first period when Jacklin took Gilmour's forward toss at the right blue line midway in the frame, sailed in and fired a 15 footer past Wasson from point blank range as Hawks had a one-man advantage. Ab Buckton put his team on even terms early in the second when he banged in a hot one from Floyd and Jensen as Links swarmed around Barclay like fleas around a butter dish.

The crowd hopped to its feet as Bill Cooks boys flew back however, to again take the wheel as Jacklin and Lalande combined at 6.27, the former potting as he zigzagged in fast to draw Wasson and give the sorrell top no chance.

The first line came to the rescue seconds later with Wilson in the stew box when Heffernan snared a pass directly in front of the net from Coyle and whipped it into the the twine before Barclay could move. Links outplayed Hawks slightly this frame but it was close.

The final chapter saw every Oddfellow giving his best as teamwork and co-operation again paid off. Early in the play Heffernan took a wide pass to his own wing from Army Armstrong flew in and and drilled a beauty high into the right corner from 20 feet out and the crowd went wild with the deadlock. Later Red Robinson sped down his wing and drove a hard one at Barclay and Kin Floyd sank the rebound on perfect timing from 10 feet out. Twist, Coyle and Heffernan combined seconds later as the teams began to tire slightly under the terrific pressure and the latter whisked a beautiful backhander to the right side as he flew past Barclay.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Grover Cleveland Alexander, a baseball immortal who spent the last years of his life in virtual obscurity in St. Paul, Nebr., was described yesterday as "even more forsaken in death."

His remains lie in an almost unmarked grave, the St. Paul Phonograph, weekly newspaper, reported.

The newspaper invited donations to a fund to give the fabulous pitcher, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, "a fitting resting place."

Alexander died 15 months ago in a rented room in a private home in St. Paul at the age of 63. In nearly 20 years in baseball, he chalked up pitching records that still stand. In 1916 alone he pitched 16 shutouts. He won 373 of 696 games he pitched for the Philadelphia Phillies, Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cards.

A motion picture based on his life is being produced.

The Detroit Tigers announced yesterday they had signed first baseman Don Kolloway, second baseman Al Federoff and utility infielder Neil Berry to 1952 contracts. The Tigers thus passed the halfway mark in signing up their spring training squad. They have 17 of the 32 players under contract.

There will be no Russian athletes in the Oslo winter Olympics. After one month of patient waiting, the organizing committee in Oslo yesterday, 32 days after the official deadline closed the door on possible participation.

Bruce Humber, chosen to coach Canada's Olympic track and field team at Helsinki, yesterday in Victoria, B.C., expressed determination to justify the confidence placed in him. "It's a tremendous thrill," he said, when informed of the Canadian Olympic Committee's decision in Ottawa Thursday night.

Archie Wilson, 28-year-old Buffalo outfielder who was voted the outstanding player of the International League last year, signed his 1952 New York Yankees contract yesterday in New York.

The vaunted University of Montreal Carabins, senior Intercollegiage Hockey League leaders, tumbled 9-4 last night before the third place University of Toronto Blues in a scheduled clash at Varsity arena in Toronto.

Canada scored one victory in the giant slalom race at Voss, Norway, yesterday, marking the opening of the annual Holmenkollen ski festival. Rosemary Schultz, Montreal, won the women's event in one minute, 43.1 seconds. Behind her was Rhoda Wurtele Eaves, Montreal in 1:44.6.

Don Scott McEwen, former Ottawa track star, last night won the two-mile run in the Milwaukee Journal games in Milwaukee to establish a meet record. The 22-year-old athlete now a member of the University of Michigan track team, ran away from the five man field to finish in 9:15.7.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Feb. 2 (AP) — It seems that the old pappy guy, Jersey Joe Walcott, is living up to the finest traditions of the fight game in trying to give Ezzard Charles the go-by in favor of some less ferocious opponent.

Ray Arcel, trainer of Charles, tells in an interview with Milt Gross of the New York Post how he sought to talk Tom Tannas, Ezzard's manager, out of giving Walcott another shot at the heavyweight title out in Pittsburgh last July. That was the fight, of course, in which Jersey Joe finally starched the gizzard.

"What do we need him for?" Arcel says he protested to Tannas. "We had enough of him already. The last time he was coming on at the end. We got nothing to gain."

To which Arcel says Tannas replied:

"Walcott can't beat Charles and I want to do Felix (Felix Bocchicchio, Walcott's manager) a favor. He's a friend of mine. This may be the last one for Walcott and they need the money. Felix is broke. I want to give him a chance to make some before he loses his fighter."

Arcel is one of the few men connected with boxing whom you may believe without reservation, and if he says that's the way Jersey Joe got his fifth whack at the crown, why that's about the way it was.

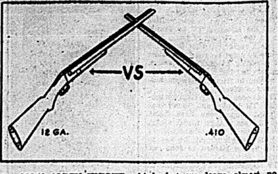
Large Gun Versus Little Gun



By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables)

We were sitting before the fire in a Maryland fishing camp one April evening three or four years ago. The talk, naturally, had been of fishing but somebody brought up the subject of shotguns. Then the argument started.

There was one man there who was a rabid small-bore fan — twenty gauge and four-ten. He insisted that a good man can do just as much execution with a small bore as he can with a twelve gauge.

This fellow was willing to spend money on his shotgun theories. He even went so far as to use a twenty gauge on ducks. Since there were no magnum twenty-gauge guns on the market at that time, he had ordered one built for him at one of the gun factories.

Expensive Gun

I hesitate to hazard a guess what that gun cost him. In the first place, the barrels were thirty-six inches long. The chambers were bored for magnum shells and the bore was tapered from cone to muzzle, giving him a super-choke which threw a tight pattern at fifty and sixty yards. His shells, of course, had to be loaded on special order.

Never having seen the man shoot, I kept silent during that discussion, but the next day I asked another member of the party how the gun actually functioned in a duck blind.

"Oh, he kills ducks with it," he replied (my informant, incidentally, is an excellent duck shot) but my old 97 Winchester will lay 'em down just as far off and a whole lot deader than his little twenty gauge."

Each winter my son and I shoot crows. As you know if you have shot them, a crow is a tough citizen and he can carry a surprising amount of shot. I have decided that the biggest gun you can get is the best gun for crows.

For this business I use a model 12 Winchester with a thirty-inch full-choke barrel. Dick uses a model 21 Winchester trap gun, with thirty-two inch barrels. This gun, as you probably know, is one of those special jobs whose taper starts at the cone and ends at the muzzle.

Much Superior

To test out the comparative killing qualities of the two guns, we stood together on a flyway one evening. We were using standard low-base trap loads, right out of the same case. With his trap gun Dick could outrange me by at least fifteen yards.

After he had wiped my eye on entirely too many birds, we traded guns. Immediately the situation was reversed — I was outshooting him at least three to one. In other words, the conventional gun, with the usual choke at the muzzle, simply could not compete with that big trap gun.

Each year we shoot rail on the Patuxent marshes in Maryland. For a good many years I used a .410 for this shooting. A rail is a small bird, easy to kill, but with the little .410 I found that I was leaving too many cripples on the marsh.

Then I bought a model 21 Winchester twenty gauge and took this down on the rail marsh. Now I kill my rail instead of "scratching them down." Not only do we save time that used to be spent looking for wounded birds but we leave almost no cripples in the marsh.

One of my woodcock-shooting companions each fall is a man who is an excellent shot. He shoots annually in the state skeet competitions and he stands well up in the ranks of the good skeet shots.

His state average, on registered clay birds, is 94 x 100 with the twelve gauge and 92 x 100 with the twenty gauge. Naturally I can't shoot in the same league with him on skeet.

.410 Too Light

In the woodcock covers, he carries a .410 and every year I manage to "wipe his eye" with regularity. On some of these birds it is obvious that his little gun has hit its target, but the birds keep on flying until my twelve gauge brings them down.

It has always seemed to me that a .410 does not make a great deal of sense, any way you look at it. The shell is a long, thin affair and the ballistic experts tell us that it actually stretches the shot string to the length of the standard twelve-gauge load.

Naturally, in a shell the size of a .410, there are not nearly as many pellets as in a twelve-gauge shell. On a quartering bird, this means that there are comparatively few effective pellets. The result is a missed bird or, worse yet, a crippled bird.

In a narrow bore such as the .410 a greater comparative number of shot pellets touch the barrel on the way out and are slightly flattened. This results in a high percentage of flare, as flattened pellets are bound to scale off out of the pattern.

Ballistics Statistics

Another thing that the authorities on ballistics tell us concerns the manner in which "pellet shock" increases or builds up. How they figure it, I'm sure I don't know, but the theory is this.

As a working unit, take the shocking power of a No. 6 pellet at, say, thirty yards. It works out to "x" foot-ounces. They tell us that pellet shock increases as the square of the number of effective pellets.

In other words, two pellets, instead of having double the shocking power of one, have four times the shocking power. Three pellets have nine times the shocking power of one, four pellets have sixteen times, and so on.

It stands to reason that more effective pellets will be delivered from a twelve gauge than from a .410.

Without boasting, I can point a shotgun about as well as the average upland shot. I should be able to because I hunt a great deal more than most gunners Thus, I'm fairly sure to hit what I shoot at, regardless of whether I'm shooting a big gun or a little gun.

But when I point a gun at something and pull the trigger, I want that something to come down — dead. With a twelve gauge that is what usually happens, but with a .410 the story is different.

It's the same old story — a good big man will whip a good little man every time. That is an axiom of the boxing ring, and I believe that it applies to the upland game fields and the duck marshes just as well.

So until somebody can show me that I am wrong, I'll stick to my twelve-gauge. That gun kills my game. I find that I sleep much better after a day in the field if I know that I haven't left behind me some unfound cripples.

Tweed Defeated By Tamworth

Tweed, (Special)—A last period rally by Tweed fell three goals short as Tamworth defeated them by a score of 10-7 on Wednesday night in a Hastings-Addington League game played in the Tamworth arena. It was the visitors first game in the new arena.

Although Tamworth boasts many out-of-town players, it was the homebrews who proved the margin of victory. The three homesters in the Tamworth lineup were goalie Storring and forwards Marshall and Brown.

Storring turned in an outstanding game in the nets, turning aside many dangerous thrusts and being brilliant on a second period penalty shot. Marshall fired home five goals and Brown added four to pace the winner's attack. Cox scored the other marker while Brady stood out on the defensive squad.

Tweed played their best hockey of the season in the last two periods. Don Lesage, 16-year-old netminder, turned in a fine performance after a shaky start. Robson led the visitors with three counters with singletons being added by McLoughlin, Sherry, Cole and Rivers.

Tweed: goal, Lesage; defence, Cotton, Curry; centre, McLoughlin; wings, Rivers, Meraw. Alternates, Robson, Sherry, Cole, Mumby, Mitchell, Rupeny, and L. Woods.

Tamworth: goal, Storring; defence, Brady, Hinch; centre, Marshall; wings, Holmes, Cox. Alternates, Brown, Fish, Weese, H. Wood, Jones and Hunt.

Referee, Dick Fitzpatrick; linesman, A. Moon.

Ted Williams Says May be Through But Favors Red Sox for Pennant

Boston, Feb. 2—(AP) — Ted Williams rates the Boston Redsox as tops in the American League, even without him and Bobby Doerr, the retired second baseman.

Recalled as a marine flier and due to report for active service May 2, Williams sees himself at the end of the baseball trail that knew him as a $125,000-salaried outfielder.

"I don't know what I'll do before going back into the service," Williams said. "The Red Sox have sent me a 1952 contract but I haven't seen it yet."

"The loss of one player never hurt a ball club," Williams said. "But two might."

Sticking With Sox

"I'm sticking with the Red Sox, they're still tops in my book," he continued. "Walt Dropo and Vern Stephens figure to do much better during the coming season. Don Lenhardt and Ken Wood will help the outfield and Gus Niarhos is certain to improve the catching and straighten out the pitching.

"Where will the Yankees be if Mantle and McDougald suffer the usual second year jinxes. Don't count the Red Sox out."

A flying instructor for 15 months during the Second World War Williams has not handled a plane since he got out of the service about six years ago. If he passes another physical test here April 2, he will report for a 17-months tour of duty a month later.

"Don't bother talking about me returning to baseball after I do my second hitch with the Marines," he advised. "I'm 33 now and I'll probably be 36 when I get out. Nobody can say how I will be then."

Chicago Hawks Take Wharram

Chicago, Feb. 2 (AP)—Ken Wharram, an 18-year-old rookie centre from Galt, Ont., will play for Chicago Black Hawks against Toronto Maple Leafs in Chicago stadium Sunday afternoon.

Under National Hockey League rules, Wharram is permitted to play three games with the Hawks before losing his amateur status. In the Hawks' affiliate club at Galt, Wharram scored a record 104 points on 32 goals and 72 assists in 40 games.

Peewee Hockey League Results

Bruins, Canadiens and Black Hawks were the victors in the regular Saturday morning peewee hockey league triple-header today.

The Beantowners blanked the Maple Leafs 3-0 with Canadiens edging Rangers 3-2 and the Hawks taking the measure of the Red Wings by a 5-2 score.

Jack Caddick paced the Bruins attack with a pair of goals with Jack Craddock accounting for the third.

Canadiens went out in front on two scores by Ron Keller and won the game on Richard Morris' counter. Gerry Goyer and Frank Howard were the sharpshooters for the losing Rangers.

Earl MacDonald led the Hawks attack in their 5-2 win over the Red Wings. MacDonald notched a pair of counters as did Bobby Lessels with J. Brennan getting the fifth goal. Mike Collingan scored one for the Wings and Ron Pointer drove in the second counter.

Alderman Harry Rollins, Roy Hall and Walter Bent were in charge of the games.

O.S.D. gained a second victory in four starts at the expense of the Northern B girls in a Y.M.C.A. Ladies' Basketball House League fixture on Wednesday night. The score of 52-7 did not do justice to the losers who tried hard but were unable to cope with the skill of D. Wiltse. The latter sharp shooter was a one man team in herself, scoring 25 points.

The "Y" Business Girls remain in first place with 4 wins and no losses while the Nurses and O.S.D. are tied with 2 wins each though Nurses have only one loss to O.S.D.'s two losses. Neither of Northern's teams have come through with a victory to date.

Those scoring baskets besides D. Wiltse were M. Tobin, F. Bennett, H. McCammon and T. Moher for the winners while B. McGowan and S. Stapley scored the baskets for Northern.

Referee was Don Dudley; umpire, Bill Spafford; scorer, Margaret Cousins, and timer, Ants Juurup.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The results of good bridge rules are pre-determined. They have been reasoned out for use in the best interests of a partnership. Such is the case of takeout doubles and responses.

A double for takeout promises a hand as good as an opening one bid. Therefore, the doubler could have made a bid of his own. But he prefers first to find out what partner has.

If partner has nothing they are no worse off than if the doubler had bid. And if the responder mentions a suit that the doubler does not like, the doubler is still in position to mention his own.

♣A Q 10

South opens with a heart. West doubles for takeout. North passes. So east is forced to bid something; anything but pass. He first looks to see if he has four or more cards in some unbid major suit.

East has not four cards in the unbid major suit of spades. He has four hearts. But the heart suit has been bid by south. It is not an unbid major. It is a major that has been bid.

East thus looks for the second choice; an unbid minor suit with at least four cards. Neither minor suit has been bid. But east has no minor suit with four or more cards in it.

East thus looks for his third choice; the lowest ranking unbid suit regardless of length or strength in it. Since clubs has not been bid, this means clubs in the case we have here.

Therefore, the bid by east in this spot is two clubs. This is a warning to west that his partner may have a worthless hand. And his future conduct should be governed accordingly.

South will probably do something about this before west can decide what next to do. But west has a substitute bid handy. He is no worse off than if he had bid instead of doubled.

Hollywood, Feb. 2 (AP) —What is television doing to Britain?

There has been much written about the effect of TV on family life in the United States. Now comes a report on what the home comes a report on what the home set is doing to English viewers. Among other things, TV apparently is adding to friction between husbands and wives.

The London Sunday Express surveyed TV habits and found that married couples can have fights over the set if their tastes differ. The reason: If the husband doesn't like the entertainment, he has to retire to the kitchen to read or work.

TV apparently has caught on in England, and 2,000,000 viewers are expected to be added to the audience this year. The Express reported that TV already has revolutionized home life, broken life-time habits and proved "a more powerful drug than the radio or cinema."

The Express said TV is "destroying conversation; cutting people off from their friends; sending thousands of children late to bed because they have been allowed to sit up for the evening programs."

On the credit side, British TV "encourages manual hobbies by televised demonstrations; stimulates the average housewife by cookery series; awakens interest in party politics by screened discussions."

The BBC discovered after a survey that of every 100 viewers; 86 reduce radio listening; 63 reduce movie going; 49 play fewer indoor games; 46 read less; 35 cut down theatre-going; 22 see less of their old friends; 14 garden less; 11 take fewer trips to the country and nine cut down on golf, cricket, tennis and football.

By Diana Gaines

"Look, Walt let's not go into that again," Gus said. "The oath may not be much good, but I can't see that it's going to do enough harm to fight about. Let's get back to the point. The point is, Cota knows your sentiments and he knows how the other committee members stand. But in spite of the way I voted, he wasn't sure of me. My attitude was— Olympian, I think he said, and he asked me point-blank if I'd support him on this Surinov case."

Walter Pelletier switched off the motor. He pulled a crumpled pack of cigarets from his pocket and before he lit the cigaret he asked, "what did you say to that?"

"I said I thought he was being too severe. I said I didn't think I'd side with him. So then, there were two opponents, you and me. The rest he thought he could handle because they would be against Surinov in principle and indifferent to him personally. Five of the men didn't show up tonight. The chief of staff had a quorum of six. It must kill Cota that he can't vote." Pelletier's snort of appreciation forced out a puffball of smoke. "So then," Logan went on, "they thought they'd push it through with a minimum of discussion and a decisive vote of four to two."

"Then when I got het up," Pelletier interspersed, "and you stood by me, and Rappaport and Warner unexpectedly chimed in with us, they realized they'd got their powder damp. This business of calling a special meeting for Thursday gives time to reload."

"Exactly. They know the men are sick of meetings and only a handful will show up Thursday. Their own handful. They'll prime the pump, you can be sure of that. I tell you, Walt, I don't think it looks good for Surinov. We held things up tonight. But at the end there, Cota got kind of nasty. He implied that you wanted to keep Surinov so you could stick your name on the prize-winning research papers he turns out. Did you get that?"

"Yeah, I heard that," Pelletier said in his heavy-lidded, sardonic way. "I don't care what he implies. My department's going full blast. I know what we're making for the hospital per annum. Gus I'm no stranger around there. The men know I don't go skulking around with ulterior motives and a basket out for glory. They know me and they know Cota. Even the ones who kow-tow to him will admit behind their hands that he's a heel." He drew on the cigaret, took his time letting the smoke out. "Peter's a fine lad, bright as a dollar and a hound for work. But he's stubborn. He never should have written his postscript on that oath. It was a fool thing to do. But after all, he did sign the oath. That's the important thing, isn't it? I suppose Cota's right—Peter did legally deface the document, but that doesn't render his oath invalid, does it? That doesn't prove he's a communist, does it?

"Why, I know that boy, Gus! He's no more a communist than you or I. Besides working with him I have him over to the house on the average of once a week. My kids are crazy about him. Stella is too. Why, I know everything he does and a good deal of what he thinks, and while I don't go along with him on all his ideas, I consider him the staunchest kind of patriot. He makes his own moral and intellectual decisions and he's willing to stick his neck out for them. I admire that."

Jennet heard Gus' slow footfall on the stairs. At the door of her bedroom, he called softly, "not asleep yet, are you, honey? I saw your light go out."

"You're supposed to climb the stairs," she admonished.

"I took them slowly. Once in a while doesn't matter."

She slid up on an elbow and turned on the lamp. She squeezed her eyes a couple of times at the light. Gus bent to kiss her on the forehead, smoothed her long hair with his hand. She sat up and moved her legs to make room for him.

"What happened at the meeting?" Jennet asked. "What did they decide?"

"Nothing yet. Walter and I fought for Surinov and a couple of men chimed in on our side. The decision is postponed till Thursday night. They've called a special meeting. I'm getting sick of these meetings. I'll tell you that." He looked hard at her. "You all right Jen? You look awfully pale."

She leaned her head back against the bed and wet her lips. "I think I ate something that disagreed with me."

"What'd you eat at the club? Oh, brook trout. You shouldn't order fish at the club. I shouldn't have let you."

"It wasn't that. The cabbage more likely. I'll sleep it off. Maybe I got overtired. I met Peter Surinov after I left you. I went to a lecture with him— on public housing. It was sort of horrible."

Gus' mouth pursed with troubled sweetness and the V appeared over his nose. "Say, that Surinov is getting to be an ubiquitous character. How come you were interested in public housing, or was Surinov the attraction?"

Jennet turned her head away. She didn't smile to his teasing, and Gus' voice sharpened. "What was horrible about it?"

"Everything. The description of the slums—rats and uncollected garbage and no toilets—ugh."

"Nobody was forcing you. Why didn't you leave?"

"I did," Jennet said, near tears. "I did. I left while the meeting was still going on. Peter was leading the question period and I just picked up and walked out."

"Peter," Gus ruminated. "Does he call you Jennet?"

"Frankly, I never noticed. I don't think he calls me anything at all," Jennet said irritably. "Gus please stop being silly and get me a pill or something. I'm nauseated."

Gus observed the dark lashes that quivered on the bloodless cheeks. A faint blue vein showed under the transparent skin and he put his hand over it. "You'll be okay, honey. Say, you didn't mention anything about the meeting tonight to Surinov did you?"

Jennet's eyelids flew up like snapped window shades. "No why?"

"Well, it's confidential, that's all. It wouldn't do him any good to tell him what's going on. It might even do him harm. He could cook his own goose faster than anyone could cook it for him."

"Well, I didn't say anything. You know I wouldn't reveal your confidences." She reached for his hand "Gus, isn't it terrible the way some people have to live?"

Gus sighed. He was no more willing to go into the state of the world and the nature of man now with Jennet than he had been with Pelletier. "The world is full of injustices, my dear. You and I can't reform the world."

"But we're so lucky. We ought to do something."

"In a small way, I do my share. I spend a third of my time treating free patients."

"What about me? I do nothing."

"You're giving your services at the clinic," he reminded her.

"It's not enough. We have so much. I should have given some money tonight. I meant to but all of a sudden I couldn't take it any more. I ran out. I should have stayed. I should have given five or ten dollars." Unconsciously, she quoted Peter: "Who am I to run from the sound of unpleasantness. Some people are living it, not just hearing about it."

Although Gus was not a close-fisted man, there was something distinctly irksome to him in his wife's regret over not having given away a portion of his money. "I wish you wouldn't work yourself up like this, Jennet. You can mail a check in the morning. I don't mind your making a contribution, but I hope you realize it's only conscience balm."

"If everyone gave five dollars or so. . ."

"The 'if everyone' argument is for children. If everyone shouted in the halls, if everyone scraped their chalk. The point is everyone never does. Ever seen women at a bargain counter? Ever seen people around a smorgasbord table? A sight more revealing than we5d like the odl dom the lorm we'd like to believe."

Light and dark stripes on the lawn bespoke the morning's mowing. Above the silky mass of snapdragons, colorful as Joseph's coat, the leaves of the mock orange bushes piled each other like hills of slick green pebbles. Along the opposite hedge of eugenia, crisp white daisies vibrated in the thin silver light, and dark as dried blood on the fence splashed the early roses. A "manicured garden." Peter's words. She could shut them out no longer. They returned to accuse her, to despoil the front view as evilly as rats running on the plushy green. "If a single person among you fails to act, then by all the laws of crime and punishment, you deserve to lose your happy home." Everything had gone wrong so far today. She ground her fists into her cheeks. Peter, Peter, Peter.

Well, she would get rid of him. He had asked for money. She would give money and that would be the end of the voodoo. She would give money and forget the whole experience. But five or ten dollars was nothing, Gus said. It would have to be a dramatic amount, a beau geste so that there should be expiation in the giving and dazzled fratitude in the receiving. But she would never be able to explain this need to Gus. How could she, when she was not even able to explain it to herself? If only she had some money of her own, a savings account or a lump sum cached away.

She thought of the possessions which she could turn into cash. Her mink stole—but Gus had given her that as a birthday present last year. Her jewelry, pins, earings, watch, necklace, rings, all were his presents and she wore them frequently; he took pride in her wearing them and would notice if one were missing. She thought of selling the star sapphire pin he had given her, which she supposed was her most valuable single piece. She could say that she had lost it. But then Gus would report the loss to the insurance company and she could never stand up under the grilling of the investigators.

Case Is Reopened After Two Years With Murder Count

'Fantastic' Implications In Slaying of Taxi-Driver

Welland, Ont., Feb. 4—(CP)—A two-year-old murder case with "fantastic' complications has been reopened with the laying of a murder charge against 34-year-old Lloyd Frank Cross, former Welland resident.

Police said Sunday that Cross was charged in the bludgeon-slaying of Sam Delibasich, whose frozen body was found by rabbit hunters in a field three miles north of Welland Dec. 17, 1949.

The 47-year-old taxi-driver, whose death started a flood of rumors about a feud in his native Yugoslavia which killed his brother, had been missing a week before being found.

Before reaching half across the continent to nail Cross in Brockville, N. B., police sifted through a web of such reports. Their findings were not disclosed, but Inspector Len Neil, who helped bring him back, said Sunday it "shapes up as being a fantastic case.".

He added that another arrest will be made in a few days and that this man will also be charged with murder.

Rumors of a Yugoslavian Vendetta were tangled with reports that Delibasich was accustomed to carry a large sum in his wallet. The wallet was missing when his body was found but a number of bills and some change were in his pocket.

Believe Sinister Motive

At the time, Yugoslav-Canadians here shook their heads over the robbery theory and read a sinister motive into the slaying. Delibasich was said to have dabbled in international politics. His brother was an ex-Chetnik who fought Marshal Tito's communist partisans in the old country during the war.

Persons who knew Delibasich said he helped anti-communist Yugoslavs to find haven in Canada and that he had the names of four of the six men who dragged his brother from a Belgrade apartment in 1945 and beat him until he died.

Police, then working on the robbery motive, were inclined to scout the political revenge theory. They found a "good" fingerprint on Delibasich's car and two bottle openers, though the taxi-driver was described as a non-drinker.

But they were told by residents of Yugoslav origin that "a lot of bad men have come to Canada from Yugoslavia since the war."

Delibasich came to Canada in 1928 and lived in Kirkland Lake, Ont., until 1942. Friends didn't worry about his disappearance for a few days because they believed he was making one of his periodical visits to Timmins, where he once worked.

Sir M. Clifford To Investigate Shooting Incident

Port Stanley, Falkland Islands, Feb. 4 — (Reuters) — Sir Miles Clifford, governor-general of the Falkland Islands, was due at Hope Bay, Antarctica today to investigate the Anglo-Argentine shooting incident.

A British party was attempting to land supplied at Hope Bay last Friday when an Argentine group fired over the Britons' heads, forcing them to return to their ship, the John Biscoe.

Hope Bay is at the northern tip of Graham Land, part of the Falkland Islands dependencies which have long been disputed between Britain and Argentina.

The British landing party intended to re-establish a survey base destroyed by fire about three years ago.

The Argentinians were there already, supported by a transport ship and a tanker. According to reports, the Argentine party brought forward machine guns and fired over the heads of the party. When this failed to drive off the Britons, a larger contingent moved in and the British force withdrew when an officer with cocked pistol repeated his demand.

(A protest was lodged at the Argentine Foreign Office in Buenos Aires. Reports said the Argentinian explanation admitted the men who fired the shots had exceeded their instructions.)

The episode was the latest difference of opinion in a long dispute between Britain and Argentina, who (with Chile) has been claiming the Falkland Islands since they became a British crown colony in 1833.

She has also repeatedly laid claim to the Falkland Islands dependencies, a vast area of Antarctica between the 30th and 70th degrees of longitude—mainly the great peninsula of Graham Land and the large island groups of South Shetland, South Orkneys, South Georgia and South Sandwich.

They are mostly Tundra and icy waste, with inhabitants counted in twos and threes.

Men's Bodies Found

Rimouski, Que., Feb. 4 — (CP) — The bodies of two men who went on a hunting expedition last Tuesday were found frozen in the snow during the weekend.

Omer Guy, 34, and his brother-in-law Arthur Parent, 22, both of nearby Nazareth, were found about two miles apart by provincial police.

Both men were married and had several children.

Police said that a rifle and several other articles were also found.

Dies in Fire

Englehart, Ont. — (CP) — A man's badly burned body, believed to be that of Gerald Thompson, 65, was found during the weekend in a cabin 12 miles northeast of Englehart.

Lack of tracks in the snow outside the shack led police to believe the fire occurred some time before a recent snow storm.

Englehart is 100 miles northeast of Sudbury.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Feb. 4 —(CP)— The snow which quickly accumulated in December is slowly being dissolved by the combining forces of mild weather and springlike rainfall. A dull grey cover continues to hover over the entire province today but as the disturbance which has been causing all the rain moves eastward blue skies will gradually appear over Western Ontario and move eastward following the storm.

A sunny day is promised for southern regions Tuesday but Northern Ontario will not fare as well as clouds will persist in this area and light snowflurries may be expected in many localities. The current mild spell will last for another day but by Tuesday a cooling trend will be noticed.

LABOR GROUP RE-ENDORSES CCF AS POLITICAL ARM

Meeting Votes Almost Solidly to Back Party

Hamilton, Feb. 4 (CP) — The C.C.F. was re-endorsed Saturday as the "political arm" of the Ontario Federation of Labor (C.I.O.-C.C.L.).

The federation's annual convention also:

1. Unanimously criticized compulsory arbitration as "unworkable, undemocratic and a dangerous threat to the institution of free bargaining."

2. Pledged its support to Local 200, United Auto Workers of America (C.I.O.-C.C.L.) in its effort to gain reinstatement of 32 Windsor workers of the Ford Company of Canada, fired after wildcat walkouts.

Still fresh in the minds of the 300-odd delegates was the C.C.F. setback in the Nov. 22 Ontario election when only two candidates were elected to the 90-seat house. But with the exception of a few Labor-Progressives the convention voted almost solidly to back the party.

George Burt, Windsor, Ont., who was unanimously re-elected federation president, took note of the C.C.F. defeat in his keynote speech Friday. He said the federation should indicate "we are not affected by the Nov. 22 defeat to a point where we are going to go cap in hand to the government and give up the idea of electing our own people in the provincial legislature."

On Saturday William Rutherford, U.A.W. delegate from local 222, Oshawa, said the C.C.F. lost 114,000 votes in the election because the workers opposed the C.C.F. policies and didn't vote Boris Mather, Toronto, Communication Workers' Union, said his union had just signed a good contract with Northern Electric Company.

Get Good Contract

"We got that contract because the company knows we can strike," he said. "If they knew we were prohibited from striking, they wouldn't have given us anything."

The case of the 32 men at Ford has been placed before an arbitrator. But one of those dismissed, Jim Speal, a delegate here, said the men had little chance of winning back their jobs.

Twenty-six were fired for participating in a plant demonstration and the other six for allegedly aiding the shutdown of the powerhouse during a wildcat strike that followed the dismissal of the 26.

The convention also backed a resolution condemning the government of South Africa for its policy of racial segregation and supporting demands for legislation for a 40-hour week. It asked certification of unions without a vote if the Labor Board felt that an employer discriminated, coerced or otherwsie interfered with the formation of a trade union.

Die-Hards Trying to Get Places in Sun In Disbanded Ranks of Wehrmacht

Frankfurt, Feb. 3 — (AP)—The monstrous thing called Nazism is not dead.

On the lunatic fringe of German politics, would-be fuerhers are crying shrilly for attention. In the disbanded ranks of the wehrmacht, die-hard militarists are trying to gild their reputations and get back their places in the sun.

Among former Hitler youth, eastern refugees and the economically depressed — their murder are in millions — grievances and doubts expose many as possible dupes for false prophets.

This is a sorry background. But in 1952, the third year of the West German republic, a democracy bred in defeat and reared under the occupation appears far stronger than its enemies.

It depends entirely for its future on a people who followed Hitler to catastrophe just seven years ago.

Have they learned their lesson?

The West German republic has 48,000,000 citizens. Thirty million of them were affiliated in some way with Nazi organizations which stretched into every corner of German life.

Four million of them belonged to the National Socialist party. Nearly 2,000,000 stood trial after the war.

Most voters are former Nazis. Most of the German military force to be raised for the common defence of Europe has a Nazi past.

But western statesmen now are counting on Germany to become an equal partner in their community of nations. So they draw the line between former Nazis—the mass of the people who are actively or passively loyal to the new republic — and the fanatics who go by the name of neo-Nazis and plot to bring Nazism back to power.

Former Nazis outnumber neo-Nazis 100 to 1.

The brazen mouthpiece of unregenerate Nazism is a little movement entitled Socialist Reich party. (S.R.P.) It has 50,000 regular members. It's leader, Otto Remer, was jailed for political slander.

Last year in the elections in lower Saxony, a state hit hard by the final Allied dismantling of German industry, the Socialist Reich party attracted 367,000 voters — 11 per cent of the total.

Besides the S. R. P., the hard core of Nazism has adopted such cover names as the German Reich party, the German rightist party, the Fatherland Union and the National Rightists. They claim Nazism failed only because of "A stab in the back."

This hard core appears impossible to reform.

Nationalism is astir in Germany and it must be reckoned with. The question is whether former Nazis have learned that national interests must conform to European interests. Only a renegade few are echoing mein kampf.

U.N. Produced Machinery For East-West Atom Control, Made Plan Against Aggression

Paris, Feb. 4—(CP)—The sixth United Nations General Assembly produced machinery for further efforts toward an east-west agreement on control of atomic energy and tightened the U.N. program against aggression.

These perhaps were the only major constructive achievements of the three-month meeting, most western delegates agreed privately as the hard-fought session moved toward its windup expected Tuesday.

The failure of Russia to win assembly denunciation of the north Atlantic treaty organization was seen as a gain for the west, which stood united on top issues.

However, American leadership among the western powers proved shaky on the issues of new members, where a large number of U.S. allies appeared to favor a deal with Russia, and on the question of condemnation of Russia for failure to live up to her 1945 treaty of friendship with nationalist China.

On the membership issue, the Russians offered to admit Italy, Finland, Portugal, the Republic of Ireland, Jordan, Austria, Ceylon; Nepal and Libya if the western majority would approve the application of Albania, outer Mongolia, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary.

Against U.S. opposition, so many delegations were willing to accept the five iron-curtain countries in order to admit Italy that this item was approved in the committee, 21 votes to 12 with 25 abstentions. In the full assembly however, it was defeated because it did not get the required two-thirds vote. The assembly vote was 22 to 21, with 16 abstentions.

Half Abstained

The Nationalist Chinese resolution declaring Russia failed to carry out the 1945 treaty of friendship between the Soviet Union and Chiang Kai-shek was approved by the political committee and the General Assembly although almost half of the U.N. members abstained.

This Chinese complaint was overshadowed by Russian charges that the U.S. was preparing aggression in southeast Asia and assisting "Kuomintang" (Nationalist) troops in Burma. The U.S. denied these charges and, jointly with France and Britain, served notice on Russia that any communist aggression in southeast Asia would be put before the U.N. for urgent consideration.

The surge of nationalism in the Middle East was reflected in the Assembly's work by the swing of many Arab countries to a neutral position on many East-West problems where previously they were solidly behind the West.

Efforts Shunted Aside

Middle-east programs are expected to hit the assembly with full force at the next session in the fall. Arab efforts to bring them up at the sixth session largely shunted aside.

Hopes for a move towards an east-west agreement on many issues was hit by Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky of Russia who said on his departure that the assembly produced only measures for aggressive war on the Soviet Union.

But western delegates foresaw a possible change in Soviet policy as the military strength of the west approaches that of Russia and her satellites.

The west seized the initiative at the beginning for a census of world armaments, including atomic weapons, with full inspection and verification of such a count.

Vishinsky laughed at the proposals but it soon died as he saw the reaction of other delegates, many of whom appealed to the big powers to settle their outstanding issues.

A 10-day secret meeting by the Big Four did not produce an agreement on anything except a disarmament commission. However some delegates hopefully said it meant getting the atomic control question off dead centre. The commission is expected to get to work on actual propaganda soon in New York.

Allies and Communists Move Nearer to Agreement on Plans To Exchange War Prisoners

Munsan, Korea, Feb. 4—(AP)—The United Nations and communists today moved nearer agreement on plans for exchanging war prisoners as truce negotiators scheduled a full-dress session Wednesday to start work on the final section of a Korean armistice.

"I think we can get together and write the rest of the agreement" on prisoner exchange, said Rear-Admiral R. E. Libby. "For the first time, I think we are in a position to settle the nuts and bolts of the situation."

Staff officers drafting truce supervision plans made no measurable headway. They still must iron out differences over troop rotation, neutral inspection and definitions of coastal waters. U.N. spokesmen have described the differences as minor. The staff officers are not debating the key truce supervision issues—whether the reds have the right to build and repair north Korean military airfields.

The full, five-man armistice delegations will meet in Panmunjom at 10 a.m. Wednesday (8 p.m. EST Tuesday) to open negotiations on agenda item five — recommendations to governments.

It will be the first plenary session since last Dec. 4.

Vice-Admiral C. Turner Joy proposed Jan. 31 that negotiations on three sections of the truce be conducted simultaneously to speed agreement on an armistice.

Provide Working Draft

In accepting his suggestion the reds agreed to provide a detailed working draft. They are expected to propose withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea—a pet communist project—and a high-level political conference to settle the whole Korean question.

U. N. Headquarters in Tokyo said no recommendations will be made to governments involved in the Korean War unless the truce negotiators agree on what to recommend.

The disclosure killed off speculation that two separate sets of recommendations would be made.

Staff officers working on truce supervision and the prisoner-exchange sub-committee will meet as usual at 11 a.m. Tuesday (9 p.m. EST Monday).

Newly-Arrived 40th Division Now in Action

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 4—(AP) — The newly-arrived 40th division—California's old National Guard outfit—today was identified in action on the central Korean front east of Kumsong.

The United States Eighth Army reported that the 40th tangled with the Chinese communists Sunday in a bitter, hour-long patrol action. It had been announced earlier that the division has been in Korea for about two weeks.

It was the day's biggest patrol clash on the snow-covered front. The mercury skidded to 15 degrees below zerow and Allied infantrymen elsewhere huddled in their bunkers.

The bitter cold and strong winds limited today's ground action and air strikes. However, a flight of 19 Sabre jets spotted about 50 MIGs high over northwest Korea and reported scoring hits on two of the red jets in a brief exchange of firing passes.

The fifth air force reported fighters and bombers attacked 700 communist vehicles Sunday night and early today and destroyed 54 of them.

MINOR MUTINY IN ARMED FORCES OVER PAY SPLIT

Married Servicemen Want Changes Made

Ottawa, Feb. 4—(CP)—There's a minor mutiny going on in Canada's armed forces—an argument over the rights of man that has gone straight up to the desk of Defence Minister Claxton.

The upshot may be a cancellation of plans to split the married servicemen's cheque in two, one cheque for himself, one for his wife. The army, at least, has recommended that Mr. Claxton cancel them. The air force is boiling, too.

Barrack-room lawyers right up to the top ranks have blossomed forth with a magnificent array of arguments why this proposed assignment is an indignity, an imposition, an error, and even an invitation to irresponsible women to try to get hitched to unsuspecting young men in uniform.

As some stories go, there are many wives who don't like the new system.

It will interfere with family budgeting, servicemen say.

It will cause far more trouble from wives throwing money around than the troubles the forces now get from soldiers not supporting their wives—the main reason given for the change.

It will reduce — so the stories go —some men to the indignity of pleading with their wives for cash because out of their own portion must come pension, income tax and other forced deductions.

Endless Arguments

The arguments are endless. They are believed to have been amassed in one eloquent and moving document for presentation to Mr. Claxton with the army's blessings.

The air force is seething with indignation too. The navy isn't so much affected because it has had a modified assignment plan in effect for some time and is, in fact, suspected of being the original force for change in this drama. Married troops overseas make automatic assignments, too, now.

The new assignments would vary according to rank and there are four different categories for each rank. A sergeant living in an apartment or house and having children would find $141 of his $231 a month going to the wife. If they have no children the little woman would get $126. They're living in married quarters provided by the forces and if they have children the split would be roughly $70-$120; if they have no children $55-$145.

The change is slated to go into effect March 1 for officers, later for non-officers—unless the minister acts.

Court Told Von Ribbentrop Rejected Peace Talk With Russ Jew Envoy

Nuernberg, Germany, Feb. 4. — (AP)—A former German official told a war crimes court today Nazi foreign minister Joachim von Ribbentrop turned down a peace offer from Stalin in 1942 when he heard he would have to deal with a Jew.

Franz Rademacher—one of the last Germans to stand trial as a major war criminal—said Stalin had inquired through his Swedish embassy whether Von Ribbentrop would discuss peace terms through a Russian diplomat named Alexandrov.

Von Ribbentrop then asked Rademacher, in charge of the foreign ministry's Jewish affairs department, whether Alexandrov was a Jew.

Rademacher said when he told Von Ribbentrop Alexandrov was Jewish, the foreign minister decided to ignore the offer.

Rademacher is charged with complicity in the murder of 1,500 Jews in Nazo-occupied Yugoslavia in October, 1941, and with deporting 100,000 Jews into eastern concentration camps.

A 127-page indictment accused him on three counts of murder in association with others, aiding and abetting murder, and aiding and abetting the deportation of Jews into slavery.

The last two charges refer to the deportation to the Auschwitz concentration camp of at least 108,000 Jews from France, Belgium and Holland, and about 80,000 from Bulgaria and Romania.

Rademacher has been working as a magazine writer in Bonn since the war.

Mother Burned In Futile Effort To Rescue Son

Mrs. E. Peeling, Picton, Fights for Life in Hospital

Picton, Ont., Feb. 4 — (CP) — A 21-year-old mother, whose three-year-old son was burned to death Saturday night after flames from an exploding gasoline lantern enveloped him, fought desperately in hospital here today for her own life.

Mrs. Edward Peeling was severely burned about her arms and legs when she snatched her son Sidney from a high chair, rushed outside and rolled him on the ground to extinguish flames burning his clothes.

After herding her four other children — all under six years—to safety, she staggered a mile over rough fields to the home of Sam Ryckman who took her to hospital. Her husband was in Picton at the time.

The lantern burst into flames as Mrs. Peeling was filling it. The home, four miles east of here, was saved when a neighbor put out the flames which were eating at the curtains and flooring.

Police Baffled By Fifth Escape Of Ruth Judd

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 4 — (AP) — The search for Winnie Ruth Judd, red-haired trunk murderess of 21 years ago, today spread throughout Arizona with police admitting they were baffled by her fifth disappearance.

"We have no clues," Sheriff L. C. Boies said.

Winnie Ruth, 48, dubbed the "tiger woman" after she killed two women and dismembered their bodies in 1931, has eluded capture since escaping from the state hospital for the insane Saturday night.

She opened a third-storey window, slid down a 48-foot rope improvised from restraining straps, and disappeared in the night. Police are still checking reports she fled in a dark-colored sedan waiting outside the nine-foot barbed wire hospital fence.

Theories of her whereabouts varied widely.

Winnie Ruth, an attractive nurse before the twin killing, was convicted of shooting Agnes Ann Le Roi and Hedvig Samuelson Oct. 16, 1931. Their dismembered bodies were shipped to Los Angeles in a trunk and suitcase.

Mrs. Judd was caught and sentenced to be hanged. She was declared insane in 1933 only 72 hours before the time of execution.

Six Families Rescued From Highland Creek

Toronto, Feb. 4—(CP)—Sixty residents fled their homes early today to escape raging waters of suburban Highland Creek which flooded its valley, overturning sheds and automobiles in its path.

Two men and a boy used a five-foot raft to rescue six families as the ice-clogged creek swept over its banks.

Jim and Robert McManus waded neck-deep through ice floes to push the raft to two families. Jack Strachan, 12 paddled the tipsy craft to four more.

The sudden flood was attributed to a combination of rains and thaw. At Dunbarton, 12 miles east of Toronto, 90 pupils were sent home from public school as three inches of water filled two basement rooms, backing up sewage and drains.

Closer to Toronto, hundreds of basements and garages flooded in North York and York township. Telephone service between Malton and Weston was washed out when seepage from the February thaw put one of the two cables out of commission.

Vincent Massey Sails for Home Next Saturday

Massey, chancellor of the University of Toronto, was named recently to replace Viscount Alexander as governor-general. Alexander, who has been conferred an earldom, will become Britain's defence minister.

ICE IN RIVER PUTS UP WEAK BATTLE AGAINST MILD SPELL

Ice in the Moira River put up a weak battle against the mild weather of the weekend and last night's and today's rain.

The ice disappeared as if by magic in some parts of the stream which is practically open from the lower city bridge to the upper stretches.

The river was ice-locked at its mouth near the CPR bridge this morning but rapidly flowing currents were opening channels to the bay.

FLAMES IN STOVE REFLECTING ON WALLS CAUSE OF RUN

Flames from inside a stove casting reflections on the wall, sent firemen on a wild goose chase to the Coca Cola plant Sunday evening.

Investigation revealed no fire in progress but the lid of the stove had been left partly off allowing the embers to reflect on the inside walls. A passerby saw the reflection and turned in the alarm.

'Pack Up Your Troubles' Cast Fast Rounding Into Shape

With two scant weeks to opening night, the 1952 edition of the Kiwanis Club musical extravaganza, "Pack Up Your Troubles" is rapidly rounding into stage shape. Rehearsals are being held thrice weekly and reports from show headquarters reveal that everything is "proceeding according to plan" and the production should e one of the best of its kind.

Messrs, Harold Carruthers and Charles Cawker, the "Shuberts" of the show, realize they have a hard road to follow in the wake of the splendid presentations that were predecessors of the current offering. Those shows were produced by Ted Schwab, ably assisted by Reg. Hinchey and each was better than its previous edition. Unfortunately Messrs Schwab and Hinchey were not able to devote their time to "Pack Up Your Troubles" this year and it fell to the lot of Messrs Cawker and Carruthers.

Cast of Sixty

The show has an overall cast of sixty people. Strictly a musical revue, the score calls for a variable program with no monotonous repetition, but rather a delightful contrast in presentation. Comedy, dancing, choral numbers, individual artists, skits and serious offerings round out what should be a highly entertaining whole.

Apart from the skits staged by the "fun team" of Ed. Waterhouse and Bill Salter, the comedy highlight of the show should be the humorous adaptation of the opera "Carmen" with Mrs. Ethel (Smith) Laurenson in the title role. Hilarious antics keep pace with the comedy lyrics written especially for the feature.

In a more serious vein is another feature, "Excerpts from Gershwin." Some of the all-time hits of the famous pianist-composer such as "Liza," "Lady, Be Good," "Who Cares?" "Of Thee I Sing," "Embracable You," "The Man I Love," and many others are included. Stan Wiggins with his trumpet will be featured as will the twin pianos by Charles Cawker and Phil Huddleston.

Directs Band

Larry Brown, director of the Commodores Orchestra, is not only rounding his band into shape but doing fine work in assisting with the musical arrangements and accompaniments of various numbers. With him is Dean Whalen, organ virtuoso, who is also assisting. He will appear at the organ with the orchestra and also act as accompanist to several numbers.

Show officials have announced that only 200 reserved seats will be placed on sale for each of the four nights. These and other tickets are now on sale at Bill Cook's Cigar Store and that of Fred Symons.

The show opens at the collegiate auditorium Monday February 18 and runs through Thursday, Feb. 21st.

300 Books Given To Sea Cadets

Through the generosity of Doyle's Drug Store, R.C.S.C.C. "Quinte" has acquired a library of some 300 novels.

The Sea Cadet committee has arranged to augment this library with technical works and books of naval interest.

A recruit to the ship's company is Martin Wise who arrived in Canada last August

He was educated aboard the Royal Naval Training Ship "Mercury", originally a French frigate, captured at the battle of Trafalgar, and modernized to function as a naval training establishment for 300 boys at Hamble near Southampton, England.

For the use of veterans at Sunnybrook Hospital, pocket novels and playing cards are being collected by the Sea Cadet Corps and donations will be gratefully received by the C.O., Lt. R. R. Boyce, 10 Harriet St., phone 118-M.

POLICE BLOTTER

Two break-ins were reported to police over the weekend although in neither instance was anything reported stolen. Night operators forced their way into Bill Deline's on Coleman Street, and also into the office of Arthur Sills and Company next door. Entrance in both cases was made by smashing windows. Offices were ransacked but nothing was reported taken.

Several irate pedestrians complained of being "splashed" by unthinking motorists who drove their cars through mud puddles.

Frank Sills, Marshall Road, complained that several chickens had disappeared from his chicken coop.

Orville Brant, Deseronto, was arrested by provincial police on the Foxboro Road and had been charged by city police with car theft. The car was allegedly stolen from the yard at J. B. Boyce and Sons through the expedient of crossing the ignition wires.

Brandon Couple Observe Golden Anniversary

(From Brandon Daily Sun)

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Varcoe were "at home" on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 29, when they held a reception in the clubroom of First Church United on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Varcoe were their son Reg of Belleville, Ont., their daughter, Mrs. A. F. Currie, and Mr. Currie, of Edmonton, and their daughter, Miss Jean Varcoe, of Winnipeg. A profusion of flowers attractively arranged about the clubroom showed the esteem in which this couple are held by all who know them.

Rev. H. G. Rees proposed a toast to Mr. and Mrs. Varcoe and wished them many more years of happy married life. Mr. A. B. Downing, chairman of the session, spoke in glowing terms of the wonderful service Mrs. Varcoe has rendered to the many organizations of the church; Mayor Creighton also spoke words of congratulation and best wishes for the years to come.

Mrs. Clarence Baker read an address expressing the feelings of the different church organizations and presented the happy couple with an arm chair. She was assisted by Mrs. M. J. Mitchell.

A great many friends from the Pendennis district were present, and on their behalf, Mr. C. McFadden spoke of the associations in the past, and Mrs. J. E. Greasley of Rivers presented Mrs. Varcoe with a lovely rose bowl filled with yellow roses. Both Mr. and Mrs. Varcoe responded graciously.

Vocal solos by Mrs. Sophie MacDonald and Miss Marilyn Woodley, and duets by Mrs. MacDonald and Miss Jean Varcoe added a pleasing note to the occasion.

The tea table was centred with a three tier wedding cake decorated with gold leaves and topped with gold flowers. Candelabra holding lighted gold tapers, and small vases of flowers completed the table decorations.

One hundred and seventy five guests signed the guest book which was in charge of Mrs. D. H. Taylor and Mrs. Glen Milliken.

Child Critically Injured In Freak Accident

Run over by another car when she was thrown out of the car in which she was riding when the rear door flew open, Sally Truesdale, 4½, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Truesdale, Gananoque, is in critical condition in Belleville General Hospital. She suffered a fractured skull with brain injury and a fractured femur.

The accident occurred Sunday evening in the village of Shannonville. Sally was sitting in the rear seat of a car driven by her uncle, Douglas Truesdale. The door flew open and she was thrown out directly into the path of a car driven by Walter Fraser of Picton.

Provincial Constable Kenneth Williamson who investigated described it as a "freak accident".

"The little girl was sitting on her father's lap in the rear seat and was yanked right out of his grasp when the door flew open unexpectedly," he said.

Police said that the Fraser car was going close to 30 miles per hour when it struck the little girl.

The little girl was placed in the Fraser auto and was rushed to the hospital where she is under the care of Dr. George Faulkner.

IN MEMORIAM

REID. — In loving memory of a dear father, Robert Andrew Reid, who passed away February 4, 1951.

REID. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Robert A. (Andy) Reid, who passed away February 4, 1951.

We lost our life's companion,
A life linked with our own.
And day by day we miss him more,
As we walk through life alone.
We miss him at a thousand turns,
Along life's weary way.
For life is not the same to us
Since he was called away.
Sometimes it's hard to understand
Why these things have to be.
But in His wisdom God has planned
Beyond our powers to see.

—Sadly missed by wife and family. F4

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 4—(CP)—Steadily weakening support today eased early afternoon stock market prices from opening gains.

Industrials, western oils, base metals and secondary golds opened higher in continuation of Saturday's upswing but faltered during the first hour.

Trading was active as a wide list of speculative western oils, selected base metals and penny golds showed large turnovers. Industrial dealings were confined to leading issues but volume for the first three hours reached 2,247,000 shares.

Refining oils and retail stores formed industrials' strongest sections with a majority of fractional advances. Papers, liquors, textiles and manufacturing companies held gains and losses in balance but agricultures and constructions weakened while steels, foods and miscellaneous issues dipped sharply.

Base metal leaders weakened sharply. Consolidated Smelters, however, was a standout exception as it traded at about $41.50 following a five-for-one split. Today's price represents a gain of $5 a share on the old stock which closed Saturday at $202.50. Golden Manitou, International Nickel and Quemont slipped.

Western oils eased. Ajax Petroleum, Anglo-Canadian, Home Oil, Security Free and Western Homestead showed declines ranging from pennies to about 25 cents.

Senior golds dipped as Dome, Giant Yellowknife and Hollinger declined fractions. Secondary issues showed little trend.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Feb. 4. (CP)—Trading was dull at the Ontario stockyards today with morning sales reported at $1.50 lower. Receipts: cattle 3,000; calves 120; hogs 600; sheep and lambs 460. The leftover from last week was 600 cattle.

Good heifers sold at $28.50-$29.50 while medium to good cows were $18-$23. A few good light bulls sold at $23-$24 with choice fed yearlings selling at $32.50-$33.

Calves sold $1 lower at $34-$36 for choice vealers and from $25-$32 for common to medium.

No hog prices established.

Lambs were 50 cents lower at $33 for good ewes and wethers. Medium to good sheep brought $17-$22.

Shipments of Beef, Hogs to U.S. Sharply Curtailed

Ottawa, Feb. 4 (CP)—Shipments of Canadian beef and hogs to the United States have been sharply curtailed in recent months because domestic producers can now get higher prices at home, an agricultural spokesman said last night.

This reversal of the historic price pattern—prices in the U.S. have usually been higher—came about in the last two months. Not only has it brought about big slowdown in Canadian shipments across the border but in some instances a reversal of the ordinary flow which saw U.S. beef shipped into Canada.

A number of eastern Canadian cities, notably Toronto and Ottawa, recently received shipments of American beef cattle because of the higher Canadian price. But it seemed to make little difference in the consumer market with beef remaining stable at about $1 a pound retail, the spokesman said.

Early this year beef prices on the Winnipeg market were $1.75 a hundredweight higher than at Chicago. Even late last year the Canadian price was $1 better than the Amreican. This, the spokesman said, caused the reversal.

Sends Mostly Feeders

Canada, which has allowed her beef and pork to be shipped to the United States for several years, send mostly feeder cattle —young steers which are fattened in the United States for the American market. She also sends some finished beef—cattle which need no fattening—and some processed beef which is ready for the retail counters.

Robert McCubbin, parliamentary assistant to Agriculture Minister Gardiner and himself a livestock producer, recently noted that Canadian farmers are getting lower prices for beef and hogs. Nevertheless, he said, the Canadian consumer did not seem to be getting the benefit of this since most meat prices remained the same at the retail level.

The agricultural spokesman said that Mr. McCubbin's remarks simply pointed up that fact that though prices have eased on Canadian cattle exchanges, they have levelled off even more across the border.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Haggart, an elderly Laggan, N.S., couple died of shotgun wounds. They were found in their home, 25 miles from New Glasgow, Sunday. Roy Haggart, an 18-year-old nephew, has been charged with the slaying.

At Plymouth, N.S., Ray Johnson, 20, attempted to save Leo Leblanc, 11, from drowning in a pond where the two were skating Sunday. Both were drowned.

A Toronto man, James Harold, 36, was fishing through the ice near Beaverton, Ont., when he decided to swim under the ice between two holes. He did not come up.

Mrs. Eric Young died in a fire in a small shack in Sydney N.S.

Three Persons Suffer Injuries In 2-Car Crash

Three persons are in Kingston hospital with multiple injuries as result of a two-car crash which occurred Sunday afternoon on No. 7 highway at Kaladar.

In hospital are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boomhour of Napanee and Evelyn Bradshaw, three, daughter of Ernest Bradshaw, driver of the one car. The little girl has broken ribs while the Boomhours have facial and other injuries.

The accident occurred as the Bradshaw car emerged from a sideroad to proceed across the highway. As it did so a late model Cadillac owned by the Brazilian ambassador to Canada, but driven by Claude V. Secrett of Centralia, struck it broadside almost completely demolishing the vehicle. Secrett complained of an injured knee while his wife, the only other occupant of the car was unhurt. Bradshaw, driver of the other car suffered minor cuts and police said he would be charged with careless driving.

The injured were given first aid at the scene of the accident by Dr. F. J. McCue of Tweed, who ordered them to Kingston hospital by ambulance. Provincial Constable T. Lummiss of Madoc and OPP Gordon Stout of Northbrook, investigated.

Prince Will Play In Polo Match At Local Club

Nyeri, Kenya, Feb. 4—(Reuters) —Prince Philip, astride a borrowed pony, will play in a polo match at the local club this afternoon.

Princess Elizabeth will drive to the Nyeri Polo Club with him to watch the match.

The royal pair, making a four-month round-the-world Commonwealth tour, are stopping over here at their hunting lodge.

This morning they explored the 10-acre estate which surrounds their lodge, given to them by the colony as a wedding present.

Almost from their doorstep they could view the highest peak in the colony, 17,000-foot Mount Kenya. Then they wandered along the Sagana River, which winds through their preserve and is stocked with brook trout for the royal table.

The Prince and Princess will leave the lodge tomorrow to spend the night in the treetops—"treetops" log hotel, built 35 feet up in the main fork of a giant tree.

"Treetops" started 20 years ago as a single board nailed across the branches; now cocktails and dinner are served while the guests watch rhonoceros fighting in the moonlight below.

As the more interesting big game are only likely to visit the drinking pool below "Treetops" at full moon, "artificial moonlight" may be prepared for the royal party's visit.

A large lamp giving diffused light is placed behind the trees where normally the moon rises. This light is supplied by electric current from a silent motor more than a mile away to prevent frightening the game.

DROPPED BY PARACHUTE

San Francisco, Feb. 4 — (AP)— Food, clothing and medical supplies were dropped by parachute yesterday to a group of Piute and Shoshone Indians in the blizzard-bound Black Rock desert country 125 miles northeast of Reno.

Withdrawal of Foreign Troops From Korea Stumbling Block

Tokyo, Feb. 4 (AP) —Communist and United Nations armistice delegates are about to lock horns on a new issue—the withdrawal of foreign troops from Korea.

This big stumbling block was sidestepped by U.N. negotiators when the talks started nearly seven months ago. But it will be the next major issue to boil up at Panmunjom.

So far the negotiators have agreed on two agenda items—the subjects to be covered in the discussion of an armistice and where the fighting stops.

The down-to-business manner in which staff officers are working over the draft for agenda item three—policing the truce — has sounded a note of optimism throughout the U.N. command.

Sub-delegates still are locked over item four—exchange of prisoners—but there is hope there, too. The communists made a slight concession yesterday in agreeing that once a prisoner is exchanged he should be under parole never to fight again.

Discussions of enforcement of the armistice and prisoner exchange now are going on.

Curtain Going Up

The curtain is going up Wednesday in a new tent, but when the delegates meet to discuss item five —recommendations to the interested foreign powers—it won't be a sideshow.

The stars of the talks—Rear-Admiral C. Turner Joy and North Korean Gen. Nam Il—are going to open the show when the full delegations meet. They are expected to bow out for sub-delegates.

When the talks began last July the communists stated their idea of an agenda. That was:

1. Stop fighting on the 38th parallel.
2. Withdraw all foreign troops from Korea.

Joy claimed that this was not an objective way to approach an armistice.

The job of drawing a cease-fire line was included and Nov. 27 it was drawn, mostly north of the parallel.

Joy ducked the red demand for withdrawal of foreign troops by adding the fifth item to the agenda. It reads:

"Recommendations to the governments of the countries concerned on both sides."

Toronto Physician Dies

Toronto, Feb. 4 — (CP)— Dr. Frank O'Leary, 61, died suddenly early yesterday after a heart seizure. He was one of Toronto's best-known medical men. Dr. O'Leary, born in Orillia, had been prominent in several welfare groups. He was chief gynaecologist at St. Michael's Hospital from 1947-50 and a lecturer at the University of Toronto.

Heavy Livestock Loss

Peterborough, Feb. 4 — (CP)— Thirty - nine head of cattle, 85 hogs and 215 hens were burned in a $25,000 fire which last night destroyed a barn on the 300-acre farm of Roland Bradfield.

Mr. Bradfield managed to save a team of horses, nine cows and a tractor.

New York, Feb. 4 —(AP)—Patrice Munsel, coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, says she will marry New York Advertising man Robert C. C. Schuler next summer. She announced the engagement during the weekend

'Old Curmudgeon' Harold L. Ickes Dies in Capital

Washington, Feb. 4 — (AP) — Death came quietly at dusk yesterday to Harold L. Ickes, 77, the new dealer whose sharp wit and blunt speech stormed for two decades across the United States scene.

Ickes, self-styled "old Curmudgeon," died at 6:25 p.m. EST in a coma after an 11-week illness following complication of an old arthritic condition.

Virtually an unknown in 1932 when President Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed him secretary of the interior, Ickes had become one of the most turbulent figures in politics by 1946, when he resigned in a huff.

"A unique figure in American public life is lost to the nation," President Truman commented last night, adding:

"He was withal a true patriot and a many-sided citizen whose passing leaves a void in our national life not easily filled."

Funeral services are scheduled for 2.30 p.m. EST Wednesday.

During the turbulent depression years of the 1930's Ickes was head man of the public works administration. His bitter feud with the late Harry Hopkins, Roosevelt's close friend and head of the works progress administration, made new deal history.

Ickes liberally used his talent for fashioning barbed titles and phrases. He pinned them on people and issues the world over. But political campaigns were his special province.

He once referred to Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential candidate of 1944 and 1948, as "the candidate in sneakers." He called Wendell L. Willkie, Republican candidate in 1946, "the simple barefoot Wall Street lawyer."

Of himself, Ickes once remarked:

"I've known for a long time that I'm not loved with the fervor to which I'm entitled. If a man worked hard at it he couldn't get a bigger list of enemies than I."

The origin of the word "curmudgeon" is unknown. According to Webster, it means "an avaricious, grasping fellow; a miser; niggard; churl."

When Ickes resigned from President Truman's cabinet he said he could no longer stay and "retain my self-respect." Crux of the dispute was the president's nomination of Edwin W. Pauley, an oil man, to be under-secretary of the navy. The nomination was later dropped at Pauley's request.

After his resignation, Ickes authored a syndicated column and a magazine series.

Car Mishap Injures Driver

Gordon J. Stewart, 167 Mary Street, suffered a cut over his forehead when he lost control of his car while driving on Everett Street. The car knocked over a stop sign at the Henry Street intersection before it was brought to a stop.

Two cars collided on Front Street at the Upper Bridge causing close to $400 damage. Peter D. Youngson, Oshawa, was westbound on Front Street, when Albert Harris, Sidney Street, proceeding north on Front Street attempted to make a left hand turn over the bridge. The two vehicles collided , causing roughly $200 damage to each car.

'Tarzan' Women Found

Tokyo, Feb. 4—(Reuters)—Two naked "Tarzan" women have been discovered living on grass and roots in a desolate forest on Kyoshu Island, Japan's southernmost territory.

A doctor said today that he has seen them and that there was little to distinguish them from animals.

They appeared to be girls of about 15 or 17 years. He said they were greatly under-developed, with flat breasts and knees bent by tree-climbing.

When clothes were put on them they tore them off again with their teeth.

The doctor said the girls communicated with one another by uttering strange sounds which had a basis in local dialect.

Three Heavy Storms Converge On New England

(By The Associated Press)

Three storms which brought the United States a wide variety of weather during the weekend converged today, bringing high winds and rain for New England.

One had whipped up a blizzard in the central Rockies Saturday that took three lives, and blanketed the centre of the country with rain, light snow and freezing drizzle as it moved east.

A second sucked dust thousands of feet into the air over much of Texas before settling it with rain, and moved on over Arkansas into Tennessee.

A third, with winds ranging up to 75 miles an hour, lashed the Atlantic coast and drove a 2,600 ton freighter aground off Cape Hatteras, N.C., as it took a northeastward course paralleling the seaboard. The 2 crew members made it ashore in a life boat.

The result was rain over the middle Mississippi and Ohio valleys, southern and eastern Great Lakes region, and most of the middle and North Atlantic states.

The blizzard near Colton, Utah, Saturday stalled more than a dozen automobiles and when highway crews reached them Sunday, three occupants of one buried car were dead of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Great clouds of red dust, swept up from drought-stricken plains of western Texas, blotted out the sun Sunday.

Rains brought the threat of more flooding along the Ohio river in Kentucky and Ohio.

DUPLESSIS BANS RED ALDERMEN

A short time ago, Hon. Maurice Duplessis, the premier of Quebec, announced that Quebec was going to have a law which would prevent certain types of undesirables from occupying such elective positions as municipal councillors. The new legislation, (which was probably prepared by Mr. Duplessis himself, or at least under his close supervision), was approved by the Union Nationale government of Quebec and placed upon the statute books.

Last Monday, the 1952 Montreal city council began operating, and so did Mr. Duplessis' new legislation. Councillor Harry Binder, Labor-Progressive (Communist) party organizer who was elected to the Montreal city council at the last election, was refused permission to attend the meeting. When Mr. Binder appeared at the city hall just before the council meeting started, he was informed that he came within the compass of the new legislation and that he was not entitled to the emoluments and prerogatives of a city councillor.

Mr. Binder, it was explained, had been disqualified as a councillor by a Quebec Supreme Court ruling, based on proof that he had been convicted in 1931 and again in 1940. When Mr. Binder contended that he has appealed against his conviction, he was told that he still came under the legislation, notwithstanding appeal, when the reason for his ouster was a criminal conviction.

Mr. Binder made an attempt to see Mayor Camillien Houde, presumably to complain about being deprived of his council seat, but Mr. Houde did not see him. Before he departed from the city hall, Mr. Binder was permitted to collect his mail. He then obligingly posed for newspaper photographers, who, with the instinct of their kind, had divined what was going to happen and had been present to record it for their public.

In describing Mr. Binder's arrival at the city hall, his discomfiture and his departure, one of the Montreal papers said: "As a precaution in the event of demonstrations by Communists and fellow travellers, members of the anti-subversive squad, under command of Lieutenant John Boyczum, were deployed in and outside the building, and uniformed policemen were stationed inside the two entrances of the council chamber."

The Communists and their friends, in Quebec and elsewhere, will call Mr. Duplesis a lot of hard names for having sired this new legislation which is apparently going to prevent Mr. Binder from holding forth as a member of the Montreal council, but Mr. Duplessis probably will not care much. He was never popular with the Reds anyway. In fact, he was denouncing them years ago, when certain other people in the public eye were willing to play along with them and even to become members of one or more of those so-called leagues for Soviet-Canadian friendship which used to flourish during the nineteen-twenties and nineteen-thirties.

GRAY FOXES MOVE NORTH

Gray foxes, at one time unknown in Ontario, are beginning to turn up here and there. Two of them were trapped recently at different points in Welland county, according to a bulletin issued by the Ontario department of lands and forests.

Since 1940, the bulletin says, eight or nine of these animals have been shot or trapped at as widely separated points as Alexandria and Rainy River.

The gray fox is said to be not nearly as sly in evading traps, snares and poison as the native red fox, but he tries to compensate for this lack of slyness by climbing trees when chased by dogs. The vixen, according to the department of lands and forests, is a climber too, and has been known to raise her litter of from three to five pups in a hollow tree twenty-five feet from the ground.

Since the habitat of the gray fox is ordinarily farther south than Ontario, his appearance at various points in this province in recent years adds to the already substantial evidence that the climate in this part of North America is becoming milder.

TOO MUCH CARELESS SHOOTING

Down in Windsor the other day, a citizen who suspected a store was being burgalized picked up two policemen in his car and undertook to speed them to the scene of the crime.

En route, the trio encountered a police cruiser, in which were two other policemen. Perhaps because they thought the first car was travelling too fast, the two policemen in the cruiser pulled out their six-guns and fired a few shots in the general direction of the first car. Fortunately, there were no casualties.

Policemen are given firearms primarily to protect themselves, not to halt speeding motorists. There was a big shake-up in the Windsor police department only a couple of years ago. Maybe it is time for another.

Law enforcement methods learned from either Wild West magazines or from some of those current television programs are not wanted either in Windsor or elsewhere in this country.

YOU AND I

We're important—you and I—
Needed to the day we die.
Much is asked of me and you
No one else on earth can do.

'Twixt our places—yours and mine—
Runs a close dividing line.
On one side, what I should do.
On the other, what should you.

When my chance is passing by,
None important more than I.
In what only you can do,
More important then are you.

On life's journey this is true:
I am needed; so are you:
By the service we supply
We're important—you and I.

THE HIDDEN FIRE

Pile up the logs on the open fireplace tonight and let them burn through the evening. By the time you go to bed, it may seem as if the fire had made little impression upon them. It looks as if kindling will have to be piled under them again before they are entirely consumed.

But the amazing thing is that if you examine these logs the next day, you will find that they have almost disintegrated. You thought the fire had gone out after you put up the screen and went upstairs to bed, but you were wrong. The fire continued to eat out the logs until, when you looked at them the next day, they had been reduced greatly in size and were almost ready to crumble and fall apart. Long after the flames had died down, the secret, unseen fire was eating out the substance of the logs.

Whether it be the fire on the hearth or the fire in the heart, the effect is always the same. The burning continues long after the flame has died down. Just as hidden fire eats away at the logs all night until the next morning they have shrivelled and are ready to crumble, so hidden fires in our hearts, such as jealousy, lust, avarice, and pride keep on burning when there are no visible signs of flame.

The human heart can easily be consumed by flames of which neither we nor the world are conscious.

OUR TOWN

WE'RE ALL YUMMY

The alarm clock exploded at 7:30 and instantly the Advertising Man was wide awake. He smiled broadly at the ceiling.

"Man!" he thought, stretching luxuriously, "This new Foamair Pillow gives you the sleep of your life. No other pillow affords such satisfying, sleep-easy comfort. Doesn't sag or hollow out and so-o-o-o nice to be next-to, thanks to the pure air flowing through its myriad, dust-free cells!"

He sprang out of bed and strode down the hall to the bathroom, whistling gaily. "Breakfast is ready," his wife called from the kitchen.

"Just takes a jiffy darling, for the 30-second workout!" The Advertising Man called to her. "Say you can fee-e-e-el the difference in your scalp when you use St. Vitus, the live action hair tonic. Stimulates, invigorates, gives that natural look, yet St. Vitus contains no harmful ingredients. Just pure vegetable oils and lard."

"Women adore its tangy flavor, too," his wife called back cheerily.

* * *

The Advertising Man shaved and dressed and bounded to the kitchen. He paused in the doorway to admire a charming domestic scene. Little Rollo, his year-old son, sat in his high chair. His wife was dressed in an attractive housecoat and looked like a movie queen. In one corner sat Fido, an immaculate wire-haired terrier.

"We're a Zing-up family!" The Advertising Man cried.

"Yes!" his wife carolled. "We're a Zing-up family since switching to All-Grass, the natural laxative cereal with the locked-in goodness that helps you back to youthful regularity, lost because of a lack of bulk in our diet."

Zing-up families free themselves from laxative slavery," The Advertising Man chuckled. "No longer fired from guns, it's broken up by atomic power to bring you that extra grass flavor!"

"Me, too, Daddy," lisped little Rollo, "I love its yummy goodness!"

* * *

As the Advertising Man spooned his All-Grass he looked at his wife with open admiration.

"Men notice the little things about a woman," he said. "I adore my wife after two years of marriage!"

"Tthat's because I'm Double-Lovely today," the Advertising Man's wife said. "Feetlebaum's new skin creams penetrate deeper, gently floats away dust and grime. Why? Because Feetlebaum's contains the scientific magic ingredient doctors call "Lardggin", made of lard and gin. No other skin cream can make that statement!"

"And your lipstick!" exclaimed the Advertising Man.

"Its' the new color, Kelp, stolen from the mermaids," his wife replied. "Men adore its sultry low-tide flavor, made on a formula that seems to last forever."

"Even children love its yummy, locked-in goodness," little Rollo cried.

* * *

The Advertising Man got into his overcoat, kissed his wife and child and hurried to the door. He paused momentarily to reach down and pat the head of Fido, the wire-haired terrier.

"Arf! Arf!" Fido barked. "I love my boss because he feeds me crunchy Posties, the yummy dog biscuits that taste like mailmen. Yes, it's Posties for this smart dog for they keep a canine's teeth and gums in top condition. Yes, I'm a happy dog these days since my boss switched to crunchy Posties."

"Good dog," said the Advertising Man, turning for the door.

"Remember daddy," cried little Rollo, his big eyes wide with trust and love. "Look to the future for your loved ones. Make your savings grow the Canada Savings Bond way. Our whole family can enjoy the rewards of saving."

* * *

As the door closed the Advertising Man's wife reached into her bodice, pulled out a Colt .45 and quickly shot little Rollo and Fido in the head.

"I'll get him tonight," she mused, "because I sure can't stand any more mornings like this."

Archdeacon Middleton Helps Convert Alberta Blood Indians To Christianity, Civilization

Macleod, Alta., —(CP)— Archdeacon S. H. Middleton is British to the core and a great believer in the virtues of school tradition.

As a youth of 21, drawn to the west by stories of the Indian, he came in 1905 from England, where he had been a carriage maker, with the sole intention of working among the prairie Indians. In 46 years he has found that the old school tie can truly bind a fellowship of man.

Ordained an Anglican clergyman in 1911, he was until retirement last year principal of St. Paul's School on the Blood Indian Reserve south of Macleod and rector of Anglcan parishes at Cardston and Waterton Park in Alberta.

When he came the Indians were poor and suspicious people who went to the ration house whenever they needed supplies, and whose big day each year was treaty time when they collected their $5 a head.

But the people he left in 1951 —moving only to Macleod so that he would still be near them—are the inhabitnats of the biggest (540 square miles) and one of the richest reserves in Canada.

Grew Rich Farming

Their riches were gained from agriculture. In 1949, for example, the Bloods produced 180,000 bushels of wheat, had cattle sales of $200,000. They have moved from teepees to modern homes with hardwood floors and on their shelves are top-selling books, work on etiquette and even the odd copy of Hansard.

Their sons are farming with equipment worth the price of a small house in the city. Their daughters are nurses and stenographers in Toronto, Victoria, Edmonton and even Bermuda.

This is quite a step from a state bordering on the native starvation in which young Middleton found them when he arrived with romantic ideas of boyhood, including the fear he might possibly be scalped.

Archdeacon Middleton doesn't take the credit for all this The government had a lot to do with it. The Bloods have been served by schools of both the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches.

But he does attribute much of it to what he says is "nothing better than the English public school training," and, of course, the old school tie.

Reason For Success

He believes—and, in view of the results, with justification—that the continuity of education in the Anglican school, along with the fact he considers the Bloods an intelligent people in the first place, had a lot to do with the success of education on the reserve.

In his years among the Bloods, Archdeacon Middleton institutes the old country style annual class reunions, the old boys' association, the school crest and colors —red and green—and even the ties themselves. Naturally, they came from England.

The most-prized possession of the archdeacon is his appointment as life member of the Head Chiefs and Tribal Council of the Blood Indians at Cardston.

It was the way the Bloods had of saying "thank you" to the man who introduced them to the old Mokokit Ki Aekakimat—be wise school tie and their shool motto—and persevere.

Personal Health Talks

THE PYORRHEA OBSESSION

It's high time for patients, dentists and physicians to acquire a little common sense instead of the pseudo-scientific buncombe that has long obscured the subject of "pyorrhea."

I shall not waste the precious little space available for this picayune department disavowing a pretense of any superior knowledge. But I do believe I know enough about it to sound off in the presence of patients, dentists and physicians.

In the first place, everybody should get out of his head the notion that "pyorrhea" is a disease of tooth sockets, gums or other mouth diseases, and the notion that it is due to "infection." This conception of "pyorrhea" is as childish and as unprofitable as the notion that you can prevent tooth decay, cavity formation, by eternally scrubbing of "cleaning" the teeth with the latest type of glorified soap or polish or by striving to keep your mouth free from B. acidophilus or other lactic acid producers. It means nothing to the dental or oral research students who embrace the lactic bacillus theory that the people who have the finest teeth in the world not only waste no time or money on tooth brushing but never worry about ingesting lactic bacilli — I refer to the inhabitants of Tristan da Cunha.

This outburst is inspired by a letter in today's mail. The correspondent says he had "nearly perfect" teeth up to the last two years, when two teeth became loose. His dentist made X-ray films (presumably of all the teeth) and told the patient he had "pyorrhea" and advised extraction of all teeth at once to save his health.

This was a shock — it would be a shock to any one only 30, 40 or 50 years old. So the patient consulted three other dentists, and all three advised him to have all his teeth extracted to save his health.

The exasperating part of it is that the correspondent does not say (1) whether the dentist found any particular trouble in or around any or all of the teeth that are not loose nor (2) whether the other three dentists knew that the first dentist advised extraction of all teeth "to save his health."

The implication that it would impair health if some or all of the poor geek's teeth were allowed to remain in his mouth is part of the buncombe about "pyorrhea."

My advice to the patient was that treatment by a good dentist will probably correct whatever trouble may be present in the unloosened teeth, and that even at this late date (the prospectively edentulous old codger is 36) correction of nutritional faults may do the tooth, gum or mouth condition some good. Ways of correcting such faults are described in the booklet Save Your Teeth and The 7 Keys to Vite — for either send 25c and stamped self addressed envelope.

Many dentists will snort at my presumption, but it is my observation that dentists know little about the nature, cause, prevention and treatment of the condition they call "pyorrhea" and physicians know even less. So why shouldn't I tell 'em the facts of life?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Godsend for Bronchial Asthma

The Ca & D supplement for the diet which you suggested, proved a godsend for my husband's bronchial asthma. In fact he had no relief until he began using the supplement daily. (Mrs. B. L. R.)

Answer—Thank you. On written request (no clipping, please) any reader may have the pamphlet on Asthma—inclose stamped self-addressed envelope.

Acid My Eye

I have too much acid in my system. It makes my gold wedding ring leave a greenish stain on the skin. Also my corset strings get black from contact with the metal rings. (Mrs. T. A.)

Answer—So that's how people get the notion that their "system" or blood is acid or contains too much acid. Of course the idea is preposterous. The dark stain is from the reaction of the silver or other base metal in the alloy of which the jewelry is made with sulphur compounds in skin oil or sweat. It is no reflection on the quality of the jewelry or the health of the individual. Use a bit of aromatic spirits of ammonia to remove the discoloration.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

AN INSPIRED BASEBALL FAN

One of the most beloved of all baseball fans recently died in Miami, Florida. His name, Walter O. Briggs, Sr., owner of the Detroit Tigers! He will be sorely missed by a multitude of people, but not more so than by the "kids" he so loved to have as his guests over the years. He arranged to have more than 100,000 of these young enthusiasts admitted to his park each year free of all charge!

Briggs was a multi-millionaire, but he rose from an $18.00 a week body trimmer to become the greatest maker of auto bodies in the world. His greatest hobby was baseball, and he became so enraged one year because he could not get some World Series tickets that he bought the Detroit club and erected one of the finest stadiums—which bears his name —that there is in the country.

Many a pennant went to the Detroit club because of the enthusiasm Briggs had for the game and he was most generous with his players, pouring money into perfecting his club—just for the fun of winning and to give pleasure to the kiddies who became his happy charge. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent, but here was an owner who cared nothing about profits, taking no salary, for this was his hobby and delight. Many a time he probably thought back to the day when a crack in the fence was his reserved seat, and so then and there sowed the seed of a dream that came to full fruition!

It is no wonder that Detroit is one of the greatest baseball towns in all America. Briggs radiated his spirit and it caught on. When the Tigers had a game in town it became almost a holiday. Mr. Briggs was not a well man during the closing years of his life, but he couldn't miss seeing his boys play, and so he saw the games from a wheel chair.

Under the guidance of his son, who now will pilot the Detroit Tigers, I wouldn't be surprised to see some more pennants come to this great club, for the spirit of its greatest fan will forever remain to urge and inspire its players and its fans to greater loyalty and triumphs!

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In case anybody in this depressed and underprivileged generation would like to know what a cream puff used to be like, I for one can tell you.

To begin with, it was roughly the size of a baked Idaho potato. Or a small grapefruit, or a large orange. In shape, it was sturdy, though slightly recumbent, as befitted an object so laden with riches.

The shell was fragile; a rich, autumn brown; and would perish at little more than a thought. On the shell was sprinkled a little powdered sugar.

And inside—ah, inside, was a solid cupful of pure, rich cream beaten so stiff that you could bite it. There may have been a little sugar to flavor the cream, or maybe a tiny suspicion of vanilla. But the vanilla was the pure tropical essence, drawn from an orchid; not the synthetic flavoring that comes from a chemical factory.

Those who know the cream puff of today, a poor little thing the size of a lemon, with a thick hide that defies biting, and must be torn between the teeth and the hand, can scarcely credit the disaster that has befallen cream puffs. No political revolution of the past forty years can compare with it. On the top of the modern cream puff, they smear a little chocolate, as a sort of sop. And inside—pah, inside, is a shrinking gob, an egg-cupful of some synthetic substance that is more repulsive to look at, even, than it it to taste. Doubtless it is made from wood pulp, or is a coal tar derivative, or some other wonder of the age.

Young people today eat these ghastly mean substitutes with as much zest as their elders ate the real thing. Which only goes to prove that progress is a matter of sheer ignorance.

Lafontaine Says Pacifique Plante Toted Revolver

Montreal, Feb. 4 (CP) — The most exciting aspect of suburban Ville St. Michel's election yesterday were the speeches and statements made after the polls closed.

The election result itself was almost forgotten when Pacifique Plante, a former top Montreal police official, and re-elected Mayor Charles Lafontaine issued prepared statements.

Plante charged Mayor Lafontaine with giving orders to have him held incommunicado in a Ville St. Michel police cell from 8 a.m. yesterday until the polls closed at 7 p.m. "I asked the mayor to intercede and prevent a miscarriage of justice but he answered 'bring them in' to the police," Plante said.

During the day, some 40 persons were arrested. Although some of those detained, including two candidates for alderman and the wife and sister-in-law of another were released, about 35 men were held in the town's two cells at police headquarters until polls closed.

Duplessis Silent

Earlier in the day, Premier Duplessis, informed of the situation in Quebec, expressed surprise but had no comment to offer. The Premier is also the province's attorney-general.

Mayor Lafontaine said that Plante was a man who wanted to be "police chief, premier of Quebec, prime minister of Canada and the Pope if that was possible."

Lafontaine said he will also have legal action taken against Plante for carrying a revolver during election day in his municipality. Mayor Lafontaine is also a city councillor of Montreal.

Pacifique Plante said he had gone to the municipality as an election observer on the invitation of C. E. Bertrand, legal counsel for Adelard Boisvert, defeated mayoralty candidate.

Had Stormy Career

Mr. Plante said he has not decided whether he will take legal action against Ville St. Michel officials.

Mr. Plante was a storm centre from the time he was named head of the Montreal morality squad and then assistant police director in 1947. The Canadian Brotherhood of Policemen protested the appointment because Plante was a police legal advisor and not a policeman.

As head of the moralty squad he earned the enmity of the gamblers by a campaign to close down their houses which had operated more or less openly for years.

After Police Director J. Albert Langlois, fired him, Mr. Plante joined a group of citizens who successfully promoted a now-stalled judicial inquiry into the conduct of the police department.

WILL DONATE ORGAN

Eden, Schuman Conclude Talks On Many Issues

Paris, Feb. 4 — (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Britain and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France wound up talks today on the stubborn problem of what to do about arming Germany and said they were in "complete agreement."

The communique didn't say what they agreed on.

Eden, however, renewed a British promise to work "as closely as possible" with a unified six-country European army, now in the troubled process of formation.

Prime Minister Churchill gave a similar pledge in December, but reiterated Britain's refusal to join the army itself.

The problem before the two diplomats was to agree on how many guns they think Germany should have to join in western defence, and how soon she should have them. Presently projected for Germany are 12 divisions, plus small naval units and an air force of 1,500 planes.

The European countries want to keep the United States from forcing what they think may be too speedy rearmament of the late enemy. But they don't want to slow things down so much it will discourage American participation in European defence or invite Russian pressure.

Eden arrived yesterday to tell Schuman about the Washington talks he and Churchill had with President Truman and State Secretary Dean Acheson.

MATERIAL INFLAMMABLE

Toronto, Feb. 4 (CP)—Ontario Fire Marshal W. J. Scott today issued a warning against wearing brushed viscose rayon sweaters. He said the material is highly inflammable.

The fabric is a smooth, finely-woven cloth with a brushed surface or nap on one side. Most sweaters made from it are sold door to door.

Govt. Moves To Settle Strike Of Truckers

Washington, Feb. 4 (AP)—The federal government moved today to settle a strike by some 16,000 A. F. L. truck drivers which has tied up highway shipping in 12 southern and midwest states.

At the same time, truck operations in Chicago, one of the largest truck terminals in the United States, were virtually halted by a walkout of 4,000 AFL dock workers.

Wages were the chief issue in both walkouts by the truckers and dockmen, all members of the A. F. L. Teamsters Union. The dock workers strike against terminal operators was termed unauthorized by union leaders.

Thousands of tons of freight, mostly non-perishable, were tied up as a result of the strikes, both in their second day.

In Washington, Cyrus S. Ching, federal mediation chief, called peace meetings in Memphis, Tenn. Sunday in an attempt to reach agreement in the tie-up in 11 southern states.

Federal mediators also were attempting to end a truckers' walkout in Ohio and the dock strike in Chicago.

Some 13,000 drivers are on strike in the 11 southern states, while about 3,000 drivers working for the Ohio over-the-road Employers Association continued on strike. Over-the-road drivers in 11 other central states were at work under a new contract. A federal conciliator said the Ohio association will continue further negotiations in Columbus.

ritish Seek tandardization f Cake Names

London. (CP)—It's high time e bakers of Britain got together d made life more simple for e customer, says the trade paer, Baker and Confectioner.

Within as little as a 20-mile istance, such things as "a maid honor" can mean anything from almond-flavored tart to a cupaped cake complete with icing d glace cherry. And a "bun af" ranges from a glorified curnt bun to a heavily-spiced fruit af.

Swiss buns, they say, almost odel with freedom and every aker seems to have a different ea on the make-up of the Banury cake.

Trade suggestion is a cakeaming board that would set defite recipes for each name. "Afr all", said the paper, "for a utcher, a sausage is a sausage om Land's End to John O' roats."

Pen Pal Romance Brings Title of Baron to Seaman Who Weds Dutch Woman

Auckland, N.Z., —(CP)— Able Seaman Desmond Thompson of Auckland will soon become a Dutch baron as a result of a romance that started with "pen pal" correspondence.

A shipmate of Thompson aboard a New Zealand frigate serving off Korea wrote to a magazine seeking pen pals, and Thompson was one of the seamen who soon entered into regular correspondence with a girl in Australia.

The girl was a dutch immigrant, Miss Helen Coops. After months of correspondence she and Thompson became engaged, and they were married at Perth, Australia, when he returned from service in Korea.

Only after the marriage did Thompson learn his bride was heiress to an ancient Dutch barony. Under Netherlands customs, if the eldest child of a titled family is a girl, she may pass the title to her husband when she is 21 provided the family agrees. Mrs. Thompson is 21 in February and her family is anxious that the title be passed on.

The barony consists of two major houses, the house of Keppel and the house of Battenburg, a branch of the same house as that to which the Duke of Edinburgh belongs. One of Mrs. Thompson's uncles, a naval captain, is bringing the title transfer papers to Auckland for signature after her birthday.

At present the couple are living in a caravan in Auckland while looking for a house. Thompson plans to leave the sea when his term in the Navy expires and take up farming. Meanwhile their caravan flies the Dutch flag and bears the Keppel coat of arms on the wall.

Mrs. Thompson's father was a naval captain and while his wife and daughter were in a concentration camp in Java during the war, he served in the Pacific with the Dutch forces, at one stage in company with the New Zealand cruiser Leander in which Able-Seaman Thompson was serving. Mrs. Thompson's grandfather is Admiral W. Kamp, of Holland. The young couple have decided to carry on the family tradition and send any sons they may have to the naval academy in Holland.

Mary Goodram of Hamilton Runs Million-Dollar Plumbing Firm

Hamilton, Ont. (CP)— Mary Goodram, brown-eyed and 36, is boss of a million-dollar plumbing business—but not particularly because she knows about plumbing.

"I like working with figures," says the president of Goodram Brothers Limited. "And I enjoy the competition of bidding for contracts and the sense of satisfaction that comes from doing a good job."

Miss Goodram had 15 years experience in the business before she took over the helm two years ago on the death of her father, William Goodram.

From a small office on the company's second floor she keeps in touch with between 60 and 100 employees, most of them men.

"Sometimes I work in the office until midnight," she said. "And I take work home with me four or five nights a week."

Attending to business this way doesn't leave much time for anything else. But it's paying off. In the last nine months Goodram Brothers has rolled up a volume of more than $1,000,000, highest since it was founded 43 years ago by William Goodram.

Associated with Miss Goodram are an uncle, Frederick Goodrom who is vice-president, and secretary-treasurer James B. Boyter. The three comprise the board of directors with Miss Goodram controlling the majority of stock.

The firm will tackle any kind of plumbing and heating job. Miss Goodram has the final say in buying materials, must cope with shortage and fluctuating prices.

Says her uncle: "She's a smart girl and she was well educated in the business by her father. She is doing very well."

Mrs. C. Holmes Gives Talk at W.I. Meeting

On Thursday afternoon, Pine Grove Women's Institute met for their January meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Brown. Sixteen members and several visitors were in attendance. The president, Mrs. B. Johnston presided.

Several of the members would like to attend the Achievement Day to be held in Madoc on Feb. 16, and an invitation from River Valley W.I., to a social evening for all the branches on Feb. 7, was accepted.

The report on proceeds from serving meals at the Belleville Livestock Sales Barn on Jan. 29, was most gratifying.

Pot Luck Supper

Plans were made for a pot-luck supper to be held on Feb. 29, under the convenership of Mrs. G. Bartendale.

Mrs. B. Johnston, convener for Home Economics and Health, then took charge of the program.

Mrs. F. Finkle read "Housekeeping on a Grand Scale", which told of the tremendous amount of work carried on in the laundry of the Toronto General Hospital.

Mrs. A. Finkle brought the members up to date on current events both at home and abroad.

Mrs. G. Bartendale read "Preserving Flowers in Flour", an idea which seemed to appeal to several of the ladies as worthy of trial.

Mrs. B. Johnston demonstrated how to cover old lampshades with plastic material, thus making them look like new ones.

Speaker

The president called on Mrs. F. Campbell to introduce Mrs. C. Holmes, a past-president of the F.W.I.O., who spoke on "Community Activities and Public Relations", as presented at the Guelph Conference.

Mrs. Holmes suggested that the W.I. devote one meeting a year to a study of the hand book. Miss A. Lewis is to be called director, rather than superintendent as formerly. Community work should be sponsored remembering that the W.I. members are of limited means. Be tolerant, pay attention to small things, show sympathetic understanding to others and if criticism should be necessary do it kindly.

Pamphlets for meetings on "New Canadians" may be obtained from the Department of Welfare.

A panel discussion on "Has the Women's Institute Outgrown Its Usefulness", brought forth the following ideas: The W.I. trains the women in leadership, and they are more helpful in their communities. Makes it possible for the younger women to attend the Women's Institute meetings by having supervised playtime for children of members in another room. The W.I. should be the sparkplug in the community for supplying needs—also the gas and motor.

Publicity Helps

Another discussion on the W.I., was carried on by women of the press, Publicity helps to build up understanding between peoples. Lack of understanding leads to lack of sympathy. Recognize news, be brief, selective, spell correctly, write legibly. When reporting to radio indicate the pronunciation of names. The publicity secretary is one of the most important officers.

Dr. Maria Lance, of Italy, also addressed the conference on U.N. E.S.C.O.

The president expressed the appreciation of everyone present to Mrs. Holmes.

At the conclusion of the meeting the hostess and refreshment committee served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

The February meeting will be held at Mrs. W. Rodger's home on February 28, and is to be addressed by the district president, Mrs. G. Burkitt.

London Clergyman Runs Successful Marriage Bureau, Also Publishes News Sheet

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London. (CP)— A marriage society in North London that charges a yearly fee of 10 quineas for introducing would-be suitors is doing so well it has started a news sheet on marriage problems.

Founded in 1946, the society has had more than 7,000 enquiries resulting in almost 200 marriages and several engagements.

During this time it has gained comprehensive knowledge of the problems uppermost in the minds of most would-be husbands and wives.

To help those too shy—or too busy—to discuss all the aspects of marriage in which they are interested, Rev. R. W. Griffith, a member of the management committee, has written two issues of a news bulletin on foremost marriage problems.

The paper, given free to members, has listed the strict rules on mixed marriages laid down by the Roman Catholic Church. It also gives advice on reading matter about marital problems.

Griffiths advises that wives should know their husbands' incomes and be informed of all expenses. Then she will realize that it is impossible to get more than a pint out of a pint pot." After earning a salary, many women today find it hard to adjust their outlook to financial dependence.

In general, the society find that men are more capricious than women in their choice of a marriage partner. "Many men want film-star types and will not take anything else," said Mayo Wyngate, psychologist and co-founder of the society.

"Men don't seem to realize that film-star types don't come to marriage societies, they get too many chances without that."

About one in five applications to join the society are accepted Clients must answer a questionniare and then be interviewed by the psychologist, who assesses the temperament.

"It would be difficult to find a man with the qualifications laid down by some women," said the secretary. "Many women still hold the 'knight in white armor' idea."

Men of all ages are on the society's books but with a few special exceptions, women must be "under 30."

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Quarrelsome mothers-in-law—Do you fight them or try to compromise?

When it comes to mother-in-law trouble there seems to be two definite types of reaction from wives with this particular problem. Which class any individual falls into depends on her personality and character.

There is, for example, the wife who constantly quarrels with an interfering mother-in-law, living in a continual state of warfare with her. And there is the wife who patiently tries to put up with the irritations and annoyance caused by the mother-in-law, and who honestly tries to find a solution.

Two letters from a woman of the second type tell a 12-year-long story of repeated frustration in trying to establish her relationship with her husband's mother on a harmonious basis. The reason for the two letters, which arrived in the same envelope, was that the first letter was held for some time after it was written, in the hope that things might finally be adjusted and there would be no need to tell the problem to anyone else. The second letter, enclosing the first begins with "Things haven't changed."

In many cases of mother-in-law trouble, the marriage of the younger couple often suffers. In this case, the marriage is a completely happy one, with the husband and wife as devoted to each other after 12 years as in the very beginning. In fact, it is this very devotion that is between them which accounts for the wife having tried so hard to work things out with her husband's mother.

Not Good Enough

"My mother-in-law has always given me the impression that I'm not good enough for her son," the letter explains. "She constantly makes slighting and nasty remarks about me in front of my husband and our friends, and is always trying to interfere in our life. She is not pleasant or friendly to our three daughters, either.

"The wives of her other two sons very seldom have anything to do with her, and they have made it clear to me how much they dislike her and tell me I'm crazy to put up with her. I feel sorry for her, though, knowing she's alone, so I have tried to do whatever I can for her, but nothing works.

"Surely there must be some way to solve this problem without hurting either her or my husband. He has never said anything to her about her attitude because I've asked him not to. But he does tell me that he doesn't want her to come out to see us. I've tried not to be hurt or annoyed with her, telling myself always that it wasn't important, and that my husband and the children were all that mattered to me, but I have kept it all inside me so long that it has finally got me down. Now I have become so nervous about it that I get really sick inside, and feel as though I just can't take it any longer.

"Would it be wise just to tell her that my husband can stop in and see her anytime he wants to, but that I feel things would work out better for all concerned if neither the girls nor I went to see her and if she didn't come to see us? Should I talk this over quietly with her, alone, or in the presence of my husband? I feel as though I never wanted to see her again."

It seems to me that this situation is definitely up to the husband. It is his place, not his wife's to talk to his mother and tell her that if she cannot treat his wife with respect and consideration due her, he feels it would be wiser if she did not see her daughter-in-law and grandchildren at all. This wife says that she and her husband are ideally happy. If this is the case, then he certainly should want to take every step possible to protect their happiness and to shield his wife from his mother's animosity.

This woman has tried long enough to work out her problem single-handed. In fact, I think she has tried too long. She should now make it plain to her husband that while, as he certainly must know, she has done, and will do, everything possible to make friends with his mother, the situation is now up to him.

QUESTION:

I was wondering if you had the recipe for "onion rolls" made with yeast. I tasted them in the ..... store and they were delicious. . . . .Doris D.

ANSWER:

Your request strained my resources. I have only one recipe for onion rolls with yeast, and am not familiar with the product of the store you mention. These are delicious too and I hope you like them.

ONION ROLLS

(A yeast mixture)

Beat in a bowl with rotary beater, electric or hand, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-2 cup soft shortening, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs. Stir in 3-4 cup cooked onion and onion water (prepared by boiling 1-2 cup chopped Spanish onion in 1 cup boiling water until tender changing the water after it has boiled for the first 5 minutes—measure by putting the cooked onion in measuring cup and fill to 3-4 mark with second cooking water). Crumble into this mixture while it is all still warmed by addition of hot onion and water, 2 compressed yeast cakes, and stir until dissolved. Beat in with a wooden spoon, 4 cups sifted bread flour, and when well mixed, shape into a ball, cover with dampened cloth and let rise until doubled in bulk. Then shape into round rolls, or Parkerhouse Rolls, or crescents or horns, sprinkle with onion salt, place on greased baking sheet, cover and let rise until doubled. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 12 to 15 minutes. Rolls may be brushed with butter before sprinkling with onion salt if desired.

QUESTION:

I read your column every day and enjoy it. . .helps out a lot with meal planning . . . . would you please print recipe for rolled cabbage leaves using ground beef or hamburg and rice. Also one for potato dumplings or turnover of some kind. Some of the ingredients are mashed potato, cheese with something else, all put in a pastry, made in a triangle and cooking it in boiling water. . . .Mrs. Ronald B.

ANSWER:

I have sent the calorie charts by mail.

CABBAGE ROLLS

(Kol Dolmer or Golumki)

One pound ground beef, 1-2 lb. ground lean pork, 1 cup raw rice, 1 teaspoon each sugar and salt, 1 chopped onion, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1 small cabbage, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup milk or cream or sour cream. If possible have the butcher grind the beef and pork together and mix with the onion, salt, sugar and pepper. Boil the rice in plenty of salted water until about half tender. Drain and add to meat mix. Wilt the separated cabbage leaves by letting them stand, covered, in boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain them. Put a heaping tablespoon of the mixture on each wilted cabbage leaf and roll into cylinders, tucking the edges of the cabbage leaf in to make it a well-tucked roll from which meat does not escape. Put rolls in greased baking dish, open side down. Dot with butter. Add 1 cup hot water. Cover. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 45 minutes, then pour over them the heated milk or cream or sour cream and continue baking for at least one-half hour longer. The Polish people pass sour cream at table with these. They are a delicious dish.

POTATO AND MEAT TURNOVERS

Make your best pastry and cut it into 5-inch squares when rolled out. Mix together equal quantities of ground leftover beef or pork or raw sausage meat or hamburg, cooked potato dice, chopped processed cheese and meat gravy. Season quite generously with salt and pepper. Add 1 tablespoon grated raw onion or 1 teaspoon onion salt. If onion salt is used reduce the amount of common salt added. Put a heaping tablespoon of this mixture on the squares of dough, dampen edges, fold over to make triangle, seal edges carefully. Make a 1-2-inch gash in top. I bake these, but they may be cooked on top of boiling water, covered, for about 25 minutes. If to be baked bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 20 to 25 minutes. To improve the appearance for special occasions brush tops with beaten egg about 5 minutes before baking time is finished.

The above are wonderful meat stretchers and very savoury when you have about three vegetables to serve with them.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

March in the good-looks parade

To say that beauty is mental and spiritual, that it comes from within, is to get a derisive laugh from the lady shoppers who elbow each other at the cosmetic counter. There's something in that idea of course—in fact, quite a lot—because no matter how external-loveliness may shine, a girl has to be sweet, mannerly and friendly if she is going to make the grade. On the other hand, a woman may have a beautiful soul, but if her hair needs washing, her complexion is dingy and her clothes sloppy, you come to the conclusion that her rating is not very high.

Nowadays there is a standard appearance, and a girl isn't very smart if she doesn't live up to it, She must know that if one looks well, one feels better than if one is badly groomed Cultivate spiritual charm, build character and be kind to your fellow creatures, but don't turn your back on the woman in the looking glass. She is going to be your lifelong companion. You'll see her many times a day. You will have more respect for her if she attends to her pulchritude chores, keeps young and pretty.

Some girls are unattractive to the eye because they have never tried to improve themselves. They don't realize the possibilities that are within reach. Some older women have fallen into a rut of dreary-looking dowdiness because it has never occurred to them to cultivate the dress sense, to educate themselves in line and color.

Good appearance is respected; it is a sort of passport. One does not need a lot of money to create it. Good taste is the directing force.

There are all kinds of ways of making oneself more pleasing to the observer. No matter what the color of a woman's hair, or how little she has of it, a good stylist in a beauty shop can arrange it so that it is becoming and fashionable.

The figure that does not qualify should be taken to an experienced corsetiere. She will select the proper girdle to flatten the curves and camouflage ugly lines.

Mistakes in make-up are common. The purpose of make-up is to supply what nature has taken away. It should never be abused, used to excess. A little is enough, and sometimes enough is too much. It depends upon one's type. A woman with flair can get away with cosmetic murder, but a bit too much lipstick and rouge will throw the mousie, quiet type out of character.

The plain girl can create the illusion of beauty.

Special hints on how to write thank-you note for money-present

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have already received several gifts of money as wedding presents. I know that when I write thank-you notes I'm supposed to mention the gift. But the word "money" sounds rather harsh, and I am wondering how I would go about wording the thank-you notes.—S.

If, as I judge, you don't want to use the word "money" in your thank-you notes, you may more gracefully say "your generous present." The important point about a thank-you note for a gift-of-money is: to tell the giver either (1) what you are planning to buy with the money-gift, or (2) if you haven't decided what your plans are for spending the money, say this and say too that when you do decide, you will let the friend know what you have bought, or have decided to buy. In other words, don't just thank for the money, and let it go at that. Naturally the generous giver would want to know what your plans are, now or later. For example:

Dear Aunt Kate:

How very kind you and Uncle Jim were to send me such a wonderful wedding present! Bill and I thank you both, with very special thanks, for your dear message of good wishes and for your generous present. We have dreamed of having a mirror over the fireplace in the living-room of our new home—and now, thanks to your goodness to us, our dream can come true. Very soon we are going to step forth together to choose this treasure, and when we return from our wedding trip, we want to have you two dears come very, very soon to see us and to "meet" the wedding present you gave us!

Our dearest love to you both, our deep thanks, and our happy anticipation of seeing you on "the" fourteenth.

Lovingly,

What bride's mother wears at semi-formal wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter's wedding in May is to be a semi-formal church wedding. Bride to wear ballerina-length dress, short bridal veil; her one attendant, maid of honor, also to wear a ballerina-length dress, small hat. What is your suggestion that I wear? (I'm rather tall, slim, size 10.)—Mother of the bride.

How about a dress-and-bolero ensemble, ever-popular with the mother of the bride? As you are slim, you can wear the very short bolero, much smarter than the longer bolero or jacket. Dress and matching bolero perhaps of lovely, thin taffeta, or lace, or lace over taffeta, or a soft crepe. Sleeves either long or, more popular this season, just below the elbow; with this length, medium-length gloves, white or off-white, soft suede. Skirt street-length, since the bride and her attendant are not wearing long dresses. Small, smart hat. Choose your most becoming shade for your dress. . . .not too light, please. . . . perhaps a rich jewel-tone. Simple shoes, and of course they must be comfortable . . . opera pumps, perhaps, or sandals, definitely of simple design. Afternoon purse, perhaps flat, envelope type. And your corsage (tell your daughter, when she orders it in her bridegroom's name) should be on the small side, simple too, for this type of wedding.

Red Wings, Bruins Better Spots In Weekend National League Games

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

KINGSTON HERE TONIGHT!

It's East and West night tonight in the senior hockey loop with the Petes and Eagles tangling and the Kingston Sacs guests of the Hawks at Memorial Arena. At the moment the Petes and Eagles are one and three in the standing processions with Hawks and Kingston second and fourth. Petes have 26 points, Hawks, 24, Eagles 19 and the Sacs 17. So you can figure out from that what can happen and how it will affect the standing.

A Hawks win and Petes defeat will create a tie for top slot with Eagles increasing their third place pointage. A win for Kingston and the Petes will see the Ellismen increase their lead and the Sacs draw on even terms with the Eagles.

Kingston drew a blank against the fast-travelling Petes on Friday night while the Hawks were being nosed out by the Eagles. Tonight should be another tough battle as the Hawks shorthanded as they are put up a terrific battle against the three-platoon Eagles and almost won the tilt at that. It's a dogfight all the way, and with the playoffs over the horizon all the squads must go all out from now on.

* * *

CLOSE BATTLE!

The Hawklets go to Kingston tomorrow night to take on Max Jackson's Vics in a junior "B" tilt and in an effort to retrieve some lost ground. They lost a lulu of a tilt up Peterborough way last Friday when the surging Links staged a spirited third-period rally to score a trio and take the nod. George Jacklin, celebrated his return to action with the two Hawks goals besides turning in a grand performance otherwise. Munro could not make the trip, and brethren do the kids miss young Marse Henry Brown behind the blueline. However like the seniors the younkers are on the home stretch, in fact they have but three games left, including tomorrow night's game.

The Hawklets were demoted to second slot over the weekend after Lindsay Kinsmen defeated the Kingston Vics Saturday night in Kingston by a 9-2 score. Lindsay now one point up has 28 points with four games to play; Hawks have 27 with three to go; Peterborough has 18 points with three to play and Kingston has nine points with four to go.

Coach "Red" Doran said yesterday that Billy Strahan will see action tomorrow night against Kingston. That means the production line of Strahan, Jacklin and Lalande will once more be together again and that should make quite a difference.

MINOR HOCKEY

Ontario Minor Hockey Association Secretary Jack Christie has notified Secretary Dick Beare of the Belleville Hockey Association that the first round of the "A" series must be completed by February 23rd.

The OMHA also reminds teams in all series that for the first and second round playdowns, the visiting team supplies the referees and the home team the linesman. It appears there was a typographical error in the printed notification mailed out for the first round.

And speaking in lighter vein of the OMHA, we are given to understand the honorable executive holds a summer meeting in some sunny spot far from the madding crowd; the city din, turmoil and whatnot. Personally we feel that minor hockey people of this neck of the wood (Lower Canada to the OMHA) should extend an invitation to President Herb Parker and his merry men to hold this meeting in this district. It would not only be a delightful place in which to conduct official business, it would be educational to these gentry from the Western Ontario hinterland. There are plenty of delightful summer spots in the vicinity of Belleville where the Parker-Christie yeomanry could enjoy themselves and be shown some real "Lower Canada" hospitality. Maybe they could squeeze enough room in a trailer to bring along rotund Bunny Morganson. What about it, Sam Tweed?

OLDTIMERS PRACTICE!

Bill Green's and "Toots" Holway's Oldtimers swept into willing if somewhat creaky action in a practice session over the weekend and and the railbirds especially the younger fry, were somewhat amazed at the agility and oldtime skill that is still apparent in the aging bones of the "Whiskers" and the "Wrinkles."

Over 20 turned out for the workout, with the session ending in a brief "game" between two teams of the ancient hockey mariners. The oldboys haven't forgotten the stick-handling art even if they do skate at second-gear speed. Some of the younger "oldsters" amazed the spectators with flashes of speed and puck-craft and all-in-all the faithful should see quite a hockey spectacle come Friday evening.

The "red-and-white" that brought championships to Belleville in the old days will be in evidence on Oldtimers Night next Friday. The teams will wear sweaters of these colors with one donning white with red stars and the other red with white stars. The insignia will be "Oldtimers".

"Hank" Fenn and Benny Bowen held down the cage jobs at the workout with "Toots" and "Bouncer" Holway in a defence spot. Murney Green and Bill Canning also played defence while up front were Bill Cook, Al Wardhaugh, Jimmy McGuire, Pete Morgan, Henry Canning, Johnny Canning, Bob Hull, Bob Scott, Gene Rosebush, Derb Jeffery, Sam Symons, Vern Weir, Stan Hagerman and others of the association will be on hand Friday night.

Wheezing like a couple of broken down calliopes were the 'Flick and Flack' of Oldtimers that pair of Jacks, McNab ("It Slays to Play") and Devine ("To Play Sport, you gotta be able to skate"). These corpulent left-and-right bowers wearing small mattresses fore-and-aft to disguise early-life obesity grunted and groaned their way twice around the ice surface. McNab lowered his colors after the first broadside and Devine drifted ashore after being torpedoed by a "Toots" Holway submarine attack. 'Twas good fun — for the spectators.

ARRESTED FOR THEFT

Toronto, Feb. 4 (CP)—Geliask Pavloff, 27, couldn't speak English but police said he knew how to open both English and Canadian-built automobiles. He was arrested last night and charged with theft from cars around the University of Toronto. Police used a German-English dictionary to question him.

Detroit Five Ahead of Leafs Who Couple Tie With Loss, Boston Solid in 4th Position

(By The Canadian Press)

Although five games went by the National Hockey League boards during the weekend, only Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins managed to better their positions in league standings.

The league-leading Wings ran true to form in tying Canadiens 2-2 Saturday at Montreal and rallying for a 4-3 victory over New York Rangers at home Sunday. The Bruins provided their surprise with a 1-1 Saturday deadlock against the Maple Leafs at Toronto and a 1-0 victory over Montreal Sunday in Boston.

Detroit's three points moved them back into a five-game lead over Toronto who were able to pick up but a single point on their weekend play. After the 1-1 tie with the Bruins, the Leafs bowed 3-1 to the tail-end Black Hawks in a Sunday afternoon game at Chicago.

Boston Two Up

Boston, with the Toronto tie and the win over Montreal, pulled two full games up on fifth-place New York who failed to gain.

At Toronto, it was Johnny Peirson who opened the scoring at 8.53 of the second period on passes from Red Sullivan and Jack McIntyre. Tod Sloan got the equalizer at 2:03 of the final session when he tipped Sid Smith's pass-out towards the Boston cage. The puck hit Jim Henry, bounced once and then trickled beneath his pads for the goal.

Gus Mortson, Leaf defenceman, collected four penalties, one of them for a tangle with Boston rookie Leo Labine which threatened wholesale warfare as players of both clubs joined in a general shoving match.

Ted Lindsay and Freddie Glover gave Detroit a 2-0 second-period lead at Montreal Saturday. The Canadiens then poured on the steam with Dickie Moore getting their first counter at 7:37 of the final session and Billy Reay evening the count with less than three minutes remaining.

Gee Whizzes Two

George Gee was the Sunday afternoon matinee idol at Chicago, rapping in two goals in the Black Hawks' 3-1 win over Toronto. He broke a 1-1 first-period deadlock and then lifted the puck into an empty net late in the third session to put the game on ice.

Max Bentley scored the Leafs' lone marker to give them a brief lead, but rookie Fred Hucul tied it up minutes later.

A crowd of 11,335 turned out to watch the afternoon clash. The Hawks have been trying day games to beat the stay-at-home television attractions.

Big Ed Sandford banged in Boston's lone goal to provide the edge for Bruins' 1-0 victory over Canadiens last night. Dunc Fisher and Bill Quackenbush received assists on the second-period marker.

Jim Henry registered his fourth shutout of the season.

Ted Lindsay scored with 19 seconds left last night for Detroit's home victory over the hapless New York Rangers. It was a point-blank drive which didn't give Chuck Rayner a chance.

Herb Dickinson and Wally Hergesheimer gave New York a 2-0 lead before Gordie Howe and Fred Glover evened it up midway through the second session. Steve Kraftcheck gave the Rangers lead once again, but Red Kelly tied the game at 13:14 of the final.

No games are scheduled tonight, Chicago is at Boston tomorrow and New York is in Toronto Wednesday night.

Synthetic Resin May be Answer To 'Wet' Games

New York, Feb. 4 — (AP) — Branch Rickey, general manager of Pittsburgh Pirates, is going to try a new scientific soil powder on the Pirates' infield this summer in hopes of having fewer games postponed by wet weather.

The powder is krilium, a synthetic resin which transforms the structure of soil.

Krilium enables the soil to hold 30 per cent more water without becoming muddy. It keeps the mud from sticking as badly to spikes and shoes. It makes the soil dry out faster.

It is said to make base sliding easier and balls are said to take fewer strange bounces.

G. Denny, groundkeeper of Dayton Indians, where it has been tried is quoted as saying the cancellation of a single game will about cover the cost of treating the field for a season.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Feb. (AP) — It seems that the old pappy guy, Jersey Joe Walcott, is living up to the finest traditions of the fight game in trying to give Ezzard Charles the go-by in favor of some less ferocious opponent.

Ray Arcel, trainer of Charles, tells in an interview with Milt Gross of the New York Post how he sought to talk Tom Tannas, Ezzard's manager, out of giving Walcott another shot at the heavyweight title out in Pittsburgh last July. That was the fight, of course, in which Jersey Joe finally starched the gizzard.

"What do we need him for?" Arcel says he protested to Tannas. "We had enough of him already. The last time he was coming on at the end. We got nothing to gain."

To which Arcel says Tannas replied:

"Walcott can't beat Charles and I want to do Felix (Felix Bocchicchio, Walcott's manager) a favor. He's a friend of mine. This may be the last one for Walcott and they need the money. Felix is broke. I want to give him a chance to make some before he loses his fighter."

Arcel is one of the few men connected with boxing whom you may believe without reservation, and if he says that's the way Jersey Joe got his fifth whack at the crown, why that's about the way it was.

Remember When

(By The Canadian Press)

The hockey world was shocked by the death of Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, nine years ago today at Montreal. Death came a few days after he had suffered a heart attack at a Toronto meeting of governors of the N.H.L., which he had guided for 25 years since its inception. He was 65 years old.

Marlies, Hawks Biltmores Retain Top Positions

(By The Canadian Press

Toronto Marlboros continued to hold their six-point edge on the rest of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A race today after coming through with a decisive 5-1 Sunday afternoon triumph over Toronto St. Michael's at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The victory kept Dukes three games in front of Guelph Biltmores, who trounced Waterloo Hurricanes 12-5 Saturday night while Galt Black Hawks held third place with a 6-1 win over Windsor Spitfires.

Kitchener Greenshirts garnered a 4-2 overtime win from St. Catharines Teepees to hurdle their opposition into fifth spot a single point behind the fourth-place St. Michael's crew.

In the only other Saturday Junior A clash, Oshawa Generals came up with their second win of the week, a 5-4 decision over Barrie Flyers. It hoisted them out of the cellar, a single point up on Windsor.

In Senior A O.H.A. tussles, the league-leading Stratford Indians nosed out Owen Sound Mercurys 7-6 while Sarnia Sailors came through with a 4-1 victory over Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

Bert Savage scored two of Sarnia's goals while Harry O'Connor and Goose Gosselin added the others. Harry Psutka saved the home town Dutchmen from a shutout.

Pittsburgh Wins Two to Extend A.H.L. Lead

(By The Canadian Press)

Pittsburgh Hornets continued their winning ways in the American Hockey League during the weekend, downing Buffalo Bisons 5-1 Saturday and shading Indianapolis Capitals 4-3 Sunday.

The leaders of the league's Western Division now have 73 points, 11 more than the second-place Cleveland Indians.

Hershey Bears, leaders of the Eastern Section, came through with a 4-1 decision over Syracuse Warriors Saturday. They did not play Sunday. They have a 10-point lead over Providence Reds.

In other Sunday games, Cleveland downed Providence 7-3 and Cincinnati outscored St. Louis 5-3. Saturday, it was Cleveland 6 Cincinnati 2, and St. Louis 6 Indianapolis 4.

At Indianapolis, defenceman Tim Horton's third-period tally gave Pittsburgh the triumph. Johnny McLelland led the Hornet attack with two goals and Don Morrison got the other. Enio Sclisizzi, Francis O'Grady and Larry Zeidel scored for the Caps.

At Providence, Cleveland stretched their unbeaten string to seven straight by rallying for a 7-3 victory over Providence.

After Ray Laplante and Zellio Toppazzini put the Reds ahead in the first period, the Barons rallied for two goals in the middle of the opening session and rammed in five more in the final two periods.

Teen-Age College Student Enters 100-Mile International Dog Derby

By CECIL SMITH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Feb. 4—(CP)— A 15-year-old college student will be mushing along with top Canadian and United States drivers when the gun goes off for the annual three-day, 100-mile International Dog Derby here Thursday.

Fernand Telmosse of nearby Deschenes, Que., who divides his time between studying for entrance to Laval University and his natural love of racing dogs, will hit the gruelling trail with six hounds and Labrador retrievers. For the top finishers there is $5,000 in prizes and a gold challenge trophy.

No Novice

Fernand, no novice, already owns a fair share of trophies. At the age of 12 he won the Juvenile championship during the 1949 Winter Carnival. His father, Hubert Telmosse is his manager, coach and general guide.

Mr. Telmosse also is a former racer of some reputation. He competed against the present derby champion, 38-year-old Emile Martel of Loretteville, Que., when Fernand was a baby.

Fernand doesn't give himself much of a chance of taking any of the major prizes. He only wants the experience this year. However, he ran a close third to Sgt. Dinny Hayes of Ottawa — being sponsored by the Army — last week in a 20-mile race. And he only used four dogs.

His time for that distance was comparable to derby speed, but his dogs are an unknown quantity at the 100 miles for the big race which is run in three daily heats of 33 1-3 miles.

Also young Fernand is having troubles. His lead dog, "Rex" is too old for the kind of competition encountered in the 100-mile race and he has been training another for the lead role. He doesn't know how the new dog will be.

Australian Tennis Officials Tired Of Being 'Kicked Around' by Yanks

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Feb. 4—(AP)—Russell B. Kingman, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, has issued a formal statement to the effect that his organization loves the Australian association.

He says it all was rigged up somehow by the newspapers of the U.S. and Australia. He dismissed the subject by saying that the U.S.L.T.A. has invited its Aussie pals to enter the championships at Forest Hills next summer.

Having some first-hand knowledge of the situation, we are afraid it is not that simple. If he should ask us, we could advise Kingman that there is a controversy, and that he will know a good deal more about it before he retires from the presidency next January.

The high men in Australian tennis have become exasperated, to put it mildly, with their American opposites. They feel they have had a kicking around, and they are tired of it.

Money Question Rankles

They were angry this winter on two counts, that the American Davis Cup team refused to play exhibitions at Brisbane and Adelaide and that only one member of the squad, Dick Savitt, stayed over to play in the Australian championships. Ham Richardson, the junior, was not officially a member of the cup team.

The question of money also rankles the Aussies. Their cup teams have played in the U.S. in recent years for comparative peanuts, wheras this winter the American team brought home a barrel of dough from the sold-out matches against Sweden at Melbourne and the equally-packed challenge round against Australia at Sydney.

One of the four top men of Australian tennis sat in our room the day after the challenge round ended and said his say. The longer he talked the more agitatted he became, and after an hour he was pretty well worked up.

Our friend's blood pressure would not have been lowered if he had sat in on the recent annual meeting of the U.S.L.T.A. No one thought it worthwhile to mention the Aussies' grievances, but there was a great deal of happy talk about all that lovely money brought back from Australia. Some of the brethren practically drooled.

Frank Stack May be Out Of Olympics

By JACK SULLIVAN

Oslo, Feb. 4 — (CP) — Frank Stack of Winnipeg, one of Canada's all-time speed-skating greats, may be forced out of the Olympics due to an injury. The 46-year-old skater said he has a torn cartilage in his left knee and hasn't skated in more than a week.

Stack told the Canadian Press in a telephone interview that he injured the knee while practising at Lehammer, about 40 miles north of Oslo, with other members of the Canadian team.

At Oslo, manager Thorney Pickering said the four-time Canadian champion will be examined by a doctor when he arrives here. He is expected late this week.

Believed to be one of the oldest competitors in this sixth Olympiad, Stack is entered in the 500 and 1,500-metre races. He confidently expected to win points for Canada just as he did in 1932 and 1948 games.

"I never felt better in my life until this happened," Stack said. "I've been skating better than in 1948," when he tied for sixth place in the 500 metres at St. Moritz with a time of 43.6 seconds, just one-half second off the winner's mark.

"We'll do everything possible for Frank," Pickering said. "It would be a shame if he could not compete in his third Olympics, and we are certainly not giving up hope . . . he is one of the greatest competitors in the games."

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

The Ontario Lacrosse Association has turned down a suggestion that it break from the Canadian body and says it's quite happy with the way things are being run.

This suggested break came from the inter-city box lacrosse commission in Vancouver and got a flat "no" from all delegates at an O. L. A. meeting in Toronto Saturday.

The British Columbia group asked that the Ontario body sever all ties with the Canadian Lacrosse Association and conduct its own Mann Cup series—the Canadian championships for senior teams.

The west coast group, which is independent of the British Columbia Lacrosse Association, objected to several points in the Canadian constitution that raised a rhubarb last year when Vancouver Combines and Peterborough Petes clashed for the dominion title.

Howie Meeker announced yesterday in Galt that he will retire from professional hockey with Toronto Maple Leafs at the close of this season. Next winter he hopes to coach Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen in the Ontario Hockey Association circuit.

Washington State College yesterday captured the team championship at the annual intercollegiate ski meet at Banff, Alta.

The district attorney's office in New York is probing Dodgers ticket sales during the 1951 baseball season. Chief Assistant District Attorney Edward Silver said the shortage was reported to him Tuesday by Dodger president Walter O'Malley.

Elwin (Preacher) Roe, acclaimed as one of the best National League southpaw pitchers since Carl Hubbell, has signed his 1952 contract with the Dodgers at possibly the biggest salary ever paid a Brooklyn Dodger. It was believed around $30,000.

Folks in St. Paul, Neb., talking about raising a fund to give Grover Cleveland Alexander, baseball immortal, a more fitting burial place may not know it but his widow already has ordered a monument for his grave. After reading yesterday about the memorial fund campaign in St. Paul, Mrs. Aimee Alexander disclosed in Hollywood that she already had commissioned a monument compay to construct a shaft and tablet.

The U. S. Olympic hockey team had more trouble with the fans than with their opponents yesterday as they defeated the Swiss Olympic squad 6-4 in an exhibition hockey game in Qurich. Some of the 10,000 spectators appeared to think the Americans were playing too rough and snowballs were tossed from the stands.

Suzanne Morrow, Canadian figure skating champion from Toronto, collapsed in her dressing room yesterday after an exhibition before 4,000 spectators in the Olympic Ice stadium in Garmisch—Partenkirchen, Germany. Miss Morrow, suffering from influenza for the last three days was rushed to her hotel after collapsing. She was reported later recovering.

Kenny Wharram Impresses Tobin

Chicago, Feb. 4 — (AP) — Kenny Wharram, 18-year-old high scorer from Galt Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league, played the first of three tryout games with Chicago Black Hawks against Toronto Maple Leafs yesterday afternoon.

He did not score but his skating, stick handling and all-around ice deportment caused President Bill Tobin of the Black Hawks to say:

"The boy impresses me very much and next season, he will be used on a line with Pete Conacher, who is a team mate of his at Galt."

Conacher received a three-game trial — the maximum allowed in order to preserve amateur status.

Carter-McFater May Attract Top Attendance

By CRAIG SWAYZE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Feb. 4 (CP)—Scheduled for the unusual distance of nine rounds, tomorrow night's non-title bout between lightweight champion James Carter of New York and Toronto's Allan McFater has all the indications of drawing the biggest crowd in Toronto history.

Early movement of tickets is better than anything Maple Leaf Gardens officials can remember. In the opening hour and a half of sales Friday, over $1,000 worth of ducats passed through the wickets. More than 12,000 fans are expected to view the clash.

Carter, still trying to shake off an eye injury received Jan. 21 in a fight with Mario Trigo at Philadelphia, continued working out today. Spectators have crammed the gym watching the Negro fighter's every work-out.

Champion Diets

The 5½-foot champion may be having some trouble making weight for the 140-pound go. Although the lightweight limit is 135, Carter is reported to be refusing butter at meals and going easy on his eating.

The 20-year-old McFater pounded off a few miles of regular roadwork this morning, but is laying off the sparring. Tomorrow will be another easy day for the Canadian fighter.

The bout figures to be McFater's biggest in 24 professional appearances, not only in the ring, but also on the financial side. He drew a $20,000 gate for his bout with Armand Savoie and this one could surpass that.

The nine rounds—a compromise between eight and 10—will not only be the first of its kind in Toronto, but also only the second time McFater has ever gone over eight. He once fought a 10-rounder against Jean Richard in Montreal.

However, McFater doesn't think the extra three minutes will bother him much.

West Pointers Would Resign If 'Ousted' Stay

West Point, N.Y., Feb. 4 (AP)—A statement in the West Point Alumni magazine says "the vast majority" of the 2,400 cadets at the military academy would resign in protest if any of the 90 ousted for cheating last summer were "allowed to remain in the corps."

Cadet D. C. Ahearn, of Winthrop, Mass., who prepared the statement, said the information was obtained in a poll of students.

The cadets were ousted for violating the academy's honor system by cheating at examinations. Many were football players.

There is no reason why you should not make defensive bids with complete assurance. Every bid has a clear cut meaning. Every answer thereto has a different niche to fill.

Take the case of a jump overcall. It promises eight tricks and a rebiddable suit. Thus, partner with two or three tricks must know that the partnership has a game in that suit. Or a good try for it.

But there is another thing the partner must know right quick. Since the jump overcall promises a rebiddable suit, adequate support for this suit is then less for a suit that is only biddable.

Adequate support for a biddable suit is three cards if one is a queen or better; or any four cards in it. Whereas adequate support for a rebiddable suit may be one card less.

Thus, if a player makes a jump overcall, partner may assist it at once with only two cards if one is a queen or better; or three of any kind in that suit. Even though the jump overcaller bid it only once.

South opens with a bid of one diamond. West jump overcalls with two hearts. North passes. You have the east hand shown here:

♥Q 7
♦8 4 3 2
♣K 9 4 2

Your hand contains three tricks; a king, a queen, and a short card in hearts. Follow T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump; the order of choice of bids. With no biddable suit for takeout, you assist.

Ordinarily, three small or a queen and one are not enough for an assist of a suit bid once. But the jump overcall shows a suit that could be bid twice. So, your queen and one of hearts is enough support.

You know that west has eight tricks. Your assist to three hearts will tell him you have at least two. West will then go to four hearts unless he has other information to give you first.

In any event, your assist says you have help for game in his suit. If he stops short of game, something is wrong with him.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 4 — (AP)—In an era when four children are considered a big family, the Stephen McNallys are an oddity. They have six.

I dropped in at their home to see what it's like to rear a big family in movieland. I found out that it's no different from anywhere else — six youngsters mean a full house.

Mrs. McNally, a slim, attractive woman, introduced me to Pat, 4, a charmer even in hair curlers. Stephen, 6, plugged me with his space gun and fended off the fisticuffs of Terence, 3. Absent were Horace, 10, and Rita, 8, who were in school, and Julie, 13 months, who was doing whatever 18-month-olds do.

"When we first married, we thought we would like to have a big family," explained Mrs. McNally. "And I must say that the children have seemed to bring us luck. With each new child, Steve's career has taken a turn for the better."

The dark - haired actor joined us and agreed to what his wife had said. He said his acting career had constantly moved forward from the time they were married, when he was appearing on Broadway in "Johnny Belinda." The sole exception was after he ended 3½ years at MGM.

"I didn't have a job for 13 months," he recalled. "But that was my own doing. I didn't have an agent, and I didn't know whether I wanted to return to the stage or stick to pictures."

He threw his lot with the movies and landed a contract at Warners. He was then Horace McNally, and the studio wanted a name-change. So he borrowed from his second son the name of Stephen, which actually had been a nickname he and his wife had used for each other during their courtship.

Mrs. McNally managed her family with the help of a nurse, a part-time day worker and sometimes a cook. "I'm doing the cooking now," she explained. "We have trouble keeping cooks for long. They don't seem to like working where there are six children."

Glen Roys Trim Havelock 10-4 In Valley Hockey

The Glen Roys Trent Valley Hockey League entry swept back into second place in the southern division of the loop on Saturday night when they defeated Havelock 10-4 on the latter's ice before a large crowd.

The victory gave the Glens a two-point lead over Trenton and two points behind the section-leading Trenton Flyers.

The winners took over in the first period after Havelock grabbed an early two-goal lead on counters from Berwick and Reid. They rammed home five goals without a return with Cousins vetting two, and Mulvihill, Jones and Loveless accounting for the rest.

Glens outscored the village team 2-1 in the second frame when the best hockey of the night was played with Loveless and Cousins scoring and Reid getting the lone Havelock counter.

Maintaining the offensive the Glens rapped in three in the third period, two from Mulvihill and one from Jones while Havelock scored a single counter from Wilshaw.

The game was cleanly played with nine penalties, all minors handed out, five going to the winners.

Earl Cousins and Brian Mulvihill paced the Glens with three goals and two assists each. Davy Jones came up with a pair of markers and one assist with Loveless doing likewise. Wilshaw with a pair, Berwick and Reid scored for the village team.

The Glens play Norwood in Norwood tonight weather permitting.

CANS PAYING OFF

Hamilton, Feb. 4 (CP) — Tin cans tossed into the garbage by housewives are paying off for the city. Board of Control has accepted a tender for $7.25 a ton for cans recovered at the city incinerator and hopes to receive from $6,000 to $10,000 from the discarded containers.

OGA to Enforce New Delay Rule In Tournaments

Toronto, Feb. 4 (CP) —The Ontario Golf Association indicated Saturday it intends to enforce strictly in its tournaments the new rule for delaying a match.

Phil Farley of Toronto, runner-up for the 1951 Canadian Amateur championship told the association's annual meeting the new rule, arising out of a world rules standardization conference in Britain last May, provides for penalties that the previous regulation lacked.

He said a penalty of two strokes in medal play, loss of hole in match play and disqualification for repeated offence now will be imposed in tournament competition on any player causing undue delay.

Retiring President G. F. Stevens of Toronto told the meeting that the association has been trying in the last three or four years with limited resources to lay a sound foundation in its junior development program. He said the program will be expanded this year.

Stevens was answering Harold Beddoe of Hamilton who said that the $387 spent in 1951 for junior development was too low.

W. T. Hamilton of Toronto RCGA secretary treasurer, said the Royal Canadian Golf Association is not overlooking the development of juniors.

It has been concentrating on the Toronto area and now hoped to have Toronto education authorities approve golf clinics as part of the high school physical training classes.

Robert Abbott, 65, of Peterborough was appointed OGA president for 1952. Other officers include:

B. F. Kearns of Kitchener, third vice-president; H. W. Davis of Kingston, a governor; representing the Northern Ontario Golf Association, George T. Honer of Kirkland Lake.

New directors include A. S. Mitchell, Guelph.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S CARTOON:
THERE ARE NO SUCH THINGS AS GROWING PAINS.
What a child has in such cases is rheumatism. "Growing Pains", in themselves, do not exist. (1. "Popular Fallacies" — A. S. E. Ackermann. 2. Report of Dr. A. Percy Allen, M.D. (London), appearing in 'Daily Mail' August 18, 1921.)

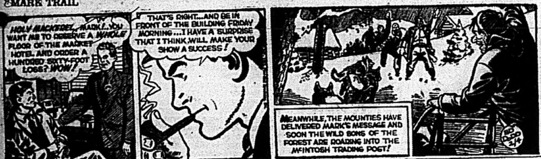
HONESTLY, AUNT ELLEN, IT'S DISGRACEFUL THE WAY SOME WOMEN TREAT THEIR HUSBANDS.
WHEN I GET MARRIED, MY HUSBAND WILL BE TREATED DECENTLY.
THERE'LL BE NO FEEDING MY HUSBAND OUT OF CANS—
NOT WITH ALL THIS WONDERFUL FROZEN FOOD AROUND.

MARK TRAIL



HOLY MACKEREL, MARK!.. YOU WANT ME TO RESERVE A WHOLE FLOOR OF THE MARKET HOTEL AND ORDER A HUNDRED SIXTY-FOOT LOGS? WOW!
THAT'S RIGHT... AND BE IN FRONT OF THE BUILDING FRIDAY MORNING... I HAVE A SURPRISE THAT I THINK WILL MAKE YOUR SHOW A SUCCESS!

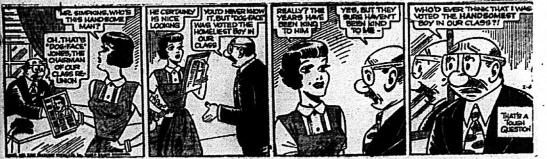
TILLIE THE TOILER — By Russ Westover



MR. SIMPKINS, WHO'S THIS HANDSOME MAN?
OH, THAT'S "DOG-FACE" JONES, THE CHAIRMAN OF OUR CLASS RE-UNION
HE CERTAINLY IS NICE LOOKING YOU'D NEVER KNOW IT, BUT "DOG-FACE" WAS VOTED THE HOMELIEST BOY IN OUR CLASS
REALLY? THE YEARS HAVE BEEN KIND TO HIM
YES, BUT THEY SURE HAVEN'T BEEN KIND TO ME—
WHO'D EVER THINK THAT I WAS VOTED THE HANDSOMEST BOY IN OUR CLASS?!
THAT'S A TOUGH QUESTION

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Tuesday, February 5 ch 21 to April 20—(Aries)— r planet's aspects especially for business honorably conducted, new opportunities in varied fields. Be sincere in effort; success may not come at first but will be solid, lasting.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Outlook stimulating. Be not pessimistic or doubtful of outcome; show your mettle and talents. Many things in good position for advancement.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Pass up any proposition that could reflect on your integrity. You may be tempted. No time to "run wild" but it is opportune for new deals with sound judgment and backing.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Sort of day in which your originality may have first call. Most employment interests, civic and government matters bear close watching and need smart management for good of all.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—May have to toe the mark better. Avoid being vague. Day can round out to ample gain with proper attitude and technique. Make no quick, reckless decisions. Think twice, then act.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Be guided by high precepts. You should instinctively feel this generous day's advantages. Method and completeness of endeavors make for lasting gains. Be true to your best self.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra) — Well directed energy and initiative given this somewhat nil day will afford greater possibility of progress. Every day some can be accomplished, set Libra's strong example now.

October 24 to November 22—Scorpio—Show your innate sunny side and you will be set to mount obstacles and make gains where otherwise you might lag behind. Double ambition and systematic effort for greater returns.

Novemer 23 to December 22—Sagittarius—Much depends upon attitude and willingness to accept trials gamely. We better enjoy what we achrieve by being philosophical, gracious, genial.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—A challenge period to your serious-minded self. You are innately ambitious, practical, economical, and — especially—today you will have to know exactly what you are about. Make it good going.

January 22 to February 20—Aquarius—May need a little outside help; don't be adverse to asking and accepting it — the right kind, of course. Becoming irritated will thwart your purpose so pitch in with good spirit.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—You may seem to lack needed punch, the will to push on. All the more reason to plan carefully and start-early when you are fresh, freer from interference.

YOU BORN TODAY are not generally the aggressive go-getter type, usually gentler, mild. With these qualities, if you attain right education and pray, you can become tops in any field of endeavor. This may seem a large order, but it is yours for the filling. God gave us free will and we are at fault ourselves if we fail. Usually you can fathom matters of science, mathematics, engineering, business detail work or music. Leo, Capricorn and Sagittarius may better help you bring out latent ability.

Birthdate of: Sir Edward Coke, Eng. lawyer; Victor Herbert, American composer; Clark Gable, actor.

Freighter Broken In Two by Storm, All Crew Rescued

Morehead City, N.C., Feb. 4—(AP) — The 26 crew members o the Panamanian freighter leaped safely ashore before today as hurricane - whippe winds broke their 2,600-ton shi in two.

A Coast Guard rocket, fired b a beach party searching the shore line of Portsmouth Island, drew an answering blinker light from the stranded freighter about 2 a m. That exchange of message above the Atlantic's roar was sufficient to give the Miget's crew their bearings. All came over the small freighter's side and walked in.

The captain and his 25 men worn by the all-night battle, were taken to an abandoned Coast Guard station on the Barren Island. All were soaked and sleepy.

Water reached the freighter's fuel supplies yesterday. Soon al power failed. The Miget wallowed helplessly in one of the wors winter southeasterns in year along this coast.

In the night the Miget an Coast Guard PBY plane exchanged flare signals. But Coast Guar boats attempting to reach th freighter were turned back b heavy seas.

The diesel-propelled Miget wen ashore 20 miles southwest of Cape Hatteras. The Coast Guard thi morning dispatched boats t Portsmouth Island to transfer th crew across Okracoke Inlet t Okracoke Island.

A howling storm moving from the south helped this famed graveyard of ships claim its latest victim. The Miget, bound from Baltimore to Morehead City bucked the storm and found herself in trouble. The Miget called for help saying she was losing headway and taking water in her fuel.

The Coast Guard reported th vessel aground on a sand ba about three-quarters of a mile of Portsmouth Island, the southernmost in a string of barren reefs forming this section of the outer banks.

The passing of the storm no northeastward promised to e the rescue work. Winds of near-hurricane force (75 miles a hour) whipped the waters off Hatteras throughout the night. The western flank of the storm brushed the outer banks and was expected to hit the Virginia coast about 6 a.m., today.

Girl Threatened, Then Abandoned In Stolen Car

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 4 — (AP) — Pretty Mamie Ruth Shelton was threatened with death by a gunman in United States army uniform before he abandoned in a stolen car, she told investigators today.

The red-haired 18-year-old stepdaughter of an army sergeant said her abductor fled with her for an hour through the snowy countryside last night after forcing out her two soldier escorts at pistol point.

He warned her: "Don't move out of this car or you'll die," then vanished on foot, she said.

Paralyzed with fright, the victim huddled on the front seat of the stolen sedan until morning, she said.

When it was light, she walked in the cold to a main road and asked for help. Militay police rescued her at Niederdorffelden, about 20 miles from the Frankfurt suburb of Fechenheim, where she was seized at 7:30 p. m. yesterday.

Her stepfather, Master Sgt. F. B. Burns of Hot Springs, Va., said the girl was "perfectly all ri despite her terrifying experie

Thousands of American military police and more than 100,000 German police meanwhile continued the search for her abductor.

Alberta Civil Defence Chiefs Get Everything in Readiness In Case Hostilities Occur

By LORNE BRUCE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Edmonton (CP)—Alberta civil defence chiefs view the oil province as a potential "bowling alley" for hostile aircraft in the event of a Third World War.

Raiding planes skimming the top of the world might sweep down from the north across Alberta on their way to the United States industrial centres, and Edmonton, with its oil refineries and new chemical and ore-processing plants, would make a sizable target.

"Edmonton, as Canada's Oil centre and air base, could well be a primary target," say civil defence advertisements calling for recruits.

To meet this threat, Alberta is building up a civil defence organization which officials hope soon will comprise some 25,000 workers, or between two and three per cent of the province's population.

Nearing completion is a self-contained headquarters, built of heavily-reinforced concrete on Edmonton's outskirts. It will be the province's nerve centre in the event of enemy attack.

Legislation enacted a year ago is in two sections—the peacetime organizational set-up and a law outlining how the civil defence organization would operate after an act of war.

Complete Organization

The province is organized from the cabinet down to municipal committees. A cabinet committee is advised by the commanding officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force and R.C.M.P. in the province.

That Alberta has made fair progress in preparedness is indicated by the word left by Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, federal civil defence co-ordinator, after he had looked over the set-up.

General Worthington told Premier E. C. Manning the Alberta organization is "one of the best in Canada."

"The secret of our success," says Municipal Affairs Minister C. E. Gerhart, head of the cabinet civic defence committee, "is that the entire administration is on a voluntary basis except for a few provincial government employees.

"You couldn't hire the type of men we have heading our committees."

At the head of the set-up is Air Vice-Marshal George Howsam, 56-year-old wartime commanding officer of the R.C.A.F. northwest staging route which developed into northwest air command. Now a civilian, he is using his 30 years' experience in Canada's armed forces to develop a comprehensive plan to keep the production front operating in the event of an attack.

The Alberta organization now has 16 major committees and hopes soon to have operating sub-units in the province's 280 municipal districts.

Mr. Gerhart and the air marshal head parties which give pep talks and organizing advice at public meetings in each area.

Air Marshal Howsam stresses that big bombers have wiped out Alberta's immunity from attack. Russian planes were flying over the North Pole to the United States in the late 1930s. Since then there have been tremendous advances in aviation.

"If there is a war, Alberta is right in the bowling alley," Mr. Gerhart told one meeting.

Busily Training

In addition to paying for the $60,000 headquarters building, the Alberta government is shouldering two-thirds of the cost of standardizing the province's fire-fighting equipment, a job expected to be completed in June. It is also financing a program to put specially-trained leaders in each municipal district.

The provincial lands department radio network, with 150 stations, will be augmented by wireless amateurs to complete province - wide coverage. The network will have one main control in the provincial civilian defence headquarters building, a structure that is "reasonably" bomb-proof even against a "near-miss."

Both provincial and municipal organizations are training personnel as quickly as possible. The province held two "schools" last fall and now has a new series of classes under way for controllers. About 30 to 35 will attend each 16-day course until there are controllers for all municipal organizations.

Edmonton, which trained more than 1,000 persons in first aid alone last year, is starting weekly lectures at each of its district organizations.

Once the planning committees have completed their work, operational exercises will be staged. In the event of war, Mr. Gerhart said, the probability is that the operation of civil defence will remain a provincial responsibility, but the financial responsibility will be with the federal government.

"There is a lot to be clarified," the minister said. "But we're driving ahead."

Scientists Unable to Explain Reason for Freaks of Nature Like Snakes With Two Heads

By PERCY GHENT

Alive when found in an Ontario stream, a young water snake with two perfectly formed heads, died when placed in a tank at the biology buildings of the University of Toronto.

An x-ray examination by the writer revealed that the long spine and scores of ribs were normal. The two heads were perched at the tips of the twin necks, also perfect and symmetrical, which made a "Y" pattern.

How often these freaks of nature occur and what causes them has long been a matter of speculation but with no definite answer.

In the case of two-headed fishes, usually tiny trout discovered in fish hatcheries, it has been suggested that dropping trays of fish eggs a few inches on a stone slab, deliberate violence to kill weaklings, might be a factor.

Three-Headed Fish

Still preserved in one hatchery, is a three-headed fingerling trout. At a government aquarium in Washington, D. C., a two-headed turtle of adult growth lived for years, and probably still lives.

Atomic scientists who have given rainbow trout varying heavy dosages of X-ray to study the physical effects of radiation, have descendants of the original irradiated fish to the fifth generation. Many of the progeny died, however, others were undersized or deformed, but no two-headed speciments have been reported.

Two of the Siamese trout from a hatchery in Calgary, "Happy" and "Slap-Happy" lived for two or three years. They swam, not in the vertical but in the horizontal plane.

Winter Quarters

On a winter day, the question sometimes comes, where is all the life of field and woodland that was so evident short weeks ago? A lot of it is still with us, but in warm quarters and out of sight.

That big, paper hornets' nest still clinging to a branch of some old apple tree can be investigated without fear of stings on a winter day. It is completely deserted, the wasps have found some warm corner under a convenient roof. Garter and other small snakes are huddled together deep within a pile of rocks.

Bats, sometimes in their thousands, will fly hundreds of miles to find some cavern for a sleeping place. Five thousand were discovered in a cavern one winter day, north of Lake Superior.

Burow In Ground

Snails and slugs find refuge under close-packed leaf mould. Some beetles burrow in the ground below the frost line. Many species of insects await the return of spring in all the comfort of cocoons.

Birds and mammals that remain at large during winter's rigors wear warmer garments of nature's making. Bird plumage becomes denser and more intricately interlocked than at any other time of year. Grouse grow protective fringes on their toes; they serve like the long, stiff hairs that in winter adorn the feet of varying hares, as efficient "snowshoes" for safe, rapid travel on crusted snow. Either by thick scales or a coating of waxy resin, the buds of trees and shrubs are adequately protected against biting chill.

APOLOGIES IN ORDER

By Diana Gaines

And then she remembered that she did not have anything of her own. A diamond lavaliere that had belonged to a great aunt on her father's side. Her parents had presented it to her with embarrassing pomp on her 21st birthday. It was out of fashion and she had kept it in the vault, thinking that one day she would have the jewels reset. That was something Gus would never miss, if he remembered that she had it at all, and if he should ever question her about it, she would feel justified in admitting that she had sold it for reasons of her own, since it was not something he had given her nor even a thing she had acquired during their marriage. The pendant was on a platinum chain as she recalled, and the centre diamond was large and pear-shaped, though the tiny emeralds around it were mere chips. She wondered how much it would bring.

Fortunately, Gus had left the car for her because he had expected her to shop for his shorts. This she considered a stroke of luck; more than that, an omen auguring the success of her scheme. In fact the motif of the day had changed from frustrating accident to purposeful integration.

At the bank in the bottom of a safety deposit box was the tiny manila envelope she sought. She unclasped it and slid the pendant to her palm. The fine linked chain curled limply around the beveled edge inside of which the emeralds were muddy and chipped. The diamond itself was clear and many-faceted but smaller than she had pictured it, and somehow sad, a businesslike piece bought perhaps more as an investment or a testament if improved position than to enhance the throat of the beloved.

Of her great aunt Mary, its original owner, she had only the dimmest recollection. A little old lady who wore black dresses and always looked as though she needed a good dusting.

The jewel winked up at her with no more appeal than a piece of rock candy, cutting short her reminiscence. She slipped the necklace back into its envelope, shoved it into her purse, lumped the papers pell-mell into the box, waved the curtain aside, and made bold sounds with her heels.

In Beverly Hills, she parked in front of the stationery store which she regularly patronized, and walked the two blocks to Chagiantz, the jeweler.

The store front of Chagiantz' was a solid slab of black marble. Two little oblongs of window displayed a few wares hung on arthritic knuckles of driftwood.

After the sunlight, the interior was at first totally dark except for small illuminated oblong showcases along the left wall in which Jennet found herself absently looking for tropical fish.

A tall thin mournful boy in a cashmere suit approached her with clasped hands. She stared at his face for a moment thinking that it might have been created by Modigliani, and then at his question, she asked to see Mr. Chagiantz. She was invited to sit on the green satin slip, and while she waited, she helped herself to a dish of chocolates.

When she saw him coming toward her, she did not rise but leaned back against the couch with a coolly modulated "how do you do, Mr. Chagiantz?" Her eyes left only a thin rim of sight and she allowed her lips to part without actually smiling.

"Can I do something for you, Madame?"

"Yes, you can, Mr. Chagiantz. I and Mrs. Logan." She ground her cigaret loosely in the dish and stood up. "Mrs. Augustus Logan."

"Ah, yes, of course," Chagiantz beamed and cupped Jennet's elbow, guiding her to the counter, perhaps so that he could lean against it. "Yes, Dr. Logan, I've known him for years." His eyes twinkled and he pointed to the star sapphire. "I believe we made that for you—and the earrings too, if I'm not mistaken."

Jennet smiled. "Yes, you did. I knew that Dr. Logan traded here. That's why I came."

Jennet fumbled with the catch of her purse. She was again conscious of perspiring and she hoped that the little beads of sweat that were forming under her makeup would not be visible in the half-light. She handed the manila envelope to Chagiantz who had in the space of her fumbling, moved to the rear of the counter so that they faced each other across it.

"I—I'd like to know what I could get for this lavaliere, Mr. Chagiantz. It's a family piece —I don't know how old—but I think it's quite a good diamond, and the chain, of course is platinum."

He turnerd the piece in his hands, the chain trailing, and the smile on his face was one he might have bestowed on a spastic child who wasn't looking. Rapidly the figure Jennet had held in her head sank.

"You are sure you want to sell this?" Chagiantz said, leaning toward her, dangling the pendant from his forefinger. "You say it's been in the family. Perhaps you will have regrets. So often women come in with things like this. Then later they are sorry. But later I cannot do anything. Not a thing. We send stones like these to our New York store. They rework them. . . "

"I'm perfectly sure," Jennet said. "It has no sentimental value.

Chagiantz was in no hurry. There was no one else in the store. He told her of a movie actress who had recently demanded that he buy back some of the things he had sold to her husband. He mentioned the actresses name, which was well known.

The story had absolutely no relevance, no point except name-throwing. Jennet could barely conceal her impatience.

With infinite weariness, Chagiantz sighed. "Just a moment," he said, and he strolled to the back room.

He returned in a few minutes with a magnifying glass bulging like a tumor under his brow. He unscrewed it, set it down on the counter as carefully as if it were his right eye. Then he let the pendant drop in front of her. It made a little click. Was it a sound of quality? Or of paste? Had the magnifier found Great-uncle Barnaby out at last?

"How much?" Jennet asked doggedly.

Repeats Offer of Troops to U.N.

Visited at Taiper, Formosa, by Paul Ginsberg, centre, national commander of the U.S. Jewish War Veterans, Chinese Nationalist Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek repeated his offer to the U.N. of the use of his troops in the Korean war. He said they would be able to convince many communist Chinese to surrender to the U.N. forces. Madame Chiang Kai-shek is at right. — Central Press Canadian.

"Twelve hundred dollars."

Relief made her shoulders sag. She began to tremble. "Sold," she said, mustering an arch smile.

He counted the fifties and hundreds out on her palm, tasting each one. She did not follow the count, but concentrated on holding her betraying fingers stiffly.

He watched her stow the bills into her purse very much as her father had once watched her accept the pendant. "If you should change your mind, Mrs. Logan, don't hesitate to call me this evening or tomorrow morning. I'll be only too glad to return it."

It was the father in his voice that wrung from her the impulsive confidence. "If you don't mind Mr. Chagiantz, let's keep this a private transaction. I. . ."

He nodded owlishly. "I understand. Happens every day. I never talk."

Except about movie stars, Jennet added to herself.

Outside she was amazed to find it was daytime. She walked hurriedly and then broke into a run. She had to get to the Beverly Bank before three to turn the cash into a certified check. Tomorrow she would endorse it and give it to Peter. In that way, Peter would get the credit for having proselytized a friend.

The next day, Wednesday, was Jennet's day at the clinic. She phoned Peter from the booth in the waiting room at five minutes to nine and told him she had to see him about something.

Peter's voice was ebullient. "Then you're not mad. That's wonderful! I thought when you left the meeting so suddenly Monday night . . ."

"I was tired and I think I had some fish at the club that didn't agree with me. Didn't you hear my stomach rumble during the speech? But you didn't call to ask why I left. . ."

"You could figure that one out for yourself. I don't have even minimal rights."

"Yes, yes, I know. Let's not go into that on the phone. Where shall we have lunch?"

"Well, you say it's important. The lunchroom doesn't offer much privacy. There's a little stand that sells sandwiches and milk. What if I pick up some lunch there for both of us—and we can eat it picnic style somewhere?"

"Where would you suggest?"

"On the hill opposite my rat hole near the science building. There's an old elm tree that'll serve as a beach umbrella."

Peter lay on the hard-packed ground, looking up through the spaces in the kinky foliage of a veteran live oak tree. Jennet sat beside him on the car blanket.

"I don't understand you, Jennet. I can't make you out. You have no more interest in the misfortunes of the poor than a—a debutante and yet you went through all those shenanigans to raise this money. Why? Why did you do it?"

"I'm trying to be honest with you, Peter. I don't know. I don't know why I was so moved by that man's talk. Heaven knows I didn't enjoy it. The slums aren't news to me, but still, I couldn't stop thinking about it. And I want to forget it. I'm buying my way out, that's all."

"But a dollar—two dollars—five dollars is all we're asking for, you knew that." He took from his trousers pocket the check she had given him and unfolded it over his head reading it off still unbelieving. "One thousand and two hundred dollars!"

"Don't you want it? Then give it to me. I'll tear it up. I'm sick of it!" Angrily, she reached for the check, would have natched it out of his hand, but he held it away and when she let her arm fall, he slipped the check back into his far pocket. Peter said. "I won't give it back. You won't miss it—and, of course, they need it. I'm just trying to figure out what goes on in that mysterious head of yours. Not that I'm not glad to have the dough."

"All right," Jennet said, exasperated. "I'm an unstable character, a neurotic, an eccentric millionaire. I've got a Lady Bountiful complex. Or, if you like, I'm trying to impress you."

His head moved from side to side in a cradle of his hands. "I wish that were true," he said. "But I don't believe you did this for me. Nor do I think you are getting any satisfaction from it. You give against your will. You seemed to be ashamed or afraid of your good instincts. I have a hunch you're a pretty mixed-up little girl." He said it to the pieces of sky, and when there was no reply he said "are you?"

"I don't know what you mean by mixed up," Jennet said. "Are you asking me if 'm happy?"

"Well?" he prodded.

"Are you?"

"I guess I am," he replied. "I enjoy my work, my independence. Does that answer it?"

"Only in the negative way, I think," she said, very low, and then wondering how much she was saying, added, "that used to be enough."

He nodded and she went on:

"Peter, it's impossible for me to talk to you like this. I'm not used any more to speaking for myself as a single individual. I'm only part of me, the rest is wife. The two are hornswoggling each other right now, it's a nasty humiliating sort of conflict. Anything I tell you of myself reveals Gus, too, and I have no right to expose him to you. Even the word expose is wrong. It sounds as if there are bad things to tell about him, and he's actually a fine and admirable person. Just mentioning his name to you, just thinking about him in your presence makes me feel rotten and guilty and a little cheap—when I want to seem glamorous and desirable. I can say all sorts of things to you, but I can't say them out loud."

"Why—what are you afraid of?"

"Everything." And because to say words like "divorce" to Peter who had not demanded anything of her, would make her sound an utter fool, she fell again between her fences. "Everything," she repeated. "So much so that I don't think we should do this again. Meet alone, I mean."

"I can stand virtue or drama, but please, not both."

$750,000 Fire Loss at Hamilton

Hamilton, Feb. 4—(CP)—Damage unofficially estimated at nearly $750,000 was caused here Saturday by a four-hour blaze that swept through top floors of the four-storey Essex Packers plant.

One of the worst fires in the city in recent years, it caused the loss of hundred of carcasses of beef, hogs, calves and lambs as garine.
well as cured meats, lard and mar-

No one was injured in the blaze which broke out about 4 p.m. and gained considerable headway in the sprawling plant before firemen arrived. At times flames shot 50 to 60 feet in the air. A huge spiral of smoke, visible for miles, attracted hundreds of spectators.

J. Yarem, company manager, said damage might run from $250,000 to $1,500,000. He said he believed the fire started in the smoke house, broke out on the roof and spread across the top floor of the building to the killing floors, which were gutted.

Officials held an emergency meeting Sunday to decide on future operations. The plant employs some 275 people.

SOON IN ACTION

Walkerton, Ont., Feb. 4—(CP)—A new fire-truck delivered to the fire department here got a taste of action minutes after it was delivered. Firemen had just unrolled 30 feet of suction hose to test it when the siren blew for a chimney fire south of town.

HAT STOPPED BLOW

Guelph, Feb. 4—(CP)—A gunman who tried to rob bakery-owner John Black Saturday night was foiled by a felt hat and shouting.

The man hid in Black's car and when his intended victim appeared, leaped out with a gun and demanded money. Black grabbed the gun and the robber hit him on the head. Black's hat broke the blow. "I shouted for help and the man ran," said Black.

Seven Families Forced to Flee In $50,000 Fire

Several Front Street Stores Have Water, Smoke Damage

Seven families were forced from their downtown apartments and smoke and water damage estimated at close to $50,000 resulted here early this morning when fire broke out in the basement of Wotten's Ladies' Wear store on Front Street.

The blaze was confined to the basement of the store, but five other businesses in the same block suffered smoke damage. No one was injured.

The fire was discovered by Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Turner, who were on their way home shortly after midnight. As they walked past the Wotten store they saw what they thought was steam curling from the sidewalk grating.

Investigation, however, proved it was smoke and while Mr. Turner ran to a telephone to turn in the alarm, Mrs. Turner climbed stairs to third and fourth floor apartments above the store to rouse tenants.

All Sound Asleep

Practically all tenants were sound asleep but Mrs. Turner pounded on doors until she got a response and was successful in alarming all seven families. Two of the families, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Browning and Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Fairborn, have small children.

Most of the apartment dwellers went to the street in night attire and as they left smoke was beginning to seep into the upstairs halls.

Firemen rushed to the scene with all available equipment and quickly had several lines of hose pouring water into the fire filled basement. No flames were visible but dense clouds of smoke rolled out through the front of Wotten's Store and from the adjoining Francis Home Furnishings.

Confined to Basement

The fire was brought under control by firemen at 2:40 a.m., and was confined to the basement.

Heavy smoke and water damage was suffered in Wotten's and in Francis Home Furnishings, as well as Janet's Ladies' Wear; Salz and Son Furniture; and Ashley Furs. Smoke damage was also suffered in Hyde and Son, plumbing and heating and in Loblaw's Groceteria

Mrs. F. Russell Wotten stated today she had sold the store February 1st to an Ottawa man.

Although the fire was held to the basement and apartment dwellers were able to escape without danger, all had high praise for Mr. and Mrs. Turner who turned in the alarm and then roused tenants on the top floors of the building.

Smoke Got Thick

"We didn't know anything about the fire and were sound asleep when Mrs. Turner pounded on our door," one woman said. "We had no difficulty in getting out although smoke was beginning to get thick in the halls before all were out."

Not satisfied with rousing tenants Mrs. Turner then thought to call owners of business establishments and advised them of the fire.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance estimated there would be from $40,000 to $50,000 loss in the several business establishments suffering smoke and water damage.

This was the third serious downtown blaze in the city in the past two years. The two other fires occurred only a few doors further up Front Street. One business establishment has suffered smoke damage in all three fires.

British Told Austerity To be Increased

London, Feb. 5 —(AP) — The harsh screws of still more austere living turned tighter on the British people today.

A Conservative government order cutting deeply into steel supplies for makers of goods for British consumption took effect. It meant at once fewer knives, forks, bicycles, motorcycles, refrigerators vacuum cleaners, electric heaters, office furniture, TV receivers, radio sets and many similar items.

This was part of the rigorous program outlined by the government last week to save £150,000,000 a year in imports from abroad while cutting home use of vital materials close to the bone. Three months earlier the government cut imports £350,000,000 a year.

Together with expanded export sales drives, the economy plans are meant to halt the swift rush toward bankruptcy down which Britain and the whole sterling area sped in the last six months of 1951.

Because of the steel cuts thousands of workers—the Ministry of Labor didn't know yet exactly how many—are getting the only part-time work. Some managements warned Labor Minister Duncan Sandys they may have to close down altogether.

The Ministry of Food sideswiped the housewive's purse again. It said prices of rationed foods, including butter, cheese, bacon and sugar, will be raised about one cent a pound to meet rising costs of imports.

Another of the government's domestic economies started a part-time strike by 2,700 coal miners in Wales. They refused all Saturday work in the pits—for which they are paid overtime—"until the Tories restore the cuts in the health service."

The Welsh miners were protesting the imposition of charges for some of Britain's state-run medical and dental services.

Will Use Camp

St. Catharines, Feb. 5. (CP)—Niagara Military Camp, since 1780 the centre of military activities in this area, soon will echo again to the tramp of marching feet.

Maj.-Gen. H. D. Graham of Central Command, last night said that the camp which has been unused since the end of the Second World War, will become a reserve army camp for five weeks this summer.

RESERVES JUDGMENT

Toronto, Feb. 5 — (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal yesterday reserved judgment in an appeal by Amy Bertha Bennett of Ottawa against an order of Judge J. P. Madden of Carleton County giving her husband, Albert, custody of three of their children.

Historians Discover Native Canadian Was Governor-General Long Ago

Ottawa, Feb. 5. (CP)—Appointment of Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey who will be sworn in Feb. 28 as the first native-born governor-general of Canada sent historians here searching to discover if he actually is the first Canadian to hold the post.

Mr. Massey is the first Canadian to become governor-general since Confederation in 1867. But a century before that, a native Canadian served as governor of this country, in the period before the British conquered French Canada in 1759.

He was Pierre de Rigaud, Marquis de Vaudreuil-Cavagnal, born in Montreal in 1704. He served as governor of New France from 1755 to 1760.

He was the son of Philippe de Rigaud, Marquis de Vaudreuil, and Canadian-born Louise Elisabeth Joybert de Soulanges. The father a native of France, served as governor from 1703 to 1725.

Pierre de Rigaud served as governor of Trois Rivieres and of Louisiana, before being appointed governor of the whole of New France.

Writers of early Canadian history say little complimentary about him. Some of the writers state that he was in over-all command at Quebec when the British forces under Gen. Wolfe attacked in 1759.

When he heard of Montcalm's death on the battlefield, he is said to have deserted.

In 1760 in Montreal he personally surrendered New France to the British forces. He was returned to France and tried on a charge of maladministration, but was acquitted.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Feb. 5 (CP) —Synopsis: Today dawned bleak for Ontario with temperatures a little cooler than on Monday. Light snowflurries have been reported during the night from many localities, but these will not develop into major storms.

On Wednesday the sun is expected to peep through the overcast for brief periods in southern Ontario but in northern regions cloudy skies will still linger on for a while longer. Temperatures on Wednesday are expected to compare favorably with those of today.

COST OF LIVING INDEX UP AGAIN TO ALL-TIME HIGH

Price Rises for Meats, Dairy Products Cause

Ottawa, Feb. 5 (CP) —Led by scattered increases in food prices, Canada's cost of living index pushed upward two-fifths of a point in December to the highest point of all time.

The two-fifths rise compared with November's drop of one-tenth of a point—the first slide in 23 months. It brought the index up to a peak of 191.5 at Jan. 2 from 191.1 at Dec. 1, the Bureau of Statistics reported. The index is based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

Price rises for meat, vegetables, dairy products, coal and some other everyday items sparked the December increase. They outweighed small declines in the price of eggs, fats, women's wear and a few other items.

Meanwhile, wholesale prices continued to drop. The bureau's wholesale price index—also based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100—dropped to 283.8 at Jan. 4 from 284.2 at Dec. 28 and continued to decline to 279.3 at Jan. 26.

Food Provides Impetus

It was lower food prices which provided the impetus for the November drop in the general index. But increased prices in the food group in the last month of 1951 pushed that sub-index to a near-record 250.0, seven-tenths of a point higher than the 249.3 at which it stood Dec. 1.

The fuel and light sub-group increased two-fifths of a point to a peak of 151.2 from 150.8 under the spark of higher prices for coal in a number of western cities. Home furnishing prices and those for miscellaneous items also were up and pushed the home furnishings and services group up half a point to a high of 201.1 from 200.6.

Canadians paid more in December for health care, as well.

The clothing group declined under pressure of a drop in prices for women's wear. This over-balanced increases for men's work boots and wool piece goods and eased this sub-index one-fifth of a point to 215.3 from its peak of 215.5.

Forest Fires Destroy Observatory, Equipment

Melbourne, Feb. 5. (Reuters)—Australia's Mount Stomlo observatory, containing some of the world's finest astronomical instruments, was abandoned to forest fires today—the latest victim of a month of fires across the southern tip of the continent.

The fires started in lowland grazing country, then ripped across the tinder-dry grass scrub into the pine forest of Mount Stomlo. In two hours it reached the $1,000,000 observatory compound and its 10 houses and two hostels.

Interior Minister Kent Hughes ordered the firefighters to retire. Smoke and heat held them at the foot of the mountain.

The observatory contained a 40-inch telescope, radar gear, quartz clock and time signalling equipment for navigation.

United States Ponders Closing All American Embassies In Russian Satellite Countries

Washington, Feb. 5 (AP) —The United States today was reported reviewing the question of whether to close all American embassies in Russian satellite countries.

A meeting of American ambassadors to Iron Curtain countries has been tentatively set in Paris for the first week in March to consider the problem closer to the scene.

At the same time, officials told this reporter, American diplomats will try to devise a plan for better protection of embassy personnel and private American business men now in eastern Europe.

Any decision to close American embassies would mark a decided shift in state department policy. Until now it has favored keeping them open at virtually all costs to serve as "listening posts."

Some key officials, however, fear the satellite governments are due to subject all Americans within their borders to a campaign of humiliation, denunciation and possibly imprisonment.

Two Imprisoned

Already two American citizens have been imprisoned on "spy" charges in communist Hungary and Czechoslovakia. Robert A. Vogeler, telephone company executive, was held by the Hungarians 17 months and released only when the U.S. promised various concessions to Hungary.

William Oatis, Associated Press Correspondent in Prague, has been in a Czech prison since last July 2 under a 10-year sentence.

Only last December, Hungary forced the U.S. to pay $120,000 for the release of four American airmen who landed there by mistake.

The U.S. now has diplomatic missions in Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania. The American legation in Bulgaria was closed Feb. 24, 1950, after the communist government there declared the American minister unacceptable on the grounds that he was a spy.

It is understood the State Department would favor keeping the American embassy in Moscow as a last official contact with the communist world, regardless of any decision to close those in Soviet satellite-nations. The satellite embassies in the U.S. would be shut down at the same time their American counterparts were closed.

Adenauer Denies Threatening To Prevent West Germany From Joining Defence Plan

Bonn, Germany, Feb. 5 (AP)—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer denied today that he had threatened to keep West Germany out of the European army and to refuse an Allied "peace contract" until German demands for the Saar and for membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were granted.

The chancellor was reported to have made those threats at a private caucus of the Christian Democratic party here last night.

The latest wrangle over Germany's demands came as the western big three—Britain, France and the United States—were reported preparing to give Adenauer a virtual ultimatum to speed up the lagging talks on the West German peace contract.

A government communique issued today said the report of Adenauer statement "is wrong."

Different Version

The communique added that Adenauer had reported on the foreign political situation and referred to difficulties which have arisen in negotiations in the last few weeks.

The earlier report of Adenauer's remarks already had touched off an angry statement in Paris by French foreign office sources, who said the Bonn government's "regularly bigger demands" might keep Germany out of the family of west European nations.

The German attitude said an unusually stern foreign office opinion distributed by the French news agency, "threatens to make unpractical the policy of the political integration of Germany into the western community which had been willingly followed by the Allies."

Earlier Demand

The West Germans first demanded NATO membership publicly as their price for European army participation on Jan. 27, at the Paris conference of the six nations drawing up plans for the army. At that time the demand was conceded to be a result of France's raising her high commissioner to the Saar to the rank of ambassador, a move Germany assailed as an attempt to pull the Saar further away from her.

The disputed mineral-rich Saar was split from Germany after the Second World War and now has autonomous status. It is linked economically to France under a temporary Allied agreement. The Allies have said that final disposition of the territory must await German peace treaty negotiations.

The contract is meant to give West Germany almost complete independence and abolish the Allied high commission. In return the Germans are to supply a 12-division army for western defence.

Interim Pensions For Blind Will Continue

Ottawa, Feb. 5 (CP) —Pensions to the blind will continue uninterrupted pending the working out of agreements between the federal government and the provinces for sharing the cost of the payments, health department officials said today.

Previously, it has been reported that there would be no federal contributions to blind pensions in those provinces which have not signed agreements. Legislation passed at the last session of parliament provides that the Dominion pay 75 percent of a $40-a-month blind pensions and the provinces the remainder.

However, there will be no federal contribution to old-age assistance for persons aged 65 to 69 pending the signing of cost-sharing agreements, though the agreements may be made retroactive. Yesterday, the department announced the signing of agreements with British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Quebec.

Servicemen Will be Allowed To Retain Pay

Ottawa, Feb. 5—(CP)—The armed forces have apparently won their fight against the controversial move to give part of every married serviceman's pay to his wife in a separate cheque.

Indications now are that the step, scheduled to go into effect for officers March 1, will be dropped or at least modified as a result of clamor among both officers and men against it.

The plan was that pay of married servicemen would be split in two with one cheque going to the husband, one to the wife. It was meant to protect wives whose husbands don't support them properly.

It provoked controversy throughout defence headquarters for days because the husbands considered it an intrusion on their private affairs and an unnecessary indignity.

The controversy has been taken under consideration by Defence Minister Claxton and his aides.

Was Serving 15 Years For Shooting Canadian

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Feb. 5 — (CP) — For the first time, Canada has quietly slashed the sentence and released one of three German war criminals held prisoner in her name, it was learned today.

He is Wilhelm Ossenbach who was sentenced in April, 1946, to serve 15 years in prison in connection with the shooting of a Canadian prisoner of war, a crime for which a German sergeant was hanged.

His release leaves just two men, Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer and Leading Seaman Johann Neitz, in German prisons and under Canada's ultimate control. Appeals for the release of both of them have been lodged with Ottawa a number of times.

Sets Precedent

The Ossenbach case sets a precedent for Canada in early release of war criminals. Six weeks passed between the time cabinet approved the release and notice to that effect was given parliament in brief summaries of a welter of orders-in-council.

Ossenbach was freed from Werl prison, in Germany, last October, a few weeks after Meyer was moved there from Canada. Cabinet passed an order-in-council Oct. 3.

On Nov. 13 brief summaries of all October's orders-in-council, about 500 in all, were tabled in parliament and the summary in this case said: "Clemency in the case of Wilhelm Ossenbach, a German soldier confined to prison at Werl, Germany."

It apparently escaped attention at the time.

Families Return After Flood Waters Subside

Toronto, Feb. 5. (CP)—Six families driven from their suburban homes yesterday by the flood-swoollen Highland Creek today returned to survey the damage as the waters subsided.

Township engineering department workers last night set off 50 charges of dynamite to clear clogged ice and reduce flooding. The winter trickle of water in the creek had bulged to 300 yards, filling houses with water and ice.

Some 100 school children were unable to go to school today when water courses over a bridge and a sheet of ice covered a hill, residents reported. Workmen still are trying to make the bridge passable but it is covered also with blocks of ice, some four feet square.

Two small panel trucks and a car which were carried downstream yesterday have not been found.

Latvian Flees Soviet Embassy After Being Attacked by Diplomats

Stockholm, Sweden, Feb. 5 — (Reuters) — A 25-year-old Latvian fled from the Soviet embassy here today after two Russian diplomats had tried to hold him back by the coat tails.

The Latvian raced through fashionable Villagatan Street shouting "I am being chased."

The two diplomats ran after him and a Soviet embassy motor car parked in front of the embassy also gave chase.

The Latvian, described as a lumberjack, finally whipped round a corner and into a small engineering workshop.

The foreman took him into the office and called the police.

The embassy car and the two diplomats remained outside the workshop gates but withdrew when a police car arrived.

The Latvian, whose name the police refused to disclose, told them he had been working in the forests of Uddeholm, west central Sweden, and came down to Stockholm at the end of last week.

He met another Latvian at the station who offered to find him lodgings. The "lodgings" proved to be the Soviet embassy. He did not realize it until he was inside. Then, he was attacked by five men. They told him they would take him to Stockholm airport for sending to the Soviet Union.

He drew a knife. They seized it and slit the linings of his pockets, saying they were searching for "secret messages." But the Latvian found himself free and ran.

Latvia is one of the little Baltic republics which Russia has incorporated. Russian embassies regard Latvians now as Russian citizens who should be sent back to Russia when found west of the iron curtain.

Three Airmen Die After Plane Hits Tower Earlier

Several Others Narrowly Escape Death in Accident

Carman, Man., Feb. 5. (CP)—Six men plunged to their deaths here Monday—three repairmen in the collapse of a radio station's damaged tower and three airmen who died when their plane hit the tower earlier in the day.

Three air force personnel—an R.C.A.F. staff pilot and two R.A.F. student navigators—died at noon when a Beechcraft aircraft struck the 570-foot transmitting tower of radio station CBW plummetted to earth and burned.

Around midnight, the badly-damaged tower shivered momentarily and broke apart. It carried the three workers in its plunge to the ground. All were killed.

The pilot of the twin-engined plane was identified as FO. Charles Chow-Leong, 29, of Lethbridge. Names of the RAF students were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin. The three repairmen were identified as Ronnie Erickson, about 20, of Tyndal, Man.; Walter Burtnyk, 28, of Winnipeg; and J. A. Dyck of Grunthal, Man.

The three carried to their death with the tower were employed by the Dominion Bridge Company to repair guy wires on the structure broken by the impact of the plane.

The tower, itself was bent 80 feet from the top. The broken section swaying as much as 30 feet off centre. The workers were hastily making repairs in the light of a powerful searchlight.

Climbed Narrow Staircase

The men reached the top section of the tower by climbing a narrow staircase inside the steel girders. Two were working at the bent section, about 500 feet above ground. The other was at the 250-foot level.

Suddenly a strong wind struck the tower. It shook violently and the bent section started to sway, then hurtled to the ground. The two workers were trapped inside.

The motion of the collapsing top section caused the complete tower to waver.

Girders snapped as it broke up and started its death plunge. Some 30 spectators watching the repair operations dashed for cover.

The bodies of the three men, crushed and broken, later were removed.

CBC officials in Winnipeg, studio headquarters for the station, said the power was shut off the tower so the men could climb and start repairs. When it collapsed it struck the earth about 600 feet from transmitting buildings. Four persons were inside at the time.

The station is on the outskirts of Carman, 50 miles south of Winnipeg.

Highest On Prairies

A CBW official in Winnipeg said crash of the tower was a 'terrible situation' and only "by a streak of luck did it miss the transmitting building and take more lives."

It was believed the men were working to secure a new guy wire to the weakened top portion of the tower. Danger from high winds smashing the structure — built in September, 1948 — was said to be reason for the repairs being undertaken.

CBC officials said the tower was one of the highest man-made structures on the prairies. The station will be off the air until a new tower or temporary replacement is erected.

Dick Punshon, chief operator at the station, said he was near the base of the tower when it collapsed.

"Nobody thought there was any immediate danger," he said. "But everyone knew the job was dangerous.

Putting up Wire

"The men were going to put on a temporary guy wire on the section which was bent over by the plane crash.

"The top broke off fairly slowly, then gathered speed. The rest of the tower staggered for a split second and it too began to crash over before the top section reached the ground.

"In that split second I dived under a truck. There were sections of the tower scattered all over the ground.

"We were all afraid that a high wind would damage the tower before the guy could be fastened. We broke in the middle of a news broadcast in order to have time.

"If it had fallen 600 feet closer the transmitting building and everyone in it would have been crushed."

Eleven Killed During Floods In S.W. France

Paris, Feb. 5—(Reuters)—Floods rose steadily in vineyard valleys of southwest France today after causing the death of 11 people, swamping hundreds of farms and isolating towns and villages.

The whole of Marmande, a city of 12,000, is flooded by 16 inches of water.

The flood area is roughly in the shape of a triangle, with the towns of Castearrasin, Moissac and Valence D'Agen forming the three points.

The Garonne, France's third river, today reached a level of 37 feet, highest since 1875.

Levels were still rising today. The swirling waters stretch for miles, dotted with uprooted trees, dead animals, heaps of hay and straw.

Highways and railroads have been cut, telephone lines are down and villages isolated.

In Agen, chief town of Lot-et-Garonne country, the waters have reached first-floor level.

Soldiers, police, firemen, sailors and volunteers used all kinds of boats to rescue or bring food and fuel to the stranded.

The famous groto church and other shrines in Lourdes were lapped by floodwaters.

RIVER CLEAR OF ICE TO CORBYVILLE DAM

It could be that woodchuck was right last Saturday.

Since then the weather has been definitely springlike with the Moira River kicking up its heels in unseasonable freedom.

Today the river was clear of ice from a point above the CPR bridge to the Corbyville dam. This, veteran observers say, is a record for this time of year.

A few die-hard chunks are clinging to the riverbanks at various points but these are expected to be gone by nightfall.

Intention to Close Narrow Street Meets Opposition

The intention of city council to close "The Mews" laneway in the Purdy Street area is meeting with oppsition on the part of certain residents in the district.

"The Mews" is a narrow 20-foot laneway running parallel to Moira Street between Purdy and Frank Streets.

Lyle Twiddy and Reg. Hinchey, two Moira Street residents, appeared before city council yesterday protesting the city's intention of closing the laneway, claiming the laneway was the only means of access to the rear of certain properties on Moira Street.

Mr. Hinchey said that instead of closing the laneway the city should make it a permanent thoroughfare. "If the laneway was widened to the width of a one-way street an additional seven or eight building lots could be sold in the area," he said.

The two spokesmen presented a petition signed by property owners in the area protesting against the closing of the laneway.

Mayor A. M. Haig said the matter would be given every consideration by council.

Brotherhood Week Observed By Members Rotary Club

"The way in which Canadians live along side of the United States and hold ties with Britain but are not absorbed by the cultural ways of either is the miracle of Canada," stated Rev. Richard D. Jones, director of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, in addressing the Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon yesterday.

The speaker was representing the council on behalf of Brotherhood Week which is being observed from February 17th to the 24th.

"In Canada," the speaker said, "we have all kinds of cultural pluralisms; all races; all religions; all colors represented, but still work in harmonious accord. No man is judged on the pigmentation of his skin or his religious beliefs but on his ability to contribute to the well-being of the business and of the nation."

Mr. Jones spoke of the grandeur of the country and said that in his travels from Niagara Falls to Moose Factory, from Halifax to Victoria, there was nothing in any other country which was superior to Canadian mountain scenery.

Only Coming to Light

Canada's natural resources, he continued, are only now coming to light. Its oil, iron ore, seaway project, power possibilities and many other resources are only now being exploited.

"Government, on all levels, administered by cultured, refined and intelligent gentlemen on all levels is something which everyone in the country should be proud of," said Mr. Jones.

"And our freedom," he said, "to come and go as we please without police questioning, and our freedom of speech, is another thing which all of us can be justly proud of. But more important than all of these," he summed up, "is our decent human group relations, a bulwark of our way of life."

Must Work Together

Mr. Jones concluded his address by saying that brotherhood is now being taught in schools and churches as well as being publicized by speakers and other communicative methods. "Rid ignorance", he said, "and we rid persecution. We cannot hold ourselves aloof but must work together."

"The miracle of Canada", said Mr. Jones, "in many respects is in the field of group relations. We must work together to make it better, for the good of ourselves and the good of the world."

The speaker was introduced by George Campbell with the club expression of thanks being extended by Brigadier Reginald Gage and President Court Miller.

Visiting Rotarians and guests at the luncheon included Gordon Belber, Winnipeg, O. Dalrymple, A. Hadley and X. P. Mayhew of Stirling, and James Allen of Belleville.

Birthday roses were presented to Douglas A. Whillans, Robert D. Boyce and Dr. A. C. Locke, proxy for Harry Ackerman who is vacationing in Florida, by Inspector Clare Hayes.

The sing-song was conducted by John Deacon with Harry Gourley accompanying at the piano.

Club Directors and the Crippled Children's committee met directly after the luncheon.

Milk Prices Expected to Increase In City as Result of Agreement

The consumer price of delivered milk is expected to go to 20 cents per quart in the city as result of the 1952 price agreement signed yesterday between local distributors and the Belleville milk producers.

The 1952 price to the producers is $4.36 per cwt. but the contract still has to be approved by the provincial milk control board. Last year's price to the producer in the Belleville area was $4.12½ per cwt. Earlier in the year distributors had offered producers $4.30 per cwt. but this was declined by the producers who then said they would allow the price to be arbitrated.

Local distributors said they did not know when the new price would go into effect as this would be determined by the milk control board.

Distributors said it was expected that the delivered price of quarts only would be affected as result of the increased consumer price. Quarts would go to 20 cents, but pints would remain at 11 cents and cream would remain at 20 cents and 35 cents for half pints. However, there was a possibility the price of skimmed milk would have to be increased from the present 12 cents per quart.

Master Control For Lights Will Be Installed

A master control equipment to synchronize traffic lights on Bridge Street at the Coleman, Front and Pinnacle Street intersections will be installed in an effort to remedy traffic tie-ups during peak hour periods.

City council yesterday authorized purchase and installation of the equipment at a cost of $2,874. The equipment will be purchased from the Northern Electric Company here in the city.

Speaking to the recommendation, Alderman Bruce Lattimer as chairman of traffic and light, said the matter had been under discussion for some months.

Commenting on the manner in which traffic backs up along the main thoroughfares in the city during peak periods, Alderman Lattimer said that "something had to be done about the traffic situation."

He felt that synchronized traffic lights would do much to remedy the problem.

Alderman Chas. Hyde as chairman of finance objected that the matter should be laid over until after the budget meeting.

In reply Alderman Lattimer said prompt action must be taken to take advantage of the price offered by the supplying firm. He assured the cost of the equipment would appear in the budget.

Building Lots Owned by City Ready for Sale

The city of Belleville is still in the real estate business, members of council were told at their regular meeting Monday afternoon.

Alderman Wilbur Countryman as chairman of property said a list of city owned building lots had been prepared and brought up to date showing all city owned property on which there were no buildings and which could be sold.

The majority of the building lots are in the Bayview Heights section of the former county home property between Bridge Street and Dundas Street. About 75 choice building lots still remain to be sold in this area, while south of Dundas Street and immediately north of the railway tracks are a dozen or so residential building lots.

In addition to the above lots there are other city owned properties in the Coleman Flats district and "odds and ends" scattered about the city.

Following the war the city did a big business in selling city owned property. The majority of the lots went to veterans and were sold for $1 each. Between 200 and 300 lots were sold in this manner but all desirable lots in the old section of the city were thus disposed of two or more years ago.

A map of the city owned lots now for sale can be seen at the city assessing office.

The release came to light when a reporter made inquiries at defence headquarters about the Neitz case because Justice Minister Garson recently promised in Germany to look into it.

Tabled Order-in-Council

A spokesman said the defence department felt its responsibilities in the Ossenbach release were met with tabling of the order-in-council summary. No further publicity was considered necessary.

Ossenbach was a member of the German Home Guard in March, 1945, when an injured Canadian airman was brought into the headquarters where he was working. He was ordered to help a sergeant put the airman in a car and to take him away. In a nearby wood, in Ossenbach's presence, the sergeant killed the Canadian.

A long series of petitions was made in Ossenbach's behalf. Defence Minister Claxton finally recommended that he be released on the grounds that he had served sufficient time for a crime in which he had taken no direct part and in which he had only done what he was ordered to do.

Meyer is serving a life term for responsibility for the shooting of 18 Canadian prisoners of war.

Neitz was found guilty of wounding a Canadian airman-prisoner on a German beach. Neitz claimed the Canadian was trying to escape. A number of reviews of the evidence by Canadian authorities has failed to satisfy them that the wounding was justified. Neitz is serving 21 years.

MARMORA

Frankford Loses To Marmora 5-0

Marmora—On poor ice at the Marmora Arena on Monday evening, Marmora shut out Frankford Lions 5-0. Killian in goal for the winners gave the best performance of his short career. Stewart, Trumble, Lavender, Forestell and Gray contributed to the scoring with the former netting twice. Trumble missed two good chances to add to the score.

The second line failed to get into their usual stride until the third period. In defence, the homesters had the edge somewhat on their rivals, Gray and Maynes breaking up several good attacks.

Rankin, Cooke, Hood, McKee and Farmer were most aggressive for Frankford.

Play was rough at various times the teams dividing 14 penalties. The attendance was low, only 160 being present.

Line Ups:

United Nations Adjourns Meet After Voting to Postpone Korean Political Issue Talks

By STANLEY JOHNSON

Paris, Feb. 5—(AP)—The sixth general assembly of the United Nations adjourned today after voting a final overwhelming approval of the western plan to postpone discussion of Korean political issues until an armistice.

President Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico banged the final gavel at 2.14 p. m. after receiving tributes from Secretary-General Trygve Lie and many leading delegates for his handling of the three months session.

Grateful to French

The assembly also expressed gratitude to the French people for their hospitality. The last formal act was to observe a minute of silent prayer.

The western victory was the final major act of the sixth assembly session, which began last Nov. 6.

Today's vote was 51 in favor, five against and two abstentions.

It marked a triumph for the position taken by the United States, Britain and France that any U. N. discussion of Korea now could only hamper the progress of the truce talks at Panmunjom. By its vote, the assembly repudiated the Russian view that the U. N. should take over the talks.

The vote was the same as that by which the resolution, sponsored by Britain, France and the United States, was adopted by a joint session of the political, economic and social committees earlier.

To Seek Amistice

U. S. delegate Ernest A. Gross pledged that the U. S. would do its best to bring out an armistice at Panmunjom.

He denounced Soviet attempts to "seek the transfer to Paris of military matters."

The resolution calls for a special session of the assembly to meet in New York as soon as a truce is declared. It also provides for an emergency session if there is no truce and events in Korea make one necessary.

Observers noted that since the adoption of the resolution by a U. N. committee, there has been some progress in the talks at the front. Western delegates had charged in their speeches that those talks have been held up by Soviet moves to move the talks here. They tended to view the reported program as proof of this thesis.

In a last-minute attempt to cut the west's majority, Soviet delegate Jakob A. Malik denounced the resolution as a move to prevent discussion of the Korean question.

He said it was being forced through by "the government of the United States and the group which it heads."

After three months of east-west fireworks, the session wound up today.

Pearson Boosted For Presidency Of U.N. Assembly

Paris, Feb. 5—(CP)—External Affairs Minister L. B. Pearson of Canada is being boosted privately by various delegations today as president of the next regular session of the United Nations general assembly, scheduled for next fall.

A spokesman for the Canadian delegation told reporters he understands Pearson is willing to allow his name to go forward for the post if there is a general desire in the assembly for his presidency.

The only other candidate being mentioned for the post is Prince Wan Waithayakon of Thailand, chairman of the economic committee during the session which ended today.

However, Prince Wan has indicated he would be interested in the presidency of a possible special session to be called in the spring on the Korean problem if an armistice is signed.

Pearson has been urged by various delegations for the last three years to stand as president. Today's comment by the Canadian delegation was the first indication that he would be willing to stand.

The Canadian minister was mentioned just before the opening but declined to run because attendance at the assembly sessions in Paris would have kept him away from his duties in Ottawa too long. However, the next assembly session in New York would allow him to keep in close touch with Ottawa.

Fothergill Sees Moral Decay Among British

Trowbridge, England —(CP) — Philip Fothergill, president of the Liberal party, said in a speech here that one of the most disquieting features of life in Britain today is the prevailing indifference to moral issues.

Fothergill singled out the case of Rev. Michael Scott, who had given evidence before the United Nations in Paris concerning the plight of a native tribe in southwest Africa.

"There was a time," said Fothergill, "when Britain would have been aflame over this case, when the sight of this frail, saintly figure championing the cause of an inarticulate and persecuted minority not only against the brutal tyranny of authoritarian power but also in the face of official British opposition would have united all the moral and sporting instincts of the nation in a fury of righteous indignation.

"What has happened to Britain? Is one government after another to be hypnotized by Malan? (Prime Minister Malan of South Africa). Have we all reached such a low ebb that no iniquity or injustice can move us?

"If anybody believes that the price of peace in Africa is our acquiescence in the exploitation of native populations the sooner this utterly foolish and dangerous impression is dispelled the better."

(Britain has supported South Africa's stand on southwest Africa, basing her argument largely on legal grounds.)

Four Appointed To Advise On School Depts.

Hastings county representative to the Bay of Quinte District High School Area board, Mr. B. Allen was named chairman of the advisory vocational committee at its first meeting held Monday evening.

The local board will go further than is required by provincial regulations in keeping in touch with school activities, it was decided by members of the committee. Four members from the committee were appointed, each to have a special interest in a certain department of the schools.

Mrs. Ralph Morden was named to represent the home economics classes; Jerald Anderson will represent the agricultural department; A. O. Drysdale of Canada Cement Co. will represent the commercial department and J. J. Trudeau will have the shops department as his special interest. These members will check monthly with their respective departments to see if anything should be brought before the board.

Area Board Chairman, Harold Seldon, outlined the need for such department representatives and pointed out the duties each would be expected to perform.

More Aggressive Program To Attract New Industries Approved by City Council

City council has placed its stamp of approval on an "active and progressive" program for the promotion of new industry in the city.

The recommendation calling for extra effort in securing industry saw considerable discussion at yesterday's meeting of council when it was pointed out by some councillors there was no place within the city to place industry and the city was in no financial position to provide services outside the corporation.

Leading the discussion on this viewpoint was Alderman Don Thomas who asked where new industry would be put.
city except in industrial site and a except in the industrial site and a better class industry is just not interested in locating there," he said.

Sites Outside City

In reply to this Alderman Rollins said the Industrial Commission would have to show land outside the city limits and be prepared to make arrangements for having the property serviced.

Alderman Argue pointed out that city water was now available along No. 2 highway to Gibson's Crossing and there would be no capital expenditure involved in providing water in this area should an industry be interested.

He felt, however, that any additional outlay necessary would be compensated by the business which an industry would bring to the city. Also new industry would assist in lowering taxes, he said.

Mayor Haig claimed the recommendation should be taken at its face value and in the light of setting a policy of encouraging industry "within the city's ability to provide property and services."

Civil Defence Committee

A new civil defence control committee was set up headed by Dr. R. T. Potter as co-ordinator and Mayor A. M. Haig as chairman. Council representative on the committee is Alderman Angus Duffy with George Whitman as secretary. Representatives from the RCAF and from Trenton will also be appointed.

A new lock has been installed at the city hall main entrance and no keys will be provided for anyone except members of the city hall staff. A key register will also be maintained.

New lighting will be provided in the city health department office at a cost of "less than $100." Tenders will be called for painting of the City of Belleville signs at the highway entrances to the city.

Petition Received

A petition was received from barber shop operators in the city asking for a by-law to close shops at seven o'clock in the evening. The petition was referred to the city clerk for checking.

No action was taken with respect to a communication from the Canadian National Railways regarding provision of a flasher light at the Cannifton Road crossing.

Alderman Thomas said the R.R. Level Crossing Commission had indicated the present wig wag signals at the above crossing were on the wrong side of the roadway and it was suggested that additional flasher lights be placed. The city would be expected to pay about 30 per cent of an installation cost of $1,800 as well as 50 per cent of maintenance costs.

Advises No Action

Alderman Thomas suggested the city not agree to pay any part of installation costs for an additional flasher light system at the crossing when it was the mistake of the railway that the wig wag signals were placed on the wrong side of the street.

Alderman Lattimer said that if the city was to spend money on crossing protection it should be at some crossing where there are now no signals.

Members to the Belleville Recreation Commission were named. Council members to the commission are Alderman Tice and McNevin. Appointments from outside of council are Dr. R. T. Potter, William VanTassell and Mrs. W. Gander. Harry Knott is the appointee from the school board, while the Belleville parks board will also name a member.

Editor Praises CP Correspondent

Quebec, Feb. 5 — (CP) Lorenzo Pare, editorial writer for Le Soleil who travelled to Korea last month with Defence Minister Claxton, says today in an article that Bill Boss, Canadian Press war correspondent, "is an honor to his profession."

"His devotion to soldiers at the front is boundless," Pare wrote. "Among correspondents of all types, radio, screen or newspaper. Bill Boss is the most popular and the most respected in Korea. He lives in a tent, like the soldiers, and speaks flawless French. Our boys owe to him the acclaim their exploits have had in this country and abroad . . ."

Mr. Pare says it is impossible for one man to visit all Canadian units daily. He says that if the Korean War is to continue "it would be necessary," for the sake of French-speaking soldiers, their relatives and the population in general, that news reporting in French "be better organized than it is at present."

"To sum up," wrote Pare, "if The Canadian Press did not have in Korea a bilingual correspondent, especially a devoted one like Boss, Canada would still not know that a third of Canadians fighting in the Orient are French-Canadians."

Pare told of a reception centre in Tokyo organized by Boss for Canadian troops on leave.

Chicago Secret Service Men Claim Big Counterfeit Ring Broken by Arrest of Quintet

Chicago, Feb. 5 — (AP) — A multi-million-dollar international counterfeit ring, described as one of the biggest in United States history, was smashed yesterday by secret service agents.

More than $2,200,000 in bogus $10 and $20 bills were produced by the ring in the last four years. said Harry D. Anheier, chief of the secret service in Chicago.

Five Chicago men were seized and further arrests are expected, Anheier said. He disclosed that the phony $10 and $20 bills have turned up in cities throughout the United States, as well as in London, Paris, Rome and in other parts of the world.

Big Operators

Anheier said that approximately $1,400,000 in counterfeit money has been circulated by the gang.

Federal agents also are investigating evidence that the gang may have been responsible for the counterfeiting of more than $1,-000,000 in Cities Service Company bonds. The F.B.I. last Nov. 6 arrested three New York City men in connection with the sale of $25,000 in fake bonds for $7,125.

Two of the five men nabbed in Chicago are owners of a west side printing plant which was raided by the agents. They said the phony bills were printed in the plant, the Sferas Printing Company, owned by James Sferas, 36, and his brother, Samuel, 34. The agents seized a press and other equipment.

Others Sought

Also arrested was William Skally, 41, described by agents as an ex-convict and the top plotter and sales manager of the ring. They said he was nabbed after he accepted $3,500 in marked bills from an undercover agent in return for $50,000 in bogus $10 and $20 bills.

Two others are held, Anheier said, and a third man is sought in Chicago. One man is John Drake, 29, a taxicab driver, identified by agents as the seller of $3,500 in bogus bills. The fifth man held was not identified.

Anheier said the ring's activities were bigger, than those of Count Victor Lustig, the international swindler whose gang manufactured more than $1,000,000 in phony federal reserve notes prior to 1939.

Driver of the car was W. H. Bartlett of Byron.

A COSTLY EXPERIMENT

E. C. Gill, president of the Canada Life Assurance Company, said in Toronto a few days ago that the federal government's annuities branch has "cost the taxpayers many millions of dollars in losses on annuities sold below cost."

The life insurance business in Canada, Mr. Gill told his company's annual meeting, was as keenly competitive as anywhere in the world, with eighty companies and societies, Canadian, American and British, in the field.

He added: "The life insurance needs of the Canadian people are served adequately and efficiently. Similarly, the life insurance companies are fully equipped to cover the field of annuities — immediate annuities and annuities for future retirement. Under these conditions, it was most surprising that legislation was introduced in the fall session of parliament to provide for the expansion of the operation of the government annuities branch."

Mr. Gill was referring to proposals, scheduled to be introduced at the next session of parliament, which would, among other things, raise the maximum government benefit which can be purchased from a present $1,200 yearly at age 65 to $2,400 and which would establish cash surrender values before retirement age.

Mr. Gill also declared that nearly $30,000,000 of the annuity branch's losses have been charged off, "and this is only a fraction of the ultimate losses that will be sustained on annuities already sold."

He continued: "With the introduction this year of universal old age pensions, there is less reason than ever for the government being in the annuity business and employing a sales force, paid for at the taxpayers' expense, to sell an article under cost."

Mr. Gill had other reasons for opposing any extension of the government's annuity-selling business, but the foregoing, we believe were the most important. It is not necessary to be connected with any insurance company to understand that he has made out an excellent case against the government being in the annuity business.

To our way of thinking, there is something unethical about the government operating a business in competition with concerns which are taxpayers. This sort of thing is still more deplorable, we believe, when the government-owned business is operated at a loss which must be paid by all the people.

It may be argued in defence of the present administration at Ottawa that the government went into the annuity business years ago, and that those now in power had nothing to do with launching this dubious enterprise; but it cannot be argued that anyone has given any good reason for extending the scope of this same enterprise. Even if they are wealthy corporations, it does not follow that this country's insurance companies should be subjected to unfair competition at the expense of the general public. They have as much right to live unmolested as the corner grocer or any of the rest of us. Anyone who does not approve of them is under no obligation to do business with them.

We believe it would be far better if the government were to withdraw from the annuity business altogether. If that is too much to expect, the public is not asking too much if it asks that the annuities branch be made to stand on its own feet and pay its own way. If it cannot do that, it has no excuse for existing.

FARMER REAL EFFICIENCY EXPERT

At the Canadian Federation of Agriculture convention in Montreal a fortnight ago, H. H. Hannam, president of that organization, declared that there had been a 35 per cent increase in farm production in Canada since before the war, although there had also been a decrease of 15 per cent in the manpower operating Canadian farms during the same period.

With becoming modesty, Mr. Hannam said he doubted if there were many other Canadian industries which could show a better record. Mr. Hannam might have said it was extremely doubtful if even one non-agricultural industry could approach this record.

It is known that industrial production per man hour does rise in any such advanced country as Canada, but it rises slowly, at some such rate as one per cent per man hour per year.

Certain industrial operations are fond of boasting about their efficiency, but it is apparent, if we accept Mr. Hannam's figures as accurate, that industry still has a lot to learn from the farmer.

BABY PROGRESS

The baby slept the whole night through!
And so did dad and mother, too.
No cry at midnight woke them up
To say the baby wished to sup.
No yawning question asked to know
Who for the formula would go.

Two robes remained upon the chairs,
No one went slowly down the stairs;
No father, mother, muttering low:
"Tonight it is your turn to go."
At last has come the joy desired:
The midnight feeding not required.

Oh, happy mother! Doting dad,
Who came to me with news so glad!
Oh, wonder child, so soon to spare
Its parents of that hour of care!
No formula to warm anew!
The baby slept the whole night through.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

APPLY IT TO YOURSELF

Are you a person of influence?

You may deny that you are, but your denial can easily be proved mistaken. There is nobody in the world who is not influencing somebody either for better or for worse. Neutral personalities just do not exist.

It is not necessary for us to go about preaching sermons or handing out tracts in order to be morally influential. Out from the personality of every living soul go certain influences which have either a beneficial or a harmful effect on the life and personality of others. Parents are either making their children better or making them worse; teaching them to grow, or by their example contributing to the deterioration of their characters. Friends are either on the plus side of influence or on the minus side. If we had instruments capable of measuring human influence, we should probably see that every time the most humble person walks down the street or drops in on a neighbor or bargains with a merchant across a counter, the life of the world is in some respect definitely altered. we are vastly more important—as well as more insignificant—than most of us think we are.

For better or for worse, we are all "influential persons".

OUR TOWN

OUTSIDE HELP

Here's a lady in the balcony with a poem, doctor, and it's called "Simple Desire":

I don't want a home
Where the buffalo roam;
I just want a home
Where somebody's home.

Week or two ago I had some fun writing about our 12-year-old and the awesome changes that take place around that time. Now I've got a letter from Ottawa from Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova with a heartfelt postscript.

"I was all the more interested in what you had to say about the difficult 12 year-old age," she writes, "because on February 1st we will be launching our "War Orphans Project" to raise the necesary funds to continue our work among the needy children of Europe.

"Six years ago, when I founded the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, the plight of these children was very apparent. Memories of war and destruction were fresh in everyone's mind. No one could resist the sight of sickly babies and abandoned children crying out for help.

"Today, however, the picture has changed. Many of those ragged little urchins are now healthy, well-cared-for boys and girls in Children's Homes throughout Europe.

"But they, too, are reaching 'the dangerous age' which you describe. Only it is not easy to convince Canadian parents, who are having troubles enough with their own 12-year-olds, that the little girl they were once so fondly concerned about in Europe needs them still.

"Needs them today, perhaps more than ever, for there is no one as lonely as a 12-year-old. No one needs guidance and loving care as much as these confused little people timidly standing on the threshold of a teen-age world.

"My big heartache today, my main problem, is how can I make people realize that now these graceless, difficult 12-year-olds need our help still?"

* * *

I've looked pretty thoroughly into the work of this Unitarian Service Committee and it seems to me a wonderful outfit.

The most appealing way of helping their work is to become a "foster parent." You can "adopt" a child who needs help by contributing $45 (either in a lump sum or in three monthly installments) and that gives the youngster three months' care in one of the committee's homes in France, Italy, Austria or Greece.

The "foster parent" receives a photograph and case history of his "ward" and an exchange of letters is encouraged.

If you'd like to try this you might send a letter to Dr. Hitschmanova. Her address is 48 Sparks Street, Ottawa.

* * *

There's a Mrs. Frank Brown out on Rural Road No. 4, Langley Prairie, who sends me a very touching letter about her own experiences with growing children and encloses a poem that'll appeal to a lot of you. Goes this way:

Just last year with pigtails flying
You were energy and noise,
And with nimble feet were trying
To outromp the wildest boys.

You were climbing trees and fences
And the things you said and did
Proved your five excited senses
Were the senses of a kid.

Now I look at you and wonder
At your ladylike allure.
Youth, it seems, was plowed in under
To make room for things mature.

In a year you've changed completely;
Rouge conceals the childish blush.
You've advanced, and done it sweetly,
But look, sister, what's the rush?

* * *

Oh, yes, and it's a brighter week, too, because W. B. Murray has sent along his semi-annual collection of clippings from the Bubble and Squeak pages of the Tatler. Here's one I kind of like:

A young French physician, working temporarily on the staff of a London hospital, volunteered to teach conversational French to a group of nurses.

One evening one of the other doctors jokingly inquired, "Pierre, have you taught the girls 'je t'aime' yet?"

"Ah, but no, mon ami," was the reply. "We save that until last for, you see, in France when conversation reaches 'je t'aime' there is no more conversation."

Letter to the Editor

Pressure Groups Active in Canada

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Julian Lee, a blind musician and musical arranger, has been refused a visa to enter Canada. The Canadian Press reports that Lee and his wife wish to come here from New Zealand but that union regulations prevent him joining the Canadian Musicians Union or playing commercially here for 12 months and that, rather than risk having Lee face a year of idleness, our immigration authorities have refused him a visa. Perhaps there is more to this incident than is reported in the press but on the known facts it does not seem likely that the majority of Canadians would approve the principle of turning away a prospective new citizen because he may face hardship on arrival here.

Those Canadians who put pressure on the government to exclude immigrants who might compete with them for jobs should recognize that if their kind of thinking had always controlled our government's policies they themselves might not be in Canada today. Most of our forefathers arrived here without visible means of support and survived to contribute to the country's progress and prosperity.

Most Canadians are satisfied to accept as one of the lesser, and normal, hazards of life competition in their jobs. Even those who work to exclude people in their own trades, professions or businesses would have to agree that as Canada's population has grown, Canada's standard of living has climbed, and that for our own continued prosperity we must strive to multiply the number of people living and working in Canada. But too often it is evident that Ottawa is susceptible to the pleas of people who do not want to face possible competition for work from new Canadians. Julian Lee may never get to Canada, but is it not probable that the loss will be ours rather than his?

C. J. Harris,
Secretary,
Canadian Unity Council.

Personal Health Talks

SOME DOCTORS TELL 'EM NOTHING

Daughter, aged 5 years, has had "bad tonsils" (probably this means tonsillitis) three times in the past year, and the doctor says her tonsils will have to come out. But the doctor tells us she has heart murmur and we must take precautions. We would be grateful for your opinion on the advisibility of the operation in this case. (Mrs. F. W.)

I am unable to form an opinion without having examined the child.

When the doctor says the tonsils will "have to come out" you should ask some questions. For instance: Why?

One-third of all children in this country have repeated attacks of tonsillitis between the ages of three and ten years.

I hope no doctor today has the temerity to say that one-third of all children should be subjected to tonsillectomy.

If your doctor tells you the child has a heart murmur you should ask some more questions. For instance: What does it mean?

When a doctor hears a heart murmur he or she is under obligation to give an opinion as to its significance, or say frankly that he or she does not know whether it has any particular significance, or else not to mention it at all. It is well to remember that a murmur heard over the heart of a young child is of no significance in many instances.

A reader who informs me her trouble is from "overwork and nervous tension" (which doesn't explain anything) cannot keep at her work for more than a few hours without becoming exhausted. The last doctor she consulted gave her some medicine that helped—for a week. But when she sent for more the doctor said he didn't know what he had given her. That was bad enough, but that wasn't the half of it. The doctor further refused to say what he was treating the patient for.

It is hard to believe it, but evidently some doctors still get away with that pomposity when they think the patient is stupid enough to endure it. Probably the truth is that the doctor hasn't any idea what ails the patient.

As a nurse with considerable surgical experience, a reader writes, I have put off for a long time the hemorrhoidectomy my doctor tells me I must have (what a word! It means operation for piles). He refused to discuss the injection method and I have been unable to find anyone who gives ambulant treatment. I think I would prefer almost anything to the post-operative discomfort of a hemorrhoidectomy. I've seen too many. (Signed).

Stick around a century or so and you'll find doctors everywhere, not only prepared to discuss but qualified to apply the injection treatment for internal hemorrhoids.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

No Answer

Among the questions I do not answer are many pertaining to the curability of this or that. I refuse to comment on the ground that it might make some readers unhappy. So, don't fash yourself complaining that you didn't ask for diagnosis or treatment but just...if I think I can do good by answering it I'll answer. If not, there'll be no answer.

Yankee Stomach

The B-complex diet supplement recommended in your Yankee Stomach pamphlet has worked wonders for my husband who complained for years of constant discomfort...(Mrs. K. P.)

Answer — The pamphlet is available on written request (do not use clipping) if you provide stamped, self-addressed envelope. It deals with such functional disturbances as hyperacidity, hunger pain, heartburn, eructations, waterbrash, uneasiness and distension after eating, bloating by gas and, without reference to your husband, Ma'am the general crankiness and irritability of persons with these discomforts.

Plants in the House

I have a lot of growing plants in every room except the bedrooms. Now a friend (Mrs. Sumsey?) tells me they cause sickness and name a party (What! Not just a few members?) that the doctor ordered to get rid of all plants. I know plants use up oxygen and so I air the rooms every day...(S. A.)

Answer—Unless a member of the household is allergic to one of the plants it is beneficial to health to have growing plants in any or every room. They do not use up oxygen, they use up carbon dioxide and give off oxygen to the air.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DISASTER BENEFITS

In Nature many a disaster has proved a benefit. Across to the mainland from my small island retreat, in Nova Scotia, a great fire swept acres of woodland, cleaning the ground of its blueberry bushes. Today that area has its small trees again and new blueberry bushes produce bigger and more abundantly than ever before.

There is in north-central Michigan a warbler that chooses a fire-swept area for its nesting place It is known as Kirtland's warbler, and John Muir, the famous California naturalist, once told of a variety of pine in the California mountains that reproduces with the aid of fire. It drops its cones only after the tree dies and a fire opens up its cones, so that the new trees rise actually from the ashes of those burned.

The tragic earthquake in San Francisco many years ago, and the great fire in Chicago in the last century both were the forerunners of greater cities, regardless of the losses to life and property. We often hear that a disaster is a blessing in disguise, and this is literally true in many a case. I recall the instance of a very wealthy man who lost practically all in the market crash many years ago, but he saved enough to buy a small farm in the country and started life all over, raising chickens and vegetables — and he stated that he had never been so happy.

Millions of people, all over the earth, have recently been thrilled by the heroism of Capt. Kurt Carlsen, who for days stood alone on his ship, refusing to leave, even after being helped by another who braved the sea, until all hope for his ship had vanished. This display of courage has stimulated the spines of us all, and given to us new resolves. We surely need a dose of the Carlsen courage!

In Korea, however, heroism is being displayed every day that matches the courage of the greatest. We can only hope and pray that from that disaster may come benefits that will somehow match the heroic sacrifices made in the name of freedom and a better world.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

It is reliably stated that not one case of tetanus occurred in the late war, among Canadian troops. This is a staggering fact, in view of the prevalence of tetanus in the first war, in which it was credited with a great many deaths; and complicated countless wounds.

The disease was contracted by picking up the tetanus bacillus in open wounds or abrasions, and it was believed the germ was rampant around barnyards and horse stables. The soil of France and Belgium appeared to teem with the infection.

In the late war, the Canadians fought not only in France, but in Italy, Sicily and other localities where tetanus was likely as lively as anywhere. But thanks to the extremely strict system of inoculation employed by the Canadian and British army medical authorities, this wickedest of all perils the soldiers had to face was not only brought under control, but, in the case of the Canadians, completely eliminated. This surely ranks as one of the wonders of the medical era.

Public health people say that in some parts of Canada there is still considerable resistance to the principle of inoculation encountered amongst not only parents but amongst a type of demi-intellectual which likes to defy science, especially in the medical realm. Nearly all of Canada has rid itself of many of the epidemics of childhood, such as diphtheria and scarlet fever by the use of toxoids.

To the long-established record of vaccination and smallpox can now be added the sensational record with regard to tetanus, to convert the last-ditchers to some faith in the theory that a little evil is a good thing.

B.C.I. Home and School Assoc. Observes Health Week at Meeting

Health week was observed by the Collegiate Home and School Association on Monday night, with subjects of local interest discussed by Mrs. J. McLuskie, superintendent of the local branch of the Order of St. John Ambulance, and H. R. Varcoe, chairman of the Board of Health.

Mrs. H. R. Varcoe presided at the meeting and reports were given by Miss H. McLaren, secretary, and Mrs. N. F. Tonkin, treasurer. Jerry Cousins spoke briefly about the coming operetta and dramatic presentations which the pupils are staging. Announcements were made of the Parent Education group to be held Feb. 12 at the Collegiate; and of the coming-of-age birthday party at King George School when the provincial president, Mrs. McLellan, will help to celebrate the twenty-first birthday of the oldest Home and School Association in the city.

A rousing singsong was led by P. L. Allcorn, and E. Rickards at the piano. Mrs. H. R. Gibson was in charge of the meeting and introduced the speakers.

Mrs. J. McLuskie explained that the St. John Ambulance was the oldest charitable organization in the world dedicated to suffering humanity, and it is found in every country in the world. There were 13,000 people trained in Ontario last year. There are first aid stations placed along the highways for emergency treatment. At the Belleville Fair 70 cases were treated, and assistance was given at many public events and excursions. A blood typing service is one of their important aids, and each person is given a card with his particular type marked so that in an emergency the type is quickly known.

Suggestions For Home Care

Some of the suggestions for home care included a thorough cleaning of the medicine cabinet, with poisons placed on the highest shelf where children cannot reach them. Mrs. McLuskie demonstrated the use of the articles which should be always ready for first aid in the home; and suggested that these should be kept together in a chocolate box, where they would be readily available. The speaker explained the primary treatment for such things as shock, hemorrhage, burns and broken bones.

H. R. Varcoe outlined the long-range planning which the health department has undertaken starting with the pre-school children where good health habits are established, and continued with the school child who receives examinations of the eyes, ears, general health and immunization. In the school the same program is extended and records kept. By the time the child reaches secondary school age it is expected that he will take responsibility for his own health. The family doctor who knows the child's history should decide whether the student should take part in strenuous athletics. The department carries on its activities here mainly in teaching accident prevention, first aid, and tests for tuberculosis where an early diagnosis can be made.

Many problems face the board and with a small staff the work is difficult.

J. Lawrence expressed the appreciation of the listeners to the speakers.

The meeting adjourned to the coffee bar, where Mrs. Kane and her assistants had prepared refreshments.

English Stores Plan to Insure Their Customers

London, (CP)—Free insurance against food poisoning, accidents or disease contracted as a direct result of their patronage is to be granted nearly 2,000,000 customers doing business at 12,000 small shops throughout England.

The plan, announced by D. W. Harrison, president of the National Union of Small Shopkeepers, becomes operative after 18 months of negotiation.

Financed by the union, the policy provides for unlimited compensation where accidents are involved, and up to £10,000 in cases of food poisoning and related diseases.

"The danger of food poisoning is increasing as we now eat more tinned food than ever before," Mr. Harrison said. In the past, he added, many shopkeepers had operated under the impression they were fully protected under their normal insurance policies only to discover their mistake when they were hauled into court. Sometimes these claims had forced them out of business and left them penniless while customers often had received no compensation for injuries.

Under the new scheme a customer is required to file his claim 72 hours after an accident in a union shop or the purchase of tainted food.

A contest, identifying baby pictures of the group in charge, caused much laughter.

Collaborate by Mail To Produce Musical

Halifax. (CP)—Two Canadians, separated by the width of a continent, used the mails to collaborate in turning out a musical comedy.

Prof. C. L. Lamberston of King's University here, composed the music and wrote the lyrics for "Bonanza", already in the audition stage here.

James Richardson, an employee of a Vancouver steamship office, wrote the story. Mr. Lamberston and Mr. Richardson have never met.

Looking for common ground on which to base the story, the two found they both knew life in Alberta. The plot is borrowed from the real life story of a western family lifted from poverty to riches by the discovery of oil on their land.

Their problems after striking it rich form the basis of the comedy.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When parents oppose a marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 22, have a good job and attend college at night. My parents have always given me everything possible, but they often try to lead my life for me, to which I object.

Now I'm in love with a boy who is in the service. We grew up together and went together for a long time until my parents persuaded me to give him up, for reasons with which I cannot agree.

He comes from a hard-working family of foreign descent and also is of a different faith than ours. I realize his family is very different from ours, but he has a good education and I can't see that his family background should affect our life as he has many fine traits and is very ambitious.

On the subject of his faith, we settled that between us long ago to our satisfaction so that the difference would not affect our happiness if we marry.

Bob wants me to come back to him, and I want to go back, but my parents stand in our way, and I love them too. Do you think I would be wrong to go back to Bob, or should I do as my parents wish and give him up?—C. W.

Dear C.W.:

While there are, certainly, very real difficulties that must be met when two people of different faiths wish to marry, if the people meet these difficulties squarely and intelligently, it is not impossible to adjust them satisfactorily. As for Bob's family background, I would say it has no possible bearing on the situation if he and his parents are—as I am sure they are—people of fine character. You don't say that his parents have made any objection to a possible marriage between you and their son, so it seems to me, quite frankly, that they are way ahead of your parents in their attitude.

It is a bitter thing for a disagreement of this kind to arise between a girl and her parents, but I would feel that since you are 22 years old and have grown up knowing this boy, you have a right to marry him if you wish to, despite your parents' opposition. The thing to remember is that if you avoid quarrels about this, which might cause a definite break between you and your parents, and try always to be loving and respectful toward them even while holding firmly to your own point of view, things may gradually adjust themselves, between you. Even when parents actively oppose a son's or daughter's marriage, if the son or daughter handles the situation in a mature fashion, asserting his or her right, as an adult, to make independent decisions, in the end most parents finally accept the situation. Remember, too, that to accede to your parents' wishes against your own best thinking will solve nothing. On the contrary, it will create antagonism and bitterness between you anyhow, so that you get the same result whether you go your own way or unwillingly go theirs. To chose as nearly middle-o-the-road tactics as you can is the wisest course.

Don't diet without doctor's advice

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My problem is that I'm too fat. I'm 16 years old, five feet, four inches tall and weigh 126 pounds, and would like to weigh 118.

I don't want to go to a doctor, because he just gives you medicine. I would like to get thin all over without dropping too many foods. How could I lose weight without taking pills or any other stuff?—A. R.

Dear A.R.:

No sort of reducing program should be undertaken without checking with a doctor first, and no good doctor will simply give you pills to make you lose weight. Unless there is something wrong with you which is responsible for your being too fat, and which would require some kind of medical treatment, the only proper way to reduce is to go on a sensible diet. I suspect that when you say you want to lose weight "without dropping too many foods," what you actually mean is that you don't want to give up things you like to eat.

It could be that you eat too many sweets and starches, and need to cut down on these.

What you should do is to go to your doctor and get a thorough check-up to make sure you are in good physical condition. Then let him tell you whether or not you really need to lose weight and, if so, what diet you should go on.

Snack for Six After the Show

An unsighed note saying: "Mary, have you any new ideas for economical entertaining of say six couples after an entertainment?"

Economical and new—that's the theme, and say—there's the rub-economical. Is it possible?

It's ticklish for men like meat—so we have to substitute skill and novelty for expensive ingredients.

I think I have told you how popular was our idea of serving homemade pea soup with toasted rye and French bread I gave you my special Emem Split Pea Soup recipe. We served this out of the best soup tureen and had quarts of it for second helpings, plus an unlimited amount of coffee. It was a great success.

What I am working up to is another soup meal—this time it is genuine French Onion Soup, served in the French manner with toast and cheese. This can be done with little expense and is elegant. Very popular with the masculine half.

EMEM'S FRENCH ONION SOUP

The brown stock for this (bouillon) may be obtained in four different ways: (1) homemade brown stock, (2) canned bouillon, (3) dissolved bouillon cubes and (4) beef extract diluted with water.

BROWN STOCK

2-lb. marrow bone with some lean meat attached, cracked, 1 1-2 quarts cold water, 4 sprigs parsley chopped, 1-4 teaspoon each thyme and marjoram, 1 small bay leaf, 1-2 cup each diced carrots, onion and celery with leaves, 10 peppercorns, 5 cloves, 1 tablespoon salt. Cover and simmer gently 4 hours. Strain. Chill. Skim off fat coating.

(2) This is canned soup labelled bouillon. If it is condensed dilute it as directed on tin. (3) for 1 quart of bouillon made from bouillon cubes dissolve 8 or 10 cubes in 1 quart boiling water. (4) For bouillon made from beef extract use 2 ounces for each quart boiling water.

To make the finished soup, in 3 tablespoons melted butter very gently saute 3 Spanish or Bermuda onions which have been sliced in 3-16 inch slices and blanched in two successive boiling hot blanching waters and then drained. When transparent and onion rings are slightly golden add 1 1-2 tablespoons flour by sprinkling it over and gently stirring, then add stock and gently stir until it boils. Add 1-2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, and about 1-2 to 1 teaspoon salt. If beef extract is used taste before adding salt.

To serve Continental style place in individual casseroles and top each one with a slice of toasted French bread. Sprinkle with generous layer of grated cheese, preferably Parmesan or old Cheddar. Slide under hot broiler to brown and serve at once. Or Serve in large soup plates (large enough to hold a main course portion) and top with toasted slices of French bread or croutons and sprinkle with old grated Cheddar or Parmesan cheese.

The best version of this is made with beef extract and served in individual casseroles with Parmesan—as many of you gourmets know. That it is how it is made and served in a famous hotel in New Orleans

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A child's party courtesy

Attention, Mothers! When your small Jack or Jill is old enough to go to a party, he or she is old enough to learn to say "Thank you. I had a nice time" to the small host or hostess of the party and also to the mother. Before the first parties, and between parties, have fun with your child in planning dress rehearsals of this saying-thank-you procedure. . .you, the hostess, he or she the guest, and perhaps a delightful reward for achievement-in-politeness!

Many relatives and friends may require series of housewarmings

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I are just about ready to move into our newly-built house. Both he and I have many relatives, and we also have so many friends. It seems impossible to have them all at once. So how should I go about inviting them? Also what should I serve as refreshments, which wouldn't be too expensive?—M. W. L.

Very often, when there are many relatives and friends, the hosts-of-the-new home either give a series of housewarmings on successive Sunday afternoons, or, if convenient for the number of guests to be invited give a party on a Saturday afternoon and one the following day, Sunday. (This latter plan is often extremely practical and convenient, because flower-decorations and other details can be used for both parties, and refreshment-items double-ordered.) If you plan to have your housewarming at the usual hours . . .three or four to six or seven o'clock. . .you may serve the usual simple tea-menu: tea and/or coffee and/or punch or whatever beverage you wish: small, simple sandwiches; small cakes or really interesting and delicious cookies; with perhaps such accessories as popcorn, potato chips, salted nuts, candies, or other nibbling-items.

Even for postponed reception have wedding cake

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother and I are planning to give a party—a combination reception and "welcome home party"—for my brother and his bride, who were married in Europe two months ago. My brother has been on special assignment in the Army in Germany, and married an American girl also employed there. I would like to have the reception planned as nearly as possible along the line of the wedding reception they did not have after their marriage—wedding cake and all! But mother thinks it inappropriate to have a wedding cake, insists that this is not "proper" after the day of the wedding. So?—R. L.

No reason at all why you shouldn't have a wedding cake, as handsome and wedding-y a cake as you wish. (The wedding cake is a decorative and festive item . . . has no significance that must be limited to the wedding day.) At the right moment, have all the guests "gather 'round" and watch the bride cut the first slice of the cake (her bridegroom's right hand over her right hand) and share it with her bridegroom.

DEVELOP NEW PROCESS

New Delhi, Feb. 5—(Reuters)—India's national physical laboratory has developed a process for making printers' ink from a liquid in cashew nut shells. A factory will soon expand production of the ink to 1,000,000 pounds, half of India's annual consumption.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Morning complexion care.

It is taken for granted that a woman will go to bed with a clean face; she will probably have pleasanter dreams than if she neglects her good-looks duties. It's relaxing to sit before one's dressing table and brush the hair, to tuck it away in a wave net so it won't get tangled, to put the fragrant emollient on the complexion, to oil the fingernails and lotion the hands. Only takes ten or fifteen minutes. One feels so righteous! And, during the session, one can plan the next day's activities.

Only ladies of leisure have time for prettying in the morning. The busy housewife must prepare breakfast, give Daddy his hat and a kiss, get the kids ready for school, write out the grocery list, then start tramping the domestic treadmill. Having attended to her good-looks chores the night before, all she needs is a cold water face-rinsing to bring coloring. Later on she can apply the high lights; never should they be put on in a rush.

It is assumed that a woman will go to bed with a clean face.

The career girl must make a face that will last through the day, with perhaps a little touch-up before luncheon and before beating it to the home base. Let us hope that she retires to the rest room to perform those pulchritude rituals instead of hauling her beauty props out of a desk drawer and laying on the paint in front of her associates. Fastidious girls just don't do it.

After giving her face a cold water rinsing and a gentle drying, a young woman should apply a tonic lotion or astringent. These toiletries bring coloring to the skin. They also tend to keep the pores from following a policy of expansion and keep the sebaceous glands from depositing a film of oil over theflesh. These tiny glands fulfill a useful purpose, but often get too ambitious, cause the powder pad to work overtime.

Foundation creams help make-up to stay put, not fly away on the gentle breezes. There are special ones for oily skins, others for dry ones, still others for the normal complexion. They must be spread on carefully and evenly. You have to be a bit tricky to use them successfully. Too much and they will impart a mask-like look that would never get any beauty bouquets. Whatever you use, follow the directions carefully.

If rouge is applied, it should not be forgotten that the cruel light of day is revealing. Not like evening when the lights are on and you can revel in synthetic blushes.

Fashion Flashes

THERE'S PLENTY of black and white in the new collections. Typical of the season ahead is a waist-length shrug coat of white wool fleece, bound at every edge with heavy black braid.

THERE'S NO END to the popularity of the well-handled silk suit. A new version is fashioned of navy blue silk taffeta. The fitted jacket rounds over the hipline and is lined with American Beauty red silk. Kerchief collar and sleeve cuffs are of navy velveteen, and skirt is sun-ray pleated.

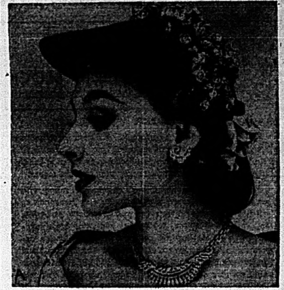
GROWING INTEREST in the full-length evening gown is evident, both at important events and in clothes readied for resort and spring wear. Heavy silk satin in oyster white is used for a handsome dress, the strapless bodice dipping across the front in a half-moon curve and rising high under the bosom to meet a molded inset of dark green velvet.

USHERING IN the new millinery season is a nice group of dark straw braid basic hats with pastel flowers and jewelled tab trim. Navy blue is used for a level bonnet edged along the brim with tiny pink flowers, alternately pearl and rhinestone-centred.

REGISTERING with store buyers all over the country is the redingote line for dresses as well as ensembles. Nicely interpreted in a belled bengaline, nicely fitted through the waist and disclosing the bowed neckline bodice and skirt, is a shirtwaist dress of polka-dotted surah.

BRIDGING THE GAP between the seasons is a nice group of fabric hats, one of which is a small sailor done in a high-front and high-back rocker silhouette. Fashioned of black or navy negaline cord, it has a crown band of white organdie and a big flaring organdie bow in back.

Bright Days Ahead



By ALICE ALDEN

SMALL, tidy and dainty—that's the early spring hat forecast. Good news, too, for at this time of the year, while a woman wants a hat that whispers of the coming season, she doesn't care for one that is too summery. This one is perfect for a beginner. Laddie Northridge the fabulous milliner, works black milan straw into a clever new silhouette and secures the crownless visor brim by a ribbon-covered clip smartly sprinkled with glowing, jeweled forget-me-nots and red roses, a harbinger of balmy days and pleasant skies.

Injury-Riddled Hawks Go Down To 12-7 Defeat Before Kingston Sacs

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

CAN ANYTHING ELSE HAPPEN?

While "Red" Doran, in our opinion is a good coach and one of the brainiest players in this senior "B" group, he hasn't reached the stage yet where he can pull hockey players out of the figurative hat merely by waving a hockey stick over the topper.

Short six of his regulars through sickness and injury with not one regular defenceman available for duty last night, he called on the junior "B" squad for reinforcements. And while Ray Carey, Bob Wilson, Ted DeGray and Peter Green turned in fine efforts, they did not have the upper bracket experience to fill the gaps with 100 per cent effectiveness. Doug Bastedo and Don Barrett were battling Kid Flu, Huck Reeves could not play due to work. Schreider, Desjardins, Trumble and Jud Semark are on the injured list and to cap it all Peter Jones suffered a face slash in the second period that necessitated four stitches and withdrawal from the game.

That is no alibi for the Kingston Sacs victory. They were the better team on the night's play merely because they had balancel power and plenty of it. Sammy Mulholland came through with a scintillating four-goal performance as did White. The rest of the squad played good hockey albeit rugged at times but they played as a team. Mike Rodden will take us to task for this one but it would have been a far different story last night had the Hawks been at full strength.

At that they matched the Sacs stride for stride and goal for goal in the first and third periods. They became a trifle disorganized in the second and the Sacs poured in six goals with but a single return. We heard a few fans crying in their figurative "suds" after the game, decrying the fact the Hawks have lost three or four in a row and "we're not going back". That's plain silly. The Hawks have split their games todate, are in second place, and far from a beaten team.

* * *

IT CAN BE DONE — BUT WILL IT?

According to the junior "B" schedule or what's left of it some odd things can happen before the leadership of the group is finally settled. As matters stand at the present the Hawks have three games to play, tonight included. Two of them are with Kingston and the third with Lindsay.

Lindsay has five games left, two with Kingston, two with Peterborough and the other with the Hawks, who are one point south of Lindsay. Now let's see what can happen. Let's saw off the games with Kingston ditto the Lindsay-Kingston games. Count 'em out as wins for Hawks and Lindsay. That leaves the two-game series with Lindsay and Peterborough. Of course if the Kinsmen sweep this series it's all over. But, if the Petes take it, the Lindsay-Hawks game will be for the group title. Or if Lindsay ties Peterborough and loses one, and the Hawks win over the Kinsmen they're all tied up. That will mean an extra game unless the OHA decides to settle it by goals average. It may be wishful thinking but that is what CAN happen.

It looks like a dogfight from here in. Kingston has a very remote chance of getting out of the cellar, but they can toss a monkey wrench into somebody's playoff machinery aspirations. Peterborough is vastly stronger and might pull the ultimate big surprise. The Hawks have their first line of Strachan, Lalande, and Jacklin back in harness, which is about as timely as a Christmas gift on the morning of December 25th, although Harry Brown is lost for the season. Lindsay have again sought the Oshawa player-barrel and come up with a goalkeeper. (There won't be a danged player left in "Soupville" by the time the Kinsmen and Eagles finish their raids). So there it is, mes amis. It should be hot, heavy and hectic from here to the wire.

* * *

ATTENTION MINOR PUCKISTS!

All juvenile, midget, bantam and peewee players who have sold tickets for the Oldtimers Game, Friday night are requested to turn in the proceeds to Jack McNab's Sports Centre, Front Street by Friday noon at the latest. Juveniles and midgets are asked to bring their returns to the arena on Thursday night.

* * *

SHOULD TAKE THIS ONE!

The Glen Roy basketball squad meets Picton Athletics in an important Bay of Quinte Basketball League tussle in the BCI gymnasium here tonight in the final scheduled game of the season.

Glen Roys must win this one to grab a top-slot tie with the Peterborough Marines who defeated the Trenton Flyers Saturday night to take a two-point lead in the standing with all games completed.

In the event of a Glen Roy win and a top-spot stalemate, league secretary "Pete" Beach will flip a coin to decide the first position.

Should Glens win the toss they will get the benefit of the third playoff game here if necessary. The best-of-three playoff series will start this week.

* * *

GLENS ENTERTAIN TRENTON

Don McNevin's Glen Roy entry in the Trent Valley League hooks up with the fast-stepping Trenton Jewellers in Memorial Arena tomorrow night in what should be a hefty tussle between the squads. The teams have met twice before and each time the Jewellers have eked out a win after a hard-fought battle. The Glens at present in second place in the southern division of the loop are breathing down the necks of the RCAF Flyers and tomorrow night's game should be productive of some fast rugged hockey. Children under 12 years of age will be admitted free if accompanied by a parent or parents.

* * *

ON TOP!

According to statistics released by Secretary Dick Bridgman of the Valley League, Earl Cousins and Brian Mulvihill are leading the loop in scoring points. Mulvihill is at the moment on top with 16 goals and 26 assists for 42 points while Cousins is seven points behind with 21 goals and 14 helpers. Leo Goyer has 19 points with Timmy Williams 17. Bob Hatfield has 15 points.

Doran Uses Four Junior B's To Bolster Weakened Team; Mulholland Gets 4 for Sacs

An injury-riddled Belleville Hawks team went down before the Kingston Sacs in a penalty-strewn senior "B" game here last night before 713 fans. The score was 12 to 7.

Short six of their regulars through injury and sickness, the Hawks called up four junior "B" players to fill the gaps. Not a regular defenceman was available. Bob Wilson and Peter Green, Ted DeGray and Ray Carey, junior players saw service and to make matters worse Peter Jones, starry Hawks wingman, was forced to retire from the game at the end of the second period with a four-stitch slash in his face.

18 Penalties

The game, while not productive of any spectacular hockey was rough and rugged at times with referee Peter Nigh, Peterborough, handing out eighteen penalties, eleven of them coming in the boisterous second period. The Hawks drew down 10 of the misdemeanors.

Jackie Wardhaugh and Lattimer of the Sacs staged a fisticuffing battle in the second with both drawing minors and majors. Lattimer drew four minors and a major for his night's work.

The best hockey of the night was played in the initial period with the teams see-sawing in scoring with the Hawks emerging with the odd goal in seven at the period end.

Kingston flashed their best hockey in the boisterous second period with penalties weakening the Hawks and the SACs capitalizing on every opportunity. They scored six goals against a single return in this hectic heat two of them coming when they were shorthanded. The Hawk junior defence apparently did not have the experience to cope with the speedy Kingston front lines.

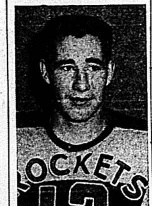
Settle in Third

The Hawks settled down the third heat and held the Sacs to a 3-2 score, missing many chances when in close.

Lefort at the other end despite the dozen pucks that went past him came up with some sensational saves off Sacs racing in alone to his doorstep.

Mulholland Gets Four

Sammy Mulholland flashed starry form to pace the Sacs offensive. The former Red Wing blasted four goals past Lefort and got two assists. White also came up with a fine scoring job rattling the twine for another quartet of markers. Murray hit the hemp twice and assisted on three others with Ohlke getting one and two and Larmer the same.

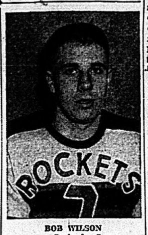


RAY CAREY
. . . Clicks for Two

And Carey Two

Coach "Red" Doran and Vern Goyer packed the scoring punches for the Hawks with junior Ray Carey assisting. Doran scored a pair with an assist, while Goyer hit the rigging once and was credited with four helpers. Carey scored twice with Jackie Wardhaugh and Keith MacDonald getting the others. Wilson and DeGray were credited with assists.

The Mulholland -Murray-Ohlke first line of the Sacs looked the best for the winners carrying the offensive punch and checking hard both ways. Larmer, White and McGregor also stood out with Anderson in the nets kicking aside plenty of Hawk rubber. The veteran Joe Catlin was forced to retire early in the game following a stiff body check.



BOB WILSON
. . . Socks for Sacs

Doran and Goyer, MacDonald and Wardhaugh skated their heads off as did Peter Jones when he was out there. The junior kids came through collectively with a fine performance with Wilson doing a fine job on the defence and Carey shining up front. Peter Green and DeGray worked hard, and Lefort stood out brilliantly at times.

The teams:

Kingston: Goal Anderson; defence, Sweetman, Stewart; centre Murray; wings Ohlke, Mulholland, subs, Goodfellow, Lattimer, McGregor, Catlin, Larmer, White, Tinkess, Bender.

Belleville: Goal Lefort; defence Wilson, Green; centre, Goyer; wings Moher, MacDonald; subs, Jones, Carey, Day, Doran, Wardhaugh, DeGray.

SECRET POLICE ACCUSED

Hong Kong, Feb. 5 (AP)—The boss of communist China's secret police has accused more than 80 per cent of his administrative personnel of corruption, the official communist paper Peiping People's Daily reported in the Jan. 17 issue, just received here.

Boston Bruins Now Solid In Fourth Spot

Montreal, Feb. 5—(CP)—The rampaging Boston Bruins collected six points out of a possible eight last week to climb from fifth to fourth place in National Hockey League standings, four points ahead of New York Rangers.

The Bruins now have 44 points from 16 victories, 21 losses and 12 ties and Rangers 40 points with a 15-23-10 record.

The league-leading Detroit Red Wings picked up three points from a victory Sunday over Rangers and a tie with Canadiens Saturday. Wings have 66 points, 10 more than second-place Toronto Maple Leafs.

Biggest jump in individual scoring was made by Ted Lindsay of Detroit who chalked up five points, two goals and two assists in weekend games alone, to move from seventh to third place.

Teammate Gordie Howe moved ahead of Montreal's Maurice Richard in goal-getting, to settle himself more firmly in the league leadership with 51 points.

Howe now has 26 goals and 25 assists, six points ahead of Elmer Lach of Montreal who boasts 12 tallies and 33 assists for 45 points. Lach continues to lead in assists.

Richard, scoreless during the weekend, dropped to fourth place with 25 goals, and 15 assists for 40 points.

Detroit's Terry Sawchuk's 10 shutouts are five more than his nearest rival, Al Rollins of Toronto.

With 105 minutes in the penalty box, Boston's Gus Kyle is league bad man.

Tamworth Wins From Tweed By 10-6 Score

Tweed (Special) — Tamworth defeated Tweed by a score of 10-6 on Friday night in a game filled with arguments and penalties.

Tweed collected four minors and one major penalty while visiting Tamworth were assessed seven minors, two majors and one misconduct.

During the time that hockey was being played, the Tamworth squad were sparked by goalie Storring. "Tar" Brady, Tamworth defenceman, was the best rearguard on the ice. He scored twice and assisted on another pair. Fish pulled the string three times for scores, Fisher picked up a pair with singletons going to Marshall, Holmes and Weese.

McLoughlin spearheaded the Tweed attack with three counters and one assist while Cole, Sherry and Woods garnered one goal each. Robson assisted on three Tweed counters in the dying moments of the game.

Tamworth held a 4-0 lead at the end of the first period and made it 7-1 in the second frame. With only two minutes left to play, they led 10-2 but an unwarranted attack on a Tweed player by Hinch of the visitors angered the home squad and they tallied four times before the end of the game.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Ellis Pringle, coach of Sutton Greenshirts in the Tri-County Senior Rural Hockey League, said yesterday he will not allow his team to play again at Haliburton because Saturday night "they were up against the most vicious set-up I have ever seen."

The Greenshirts' game against Haliburton Huskies ended in disorder. The Sutton team retreated to its bus under police protection. Pringle said the bus was bombarded with pop bottles and snowballs as it moved away.

The game was called in the second period when Sutton was leading 4-2. Spectators leaped over the boards. Pringle said: "I could see a free-for-all coming and I think we avoided it. There must be some sensible people in Haliburton but I didn't see them."

Provincial Constable Gordon Langton said he saw a crowd of young people about the bus but he saw no bottles thrown.

Pringle said his team is willing to meet the Huskies on local ice Feb. 11. Sutton is 45 miles north of Toronto.

Dick Pride, chairman of the Indiana State Boxing Commission, said yesterday in Miami, Fla., that suspension of heavyweight champion Joe Walcott in Indiana had been lifted. Pride aid Jersey Joe finally had paid the $200 fine levied because he ran out on an exhibition match in Evansville, Ind., last August.

Ivro Wynne, athletic director at McMaster University, said yesterday in Hamilton that he feels the university's new entry in senior intercollegiate basketball circles is just as strong as either Western or Toronto. He said he does not rate Queen's or McGill in the same class as the central Ontario squads.

Commissioner John D. Holahan of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission said in Philadelphia yesterday he has a copy of a contract in which Jersey Joe agreed to give Ezzard Charles a return bout for the heavyweight championship.

In The Hague, The Netherlands, Don Gaue, 24-year-old defenceman of Edmonton Mercurys, came down with inflammation of the lungs and will not leave with the team when it departs by plane today for Oslo, Norway and the Olympic hockey championships starting Feb. 14.

Mrs. Jean Sedgman lost her opening match in the Asian tennis championships yesterday in Colombo bowing to Mrs. Joy Mottram of England 6-0, 6-1. Mrs. Sedgman, on a tennis honeymoon with the Australian Davis Cup star, was no match for the smooth-swinging English star.

Outlaw Lacrosse Possible On West Coast

Vancouver, Feb. 5 (CP) —There is a possibility of 'outlaw lacrosse' on the coast and no east-west Mann Cup final this year.

The possibility was raised here yesterday after inter-city league officials learned of the Ontario Lacrosse Association's rejection of its proposal to dissociate from the Canadian Lacrosse Association and conduct its own Dominion championship with Ontario.

Officials of the league meet here Friday to decide their next step.

"It appears that the east has quite a bit more say in the CLA policy than we do," said Carl Grauer, president of Vancouver Combines, Canadian finalists last year.

"However, our club is still prepared to stand by the original motion—even if it means throwing over the Dominion series this year.

"I think the rest of the clubs in the league are prepared to stand by us, probably to the point of playing 'outlaw' lacrosse."

The inter-city league has complained that the CLA "bungled" the Mann Cup playoffs last year.

Gavilan Retains Welter Crown But Only by Whisker Finish

By JACK HAND

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5—(AP)—Cuban Kid Gavilan, a specialist in slit decision rhubarbs, still owns the welter title after a tight squeak with stringbean Bobby Dykes of San Antonio.

It was another "Gavilan special" last night at Miami Stadium where many of the 11,526 who paid $76,814 booed a divided decision for the sleek Havana hawk. Only four points separated the two fighters on the total of three official cards.

Referee Eddie Coachman voted for Dykes, the 22-year-old underdog who has been adopted by Miami as a local favorite. Coachman had the rangy Texan on top.

Near Photo Finish

Both judges found Gavilan the winner but Mark Erwin of Miami had it a near-photo finish with the Cuban a nose in front, 142-141. Ladislad Nodarse put the keed over the top 145-139.

The AP card ga-e it to Gavilan 144-142.

It was so close—despite an eight-count knockdown scored by Gavilan with a smashing right to the jaw in the second round—that a good flurry could have swung the title to handsome Bobby.

Jimmy Park, Dykes' manager, shouldered the blame for assurring his boy he had only to survive the 15th and final round to win the decision.

"I had no idea Bobby wasn't a certain winner if he got through the 15th," said Parks.

"Gee, I wish I could have won," said Dykes. "They were telling me in the corner I was ahead from the 12th on. If I had known I wasn't ahead, I'd have put more steam in the lasts rounds."

As it turned out, a slow start and that costly knockdown cost Dykes his big chance to upset the 4 to 1 odds.

"I was cold at the start but warmed up and cut loose about the fourth or fifth," he explained "When he knocked me down I picked up the count at four and felt good. It surprised me that I felt better the longer the fight went."

Gavilan seemed to lose his zip after his flashy start. Time after time in the eighth round he crouched low, almost touching the floor, ducking away from Dykes' shakey left. Then in the last five rounds, he kept running into a Dykes right hand that spun his head. The Cuban keed always fights in flurries but there were less of them and they were farther apart than usual.

Jackie Robinson Enters Radio, TV

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York, Feb. 5 — (AP) — Jackie Robinson, the Brooklyn Dodgers' second baseman who was the first negro to play modern Major League baseball, added another "first" to his list yesterday when he signed a two-year contract as a radio and television executive.

Robinson will serve as "director of community activities" for WNBC and WNBT, the key radio and television stations of the National Broadcasting Company in the Metropolitan New York area. Robinson thus became the first Negro to hold an executive post with a major radio or television station.

Although his new duties were not fully defined, Robinson said they will be closely related with his work with boys, which he has been doing at the Harlem Y.M.C.A. and would enable him to expand such work.

He also said they would not interfere with his baseball career because "if I lose effectiveness in baseball, I lose it here too. My importance to kids is in being able to play baseball."

Petes Defeat Eagles 5-3

Peterborough, Feb. 5. —Peterborough Petes downed Peterborough Eagles, 5-3, last night to lengthen their lead in the O.H.A. Senior B. Central Ontario group. Some 1,100 fans watched.

Petes held a 2-1 edge in the second period and led, 4-2, going into the third. Six of the nine penaltie went to the winners.

Gus Leonard was top sniper for the Petes with two goals, and Drake Jopling, Ted Collins and Jake Wade had singles. For Eagles, Jim Munroe, Keith Montgomery and George Samalenko were the marksmen.

Johnny Longden 'Rider of 1951'

Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 5—(AP)—Johnny Longden, three-times National Riding champion, has been selected the rider of 1951 by the Turf Writers covering the Santa Anita meeting.

The selection entitles him to the Georgie Woold Memorial award, which will be presented at ceremonies to be held at Santa Anita on Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12.

Longden, a native of Taber, Alta., received nine of the 25 votes cast. Johnny Adams and Dave Gorman tied for second with six votes each. Single ballots were cast for Eddie Arcaro, Ted Atkinson and Eric Guerin.

Prior winners were Gordon Glisson in 1949 and Willie Shoemaker in 1950, neither of whom was eligible again.

Longden won the National Riding crown in 1938-47-48.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Feb. 5—(AP)—Capsule comments vaguely recalled from a heavy weekend with the baseball brigade:

Tommy Holmes, Boston Braves manager— "We'll have the best pitching in the National League. If we find a good shortstop or a good second-baseman we could win the pennant. We've got the finest rookies crop in history."

Larry Goetz, umpire—"Am I looking forward to the start of another season? Listen, the way I feel about baseball I die a little bit when that last game comes around every year."

Leo Durocher, New York Giants manager—"So one day season before last I'm suddenly out of starting pitchers and I walk over to Sal Maglie and ask him if he'd like to start a game. I'd been using him only a little in relief, see? So Sal says yes, and he pitches me a shutout. He finishes up with an 18-4 record, best in the league, and I'm a genius. Sometimes a manager can't see something that's right before his eyes."

Frank Lane, general manager, Chicago White Sox—"Chuck Comiskey will be back as vice-president. It's just a little family argument."

Spike Briggs, Detroit president —"I'll still be just a weekend baseball magnate. I'll have to stay out at the body plant and work hard all week to make enough money to pay off the baseball losses."

Hottest Record

The hottest item in the phonograph record line is a recording of the hysteria which overtook radio announcer Russ Hodges when Bobby Thomson hit that you-know-what in the final playoff game last autumn.

Many copies have been distributed privately, but the demand is so great that the platter may soon be made available all over the country. Hodges, himself, has received more than 2,000 requests. President Horace Stoneham loves to just sit and play it over and over.

Famous Mexican Jumper Dies

Mexico City, Feb. 5—(AP) — Arete, Mexico's most famous jumping horse, died yesterday after he failed to respond to an operation for a broken leg. The 13-year-old, one-eyed jumper, was loaded with honors after he won the Olympic jumping championship in London in 1948. The army's senior grooms were assigned to care for him. Mexico City horsemanship clubs gave him a scroll calling him 'Mexico's First Horse'. (It was tacked up over his stall.)

But Col. Humerto Mariles, who won the London Olympics aboard Arete, continued to work him hard enough to keep him in condition. Arete's last public appearance was in the recent International Horse Show in Monterrey, Mexico.

HECTOR LALANDE

The junior Hawks "production line" has been reunited after a lengthy separation through injuries. Tonight Hector Lalande will centre his old wing buddies Billy Strahan and George Jacklin against the Kingston Vics is an important junior "B" tilt in Kingston. Jacklin was forced out of action with an injured shoulder while Strahan has also been idle due to illness. However they're back together tonight, and the reunion couldn't have happened at a better time.

Reds' Powell Tops American League Scorers

New York, Feb. 5 (AP) — Ray Powell, sharp-eyed centre of the Providence Reds, tops the American League in scoring for the fifth straight week today.

Powell picked up three points during the week to maintain his 11-point edge over the rest of the field. Powell has collected 25 goals and 44 assists for 69 points. His 44 assists also are tops.

Right wing Steve Wochy of Cleveland has climbed into the runner-up spot with 58 points.

Gil Mayer of Pittsburgh remains in front for goal-tending honors. Mayer has allowed 123 goals in 49 games for a 2.51 goals-against record. Emile Francis, Cincinnati, has turned in the most shutouts, four. Pete Durham of Indianapolis is the top penalty collector with 129 minutes.

Thomson, 'Allie' Get Pay Boosts

New York, Feb. 5 (AP) — Allie Reynolds and Bobby Thomson, a couple of guys who had more than a little to do with the Yankees and Giants meeting in an all-New York World Series last fall, are happy athletes today.

Each left for home yesterday with a $35,000 contract. That is more money than either of them ever made before in a single season.

Reynolds, double no-hit pitching ace of the Yankees, received a $10,000 boost over his earnings of last season. Thomson, slugging Giants third sacker, got $12,500 more than his $22,500 of 1951.

Both reported they were "completely satisfied." Thomson thus becomes the highest salaried player on the Giants. Reynolds' salary is believed to be second only to that of Phil Rizzuto among the Yankees.

It was another rich reward for Thomson who became one of baseball's glamor boys with his pennant winning playoff homer against Brooklyn in the final game of the season.

Ken Laufman Tops Scorers

Toronto, Feb. 5 (CP) — Ken Laufman has regained top place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A individual standings.

The 19-year-old Guelph Biltmore forward scored a goal and assisted on six others in the last week to bounce back into the league leadership a scant point in front of Toronto Marlboros' Danny Poland who is in turn one point up on Ken Wharram of the Galt Black Hawks. Laufman has 111 points while Poland is next with 110 and Wharram third with 109.

Don Head, the Marlboros' goalkeeper, continues to hold the best goals-against average of the regular netminders. He has allowed 95 goals in 32 games for a 2.98 average.

Ed Chadwick of Toronto St. Michael's is next with a 3.29 average while Kitchener Greenshirts' Bill Harrington is third with 3.73.

Sedgman Detours Yankee Tennis

Colombo, Ceylon, Feb. 5—(AP) — Frank Sedgman, Australia's brilliant tennis ace, said today that he will not defend his American singles championship at Forest Hills this year.

Instead, Sedgman said he will concentrate on trying to win the Wimbledon Title, which thus far has eluded him.

The Aussie's Davis Cup star will tour Europe after the Asian tourney here, and arrive in England in time to compete at Wimbledon.

Jimmy Carter Rated 5-1 Favorite To Whip Toronto's Allan McFater

Toronto, Feb. 5 (CP) — An eager 20-year-old Canadian kid with an objective in mind will step into a Maple Leaf Gardens ring tonight. The objective—to flatten a world champion's prestige with his fists.

The occasion — Toronto's Allan McFaters meeting with lightweight champion James Carter of New York city in a nine-round non-title bout. The clash could set an indoor gate record for this city.

McFater isn't rated much of a chance against the 28-year-old Negro, the first lightweight title-holder to perform here since Sammy Angott took on Harry Hurst at the Gardens 11 years ago. The smooth-working New Yorker, who gained his crown from Ike Williams last May, is rated in some circles at as much as a 5-1 favorite.

24th Pro Fight

The two fighters weighed in at noon before Ontario Athletic Commissioner Fred Steel. Both tipped the scales at 140—five pounds over the lightweight limit. The bout was slated for 140 give or take a pound.

The fight is McFater's 24th professional appearance, but only the second time he has been asked to go beyond eight rounds. The other long-distance encounter was back in the summer of 1950 when he managed a 10-round draw with Jean Richard at Montreal. Of his two dozen paid outings, only three have been losses. One was a kayo at the hands of Armand Savoie of Montreal.

Carter the champion, has lost only 12 of his 82 fights. One was a knockout by Charley (Cabey) Lewis. Seven of the bouts were draws.

McFater is not noted for a knockout punch, but is notoriously good with a left hook that could find a chink in the champion's armor. Word from the Mimico kid's camp is that he will go along with his usual forcing style.

Remember When

(By The Canadian Press)

The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada suspended eight members of the executive of Ottawa Rough Riders football club, 16 years ago today, after investigating the "great impersonation" of the previous fall when John Hilliard, an American player, performed under an assumed name. The executive later was reinstated.,

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

Those expert viewers of the sports scene who record such things recently voted to decide who was the "greatest woman Canadian athlete of 1951".

We may be quibbling, but we believe that while the selection was perfect, the term used is incorrect. The greatest athlete of the year, of either sex, is always a question of debate. But if this balloting was intended, as no doubt it was, to designate the competitor who provided the most thrilling and spectacular success of the year, there wasn't much doubt about the award.

The honor of becoming Canada's Girl Athlete of Distinction in 1951 went, and quite rightly, to a snub-nosed freckled bit of a girl, 17 years old and weighing 108 pounds, who undoubtedly rated listing as Canada's most dramatic single figure of 1951.

This was Marlene Stewart, a poker-faced bundle of golfing dynamite from obscure Fonthill, Ont., who captured the Canadian Ladies Close and Open championships at Montreal's rolling Laval-sur-le Lac links.

Marlene might go down in golfing history as the Little Girl Who Played Like a Woman. For here she was, only 17 years old, a mere slip of a girl who had never faced such crowds, nor such competitors before, pitted against some of America's best.

Let us paint in a bit of the background to a Canadian girl athlete's finest performance of the year. Marlene, the Mighty Mite, in achieving the first "double win" by a Canadian woman since Toronto's Ada McKenzie turned the trick in 1934, eliminated Marjorie Rowe and Mae Murray, two topnotch U.S. players in the opening rounds of match play. That set the stage for a gruelling 36-hole final against Grace Lenczyk, two-time Canadian open champion and one of the best women amateurs on the continent.

Wee Marlene held a shaky one-up lead at the 35th. on the tricky back nine at Laval, and headed for the final hole with the knowledge that her powerful opponent was getting stronger, having erased a one-time three-up margin. The chips were down. This was it. And wee Marlene met the challenge. She hunched her slim shoulders and boomed a tee-shot right down the middle. Grace Lenczyk duplicated the feat. They both made the green in three. Marlene stroked her 18-foot putt within inches of the cup, while Miss Lenczyk missed her 15-footer and conceded Marlene the match.

Youth marches on, in sport, as it always has done, but more decisively than ever. In Canada a 17-year-old girl becomes the top athlete of the year. Across the line, by coincidence, another girl still in her teens is named the United States girl athlete of distinction for 1951. Maureen (Little Mo) Connolly, the second youngest player ever to win the United States national tennis championship, blazed her way to this honor 12 days before she became 17 years old.

There seems to be an interesting moral in this continued upsurge of youth in sport. It means, we think, that the kids are getting into sports competition at earlier ages than ever before, and there's nothing wrong with that. It means, broadly, that instead of a nation of onlookers, we're becoming a nation of participants, which is a great deal better for both moral and physical well-being.

Metals Defeat Area G 5-3

Sheet Metal defeated Area G by a score of 5-3 in a Northern Electric Hockey League game played in the Memorial Arena last night.

Neither team was able to dent the twine in the first chucker and it was tied at 2-2 after the second. Then Area G grabbed an early lead but Rosebush and Salter combined to tie it up again. Rosetti and Salter regained the lead for the Metalmen a minute later and Rosebush salted it away with time running out in the game.

Salter was high scorer for the night with two goals and one assist, followed by Rosebush with one of each. Bell and Rosetti tallied once for the winners with an assist going to Draycott.

Murphy, Cornell and Bradden were the marksmen for the short-handed Area G squad.

Sheet Metal: Hughes, Rosetti, Woods, Draycott, Jewel, Shore, Hatfield, Bell, Rosebush, Salter and York.

Area G: Carr, Bradden, Thornton, Murphy, Cornell, Moore, Dent and Babish.

Plan $25,000,000 Racing Plant For New York

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5—(AP) — Plans for a $25,000,000 deluxe horse racing plant to be built in the Metropolitan New York City area are under way, says John Morris, president of the Metropolitan Jockey Club which owns and runs Jamaica.

Preliminary studies are being made at the tracks concerned," Morris said in an interview last night. "We hope to get together in the spring."

He said tentative plans call for joint operation of the proposed ultra-modern track by the Jamaica Racing Association, the Queens County Jockey Club, which operates Aqueduct, and the Empire City Racing Association, which has no track of its own and now conducts meetings at Jamaica.

No site has been selected. The proposed plant would replace the old Jamaica and Aqueduct tracks. Belmont Park would not be affected.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Akoolap Oxpert has double the trouble with a redouble. What he does not know about redoubles would fill a book. But all he would get from it would be a good look at the pictures.

Just as there are two kinds of doubles, so are there two kinds of redoubles. Unless you can tell the difference when they are used in a bridge game, your partner is greatly handicapped.

One kind of double is intended for penalties. Its purpose is to tell partner the opponent contract can be defeated. It is known as a penalty double. Oldtimers used to call it a business double.

The other kind of a double is intended to ask partner to bid something under certain conditions. It is known as a takeout double. Oldtimers used to call it an informatory double.

One kind of redouble is intended for telling partner their own doubled bid can really be made. It tells partner not to worry about their contract merely because opponents doubled it for penalty.

The other kind of redouble is intended as a signal for showing unusual information. The information it shows will depend on the situation in which it is used.

Take a deal like this:

NORTH
♥J 9 8 5 2
♦None
♣K Q 9 2

WEST
♠K Q 7 4
♥10 6 3
♦A J 10 9
♣A 8

EAST
♠6 5 2
♥7
♦8 7 6 5 3
♣10 7 6 5

SOUTH
♠J 8
♥A K Q 4
♦K Q 4 2
♣J 4 3

South opens with a heart. West doubles; a takeout double. North redoubles. This gives south special information. It is information that some normal or unusual bid might not impart.

After the south opening bid, north knows there is a game in the pair with hearts as trump. In fact, he would have made a jump reply of some kind if west had not doubled.

Thus, the redouble shows a hand that is good enough to make a jump response. It shows other things, too. But remember first that it promises game. One thing at a time.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 5 — (AP) — "Who's on first?"

"Costello is right now", replied But Abbott. "But I get my innings next."

The purpose of the inquiry was not to get into the baseball routine of Abbott and Costello, but to find out which one was the boss. That is sometimes as confusing as the "who's on first?" Merry-go-round, since the comedy team has perhaps the most unusual business set-up in the entertainment world.

Right now Lou Costello, the rotund funnyman of the pair, is the boss. He and Bud, the straight man, are finishing up 26 half-hour TV shows which Lou is producing for the National Broadcasting Corporation. Lou will own the rights to this enterprise.

But on Feb. 27, Bud takes over. He is producing a movie called "Abbott and Costello Meet Captain Kidd," with Charles Laughton in the role of the famed sea captain. Last summer, A. and C. made a picture called "Jack and the Beanstalk". That was one of Lou's productions.

The boys have three more pictures to make for their home lot, Universal - International. (They take 50 per cent of the profits of those films, 30 for Lou, 20 for Bud.) After their studio contract is over, they intend to work only for themselves.

"I see no reason why we should not just make pictures for ourselves," Bud told me. "It should work out very well. I do a picture for Lou, and then he does a picture for me. That would make everything even-Steven."

Abbott and Costello, already among the highest-paid of Hollywood performers, stand to make vast amounts of money while producing for themselves. Good, bad or indifferent, their pictures always reap a healthy profit. The average profit is $2,000,000.

Considering all these operations, I asked if the boys didn't fear they would run out of material.

"Never", Bud replied flatly. "The experts say there are only about a dozen basic comedy situations. But the variations are innumerable. You can use the same joke over and over again, merely by putting a little switch on it."

Actors File Damage Suit In Federal Court

Los Angeles, Feb. 5 (AP) —British film actress Jean Simmons and her husband, actor Stewart Granger, filed a $250,000 damage against Howard Hughes and RKO-Radio Pictures.

They allege they negotiated last year with RKO for a three-year contract for her and part of the deal was to be the purchase by the studio of some real estate owned by Granger.

The real estate deal fell through the complaint asserts, but subsequently the company sent letters to major film producers asserting RKO had exclusive contract rights with Miss Simmons, and this prevented her from negotiating any other contract.

It asks the court to declare invalid a purported oral agreement between Miss Simmons and the studio and for an injunction restraining RKO from interfering with her negotiations with other studios.

MARX LETTER AUCTIONED

London, Feb. 5 (AP)—Three men believed to be Russians were outbid for a letter by Karl Marx which brought £220 at an auction today. The letter dated 1875, was written by Marx to a British publisher, and protested a proposed cut-down translation of his work "Das Kapital." Henrich Eiseman, a London dealer, finally put in the winning bid.

Look in the section in which our birthday comes and find hat your outlook is, according to e stars.

For Wednesday, February 6

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Home personal interests, as household affairs, banking, sound investments, and all urgent needs or government and our armed orces, handling useful items, honest trades among day's favored.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—The many activities and work for which you have talent are in line or fresh benefits. Intelligent application to essentials now will ring due reward. Friendly day.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—timulus, excitement in the air, all to the good if sensibly controlled and applied where needed, and ou will know where. Be amiable, co-operative at home as well as in usiness.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Delicate matters, work, study experiment requiring finesse, analysis and planning highly sponsored. [illegible] all times be sensibly cautious and have care for necessary etails.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Hard work, difficult problems will respond more readily if you manage as cleverly as you so well an, and do the urgent tasks first. Check all important issues!

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo) — You should do admirably with your schedule, especially if you don't worry or overwork. Take added responsibilities in stride. Many new interests favored.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)— Similar tendencies to Virgo and Taurus now and, for the most part, they are encouraging and can bring new stimulus, gains. Don't fear to pioneer. Forward!

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Stir up your initiative and those important talents; there is work for all of them and returns for your sincerity. Happy domestic relations and social interests freshly sponsored.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)— Intelligent planning and execution of your day's schedule will return gratifying results. Important, however that you pay sound attention to details, promises, accuracy. You can advance.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—An open road ahead with advantages and fresh gains to be had for the striving. Don't overreach; at ~~same~~ time make headway wherever you can honestly. Invest wisely:

YOU BORN TODAY: Artistry, much talent and ability to reach an important position are inherent, but a tendency to let things drift, to lack consistent ambition are also indicated, and these latter must be overcome definitely before they defeat your better self, cause you to become indifferent to achievement. You are kindly, generous as a rule, yet may be misled by unworthy, undeserving ones. Never neglect your own dear ones. Spiritual development, honorable associates your safeguard.

Birthdate: Chrisopher Marlow, great dramatist; Sir Henry Irving, actor; Ramon Navarro, actor.

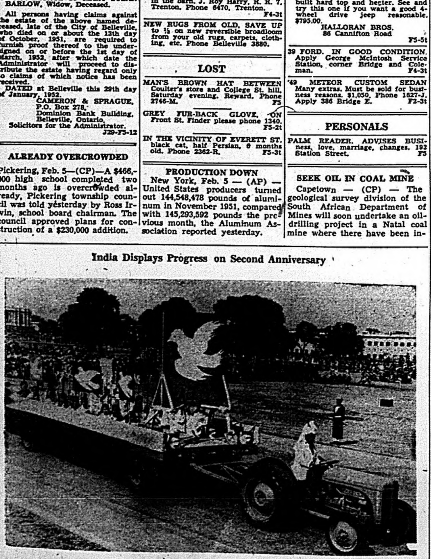
India Displays Progress on Second Anniversary



New Delhi, capital of India, plunged into a frenzy of rejoicing and merry-making on the second anniversary of the formation of the Indian Republic. This is one of the hundreds of floats in the procession of tableaux showing the progress of the republic. It emphasized peace, but part of the parade was devoted to displaying India's military strength. — Central Press Canadian.

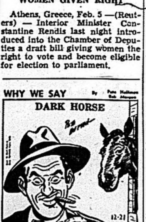
WOMEN GIVEN RIGHT

Athens, Greece, Feb. 5 —(Reuters) — Interior Minister Constantine Rendis last night introduced into the Chamber of Deputies a draft bill giving women the right to vote and become eligible for election to parliament.

WHY WE SAY



. . . A poor bet

The expression "dark horse" for an unfavored horse that wins a race, started in Tennessee. Sam Flynn had a dark colored horse named "Dusky Pete." He used to ride from town to town entering the horse in local races. When he first rode into a town, his horse appeared sluggish, but on the track he quickly snapped out of it and became a winner.

Communism Ideal That Cannot Be Defeated by Force

--- Pearson

Toronto, Feb.5—(CP)— External Affairs Minister Pearson said last night that communism is an idea that cannot be defeated by force. It must be resisted by intellectual weapons and by removing the conditions of poverty, misery and injustice in which it grows.

Mr. Pearson last night was sworn in as chancellor Victoria College of the University of Toronto. In his inaugural address, he said:

"To communism's dialectical materialism we must oppose spiritual faith that makes no pretence at knowing all the answers.'

The place of the University was to teach a persistent questioning of any doctrine that was not proven.

"Refusal to yield to mass hysteria or prejudice or to abandon the right of the individual to be mistaken or to be different will be labelled treason or subversion. Let us not worry too much about these false labels."

Freedom to oppose communism successfully include the obligation to be socially useful and to struggle against evil and injustice.

Soldier Sought After American Girl Kidnapped

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 5 — (AP)—U.S. army agents struggled futilely today to follow the cold trail of a soldier wanted in connection with the one-hour sadistic abduction of red-haired Mamie Ruth Shelton, 18-year-old American high school senior.

The army identified the soldier as Pte. Eugene F. Walters, 28, who went absent without leave Saturday night with a .45-calibre automatic pistol and a jeep from a field artillery battery at Hanau, 24 hours before Miss Shelton was kidnapped.

A military source said two leads had petered out but the search was being pressed throughout West Germany with the co-operation of thousands of German police.

Miss Shelton and her two sergeant escorts, who were robbed on the road from Hanau to Frankfurt of their car and more than $70 by her abductor, said he wore an army uniform, spoke good English and brandished a .45.

Little Miss Shelton, a five-footer with flaming tresses but cool nerves, appeared completely recovered. She returned today to her classes at the Frankfurt post's high school for army dependents.

The step-daughter of Master Sgt. Franklin B. Burns of Hot Springs, Va., was abandoned by her kidnapper in a lonely wood after he had malested her. He did not, however, criminally assault her.

An army source said she told investigators she was ordered to undress while the gunman sat beside her for half an hour in the stalled car. Then he fled on foot across the snowy field, warning her not to leave the car or he would kill her.

Wrapped in a blanket, she shivered there through the night. At dawn she got out and walked until she found two military policemen in a jeep.

Will be Returned To Canada to Face Murder Charge

Welland, Feb. 5 (CP) — James Kelsey, 27, now held in Buffalo for illegal entry to the United States, will be returned to Canada this week to face a charge of murder in the death of Sam Delibasich, Welland taxi driver, whose battered body was found in a field two years ago.

Kelsey's brother, Lloyd Frank Cross, 24, also has been charged with the slaying. He was arraigned yesterday.

Both Kelsey and Cross are former Welland residents. Kelsey changed his name when his mother married for the second time.

When the body of Delibasich was found Dec. 17, 1949, with some small bills and change still in the pockets, rumors circulated that terrorists were responsible. Delibasich's brother was reported to have been killed in Yugoslavia in 1945.

Police now discount the theory that revenge or politics were behind the slaying. They said robbery was the motive.

Delibasich came to Canada in 1928 and lived in Kirkland Lake until 1942. He also worked for some time in Timmins, Ont.

Kelsey, sometimes known as Keeler, was formerly in the Canadian Army. Deportation proceedings are scheduled for Wednesday.

IVANHOE

Rev. B. Beckel Remains Extra Year

Ivanhoe — The official board meeting of Ivanhoe pastoral charge was held recently in Beulah Church with the Reverend Boyd Beckel presiding.

Various reports from the different charges on the circuit were given, all reported increases from all departments. During the year, cupboards have been built in the parsonage; a bathroom and water system installed; the old garage torn down and a new one built in a more convenient place.

The election of officers for the year resulted as follows: parsonage treasurer, Arthur Wood; representative to conference, Earl Holland; recording secretary, Ernest Sarles; M and M committee, P. M. Wood; treasurer to M and M, Clifford Mitz.

Mr. Beckel was invited to remain on the Ivanhoe pastoral charge for another year at a salary of $2600. plus $300 allowance for car expenses.

Mr. Beckel thanked all for the invitation to remain another year, which he graciously accepted.

Teachers Meet To Decide Course of Action

Sydney, N. S., Feb. 5—(CP)—Cape Breton County's rural and village teachers were expected to decide today to end their strike pending a Feb. 15 county council meeting to deal with their salary demands.

President H. H. Wetmore of the county local of the Nova Scotia Teachers' Union called today's meeting following an announcement that the council will hold a special session to deal with the requests for higher pay.

The strike of 243 teachers—first of its kind in Nova Scotia—began last Thursday when the municipality referred demands for a $300 yearly increase to the provincial government. The government had previously rejected a province-wide request on the grounds that it was already paying more than its share for education.

Up To Teachers

Mr. Wetmore said last night "the next move is up to the teachers" but the general feeling was that the teachers would end the four-day-old strike which had left 5,000 children without classes.

The council had to consider, among other things, a proposal that the teachers be paid a $300 bonus this year pending clarification of provincial-municipal responsibility in the matter.

Meanwhile, the mainland situation remains serious. Antigonish rural and Halifax county locals have voted to strike and the result of a provincial strike vote will be released this week.

The Cape Breton action is the first strike by Nova Scotia teachers and is part of a long drive for better wages.

They have received support from labor and other groups.

Salaries range from $650 annually for those with no formal training to a starting salary of $1,920 for an academic licence.

CAMPBELLFORD

More Than 700 Fans Thrilled By Precision Timing, Ability Of Quinte Skating Club Members

Campbellford—Members of the Quinte Skating Club of Belleville thrilled more than 700 fans in the Community Arena here on Friday night when the Campbellford Rotary Club held its annual ice carnival. The crowd was loud in its praises of the Belleville skating experts, 15 star performers who thrilled the fans with their exhibitions of fancy skating.

Precision Timing

The skaters displayed precision timing and ability in the tricky steps and formations on the silvery blades. The crowd garnered particular enjoyment from the antics of two clowns who had spectators roaring with laughter all during their performance.

Jack Dickens, president of the Quinte Skating Club and Olivia Weese, who was in charge of the skaters, as well as all members of the cast, were introduced to the audience by Gordon Woodcock of Belleville and Trenton, who presided over the show.

Little ten year old Jacqueline Woodcock, of Middleton Park, drew round after round of applause from the spectators with her single number, "Penquin at the Waldorf". A formation ten-step by Lillian Sprackett, Georgia Scott, Olivia Weese, Jack Dickens, Duane Warren and Gordon Davies was also a crowd pleaser, as were the numbers performed by the rest of the cast.

A number of skating races for school children were held, and members of the local Rotary Club who sponsored the show, had a real job on their hands when it came to sorting out the winners and keeping track of the prizes.

Results of the races are as follows:

Girls up to 10 years: Sharon Hennesy, 9; Anne Boyd, 9; boys up to 10 years, David Dooher, 9, Billy Labrash, 8; girls 10 to 12, Sandra McDonald, 12, Peggy Noble, 12; boys 10 to 12, Bobby Dunk, 12, Allan Copperthwaite, 12; girls 12 to 14, Helen Holmes, 12, Shirley Merrit, 12; boys 12 to 14, Jeff White, 13, David Lockwood, 12; girls 14 to 16, no entries; boys 14 to 15, Jason Field, 15. Len Wilson, 14.

Each winner was presented with a prize by the Rotary Club.

Hockey Game

A hockey game between two teams of the town league gave the crowd added thrills when Legion and Seymour East played to a scoreless tie. Both goal tenders chalked up a well-earned shutout.

Members of the Rotary Club were so well pleased with the success of the evening that they are already planning to hold another such event before the season closes. Approximately $150 was raised for the club and the money will be used to support the Midget and Bantam OMHA hockey teams the club sponsors.

Five-Point Brief Presented To Oshawa Council

Oshawa, Feb. 5 (CP)—Chris Mason, President of Local 202, United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) last night told city council the unemployment situation in this auto-city has reached such a critical stage that "some men are merely going to the back of restaurants and asking for handouts."

He was speaking on behalf of the newly-formed union of unemployed workers which presented a five-point brief to council urging that steps be taken by federal, provincial and municipal governments to ease the unemployment situation in Canada as a whole.

They asked that jobs be created through public works financed through federal, provincial and municipal revenues. They sought an immediate conference to study public works programs.

The federal government will be asked to remove present restrictions and boost unemployment benefits by at least 50 per cent.

The city council was asked to provide, through welfare agencies, sufficient cash relief for those unable to collect unemployment insurance benefits.

A final clause urged both federal and provincial governments to assume mortgage payments of unemployed who are unable to meet their payments.

The brief was referred to a special committee of the Oshawa council which will draft a resolution from the brief to be sent to the federal and provinical governments. It will also be sent to municipal officials in Ontario cities and towns.

Two MIG Supply Centres Blasted Into Blazing Ruins

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 5 — (AP)—American warplanes today blasted two MIG communist supply centres into blazing ruins.

F-51 Mustang pilots reported large fires and explosions were set off by their 500-pound bombs and flaming rockets. One of the centres was northeast of Sinmak and the other east of Namchonjom. Both are less than 50 air miles northwest of the truce-talk site at Panmunjom.

The ground front was relatively quiet.

Behind their own lines Allied engineers reopened the Pukhan river railway bridge after blowing it up 15 months ago. It restores a vital alternate rail route between the Seoul area and Pusan, main supply port in southeast Korea.

WILL TRAP WOODCOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 5— (CP)— A noise that sounds something like "kak-kak-kak" will be used by Ontario Lands Department officials next summer to trap and study the woodcock, an Ontario game bird. The noise, recorded voice of a woodcock singing, is expected to lure the birds to within eight feet of the loudspeaker. Then nets are used to capture them. The birds are needed for completion of a study of the American woodcock which was started two years ago.

FORCES WRONG CAR INTO DITCH

Cooksville, Feb. 5—(CP)— A big transport truck looming up out of a fog, forced the wrong automobile into the ditch here yesterday. The car was full of policemen. Truck driver Robert Milson of Hamilton has been charged with dangerous driving. Sgt. Gordon Stanfield leaped out of the ditched car, commandeered a passing auto and chased the truck into Cooksville where he arrested Milson. No one was hurt in the accident.

British Atom Scientists May Be Barred

London, Feb. 5 —(CP) —British atomic scientists may soon be barred from visiting certain parts of Canadian plants, The Daily Express suggests today.

The Express gives this account: The United States recently decided to pass certain atomic secrets to Canada on the understanding they would not be communicated to any other country. Before accepting this commitment, Canada consulted Britain and was advised to go ahead in the interests of Commonwealth defence.

"In clinching the deal," says the Express, "U.S. security authorities had to forget that some of the worst atom leaks occurred in Canada."

The newspaper refers specifically to Dr. Allan Nunn May, who worked at Montreal and Chalk River, Ont., and was imprisoned for betraying secrets to officials of the Russian Embassy in Ottawa.

IMPORT OFFICERS

Rome, Feb. 5 — (AP) — The national committee for free Albania said yesterday's Albania's communist leaders have imported 100 Bulgarian officers in an effort to tighten red control over the communist Balkan nation.

SHORT OF GRAIN

London, Feb. 5 — (Reuters) — British farmers, seriously short of grain to feed pigs and poultry due to import cuts, were offered $14 by the government yesterday for every acre of grassland they plant in feed grains.

No Plans to Rebuild Shepheards Hotel

Cairo, Feb. 5—(AP)—Antonio Foerster, manager of the world-famed Shepheards Hotel ruined in rioting of Jan. 26, said today he is making no plans to rebuild it. The hotel, a landmark known to travelers and tourists the world over, was left a gutted wreck by torch-bearing Egyptians rioting against the British.

Lovett Says US Has Better Planes Than Russ MIGs

Washington, Feb. 5 (AP)—Secretary of Defence Robert Lovett testified today that the United States now has better fighter aircraft than Russian MIGs.

He indicated however, it may take some time to equal and pass Soviet aircraft production.

Lovett engaged in an exchange with senators over relative Russian and U.S. air strength during a congressional hearing on the proposed $52,100,000,000 military budget for 1952-53.

Lovett said that after the Second World War the U.S. 'went to sleep' on its defences while Russia pushed ahead.

Asked if the Russians' MIG 15 is "better than any aircraft we can send" to Korea, Lovett replied that the United States has better aircraft "in test." He said the F-86 is a superior plane although it weighs about one-third more than a MIG and has a slower climb.

6 Little Minks Take Possession Of Airliner

New York, Feb. 5 (AP) — Six fierce, little minks took possession of a big airliner at New York International Airport last night, and held pilots, passengers and crew at bay until finally captured today. The animals escaped from a shipping crate.

For about 18 hours, the creatures made the $2,000,000 Northwest Airline Stratocruiser their own, keeping all challengers at a distance.

"They'd go for anybody that tried to step into the plane," said Ray Leary, airline agent.

Two agents from the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to animals finally used a pole to drive the clawing, squealing minks into a multi-celled cage.

The plane was deodorized with three aromas of perfume— including rose petal—before the 61 passengers were permitted aboard.

The minks, being shipped from the Wildwood mink ranch of White Bear, Minnesota, to Oslo, Norway, were discovered loose in the cargo compartment after the plane landed last night.

U. S. PLACES ORDER

Rome, Feb. 5 — (AP)— Italian sources say the United States Mutual Security Administration is planning to order $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 worth of small naval ships — eight subchasers and 10 landing craft — from Italian shipyards. America's European allies would get the ships, the informants said, to bolster Atlantic Pact forces.

Hurled Close To Passing Train, Loses Fingers

Mount Albert, Ont., Feb. 5 (CP) —While a long freight thundered past, pounding wreckage of a small truck jammed against its side, Eleanor Lynas 17, and Martin Kelvin, 20, early Sunday, fought to save the lives of two companions.

When the crash occurred, Jacqueline Lynas, 18, was hurled so close to the train that the wheels passed over the fingers of her right hand. Marilyn King, 15, fourth passenger in the truck, was thrown beneath the truck.

Kelvin, who was tossed clear, pried part of the truck off Marilyn while Eleanor crawled from the wreckage of the car, close to the train, and dragged her unconscious sister to safety.

Jacqueline was taken to hospital at Toronto with a mangled right hand and other injuries. The other three escaped with bruises and cuts.

Mount Albert is 35 miles north of Toronto.

Producer Wins Multi-Million Dollar Suit

Washington, Feb. 5 — (AP) — Howard Hughes, movie producer and industrialist, won a multi-million dollar supreme court victory Monday.

The high tribunal set aside, 7 to 0, an order requiring Hughes to sell his 929,020 shares of stock in the new theatre company by Feb. 20, 1955.

Hughes appealed to the court to lift the order, saying it would deprive him of "some millions" of dollars worth of property.

The litigation developed from a 1938 government anti-trust suit against a group of leading movie firms, among them Radio-Keith-orpheum Corp. of which Hughes is the controlling stockholder. The case against R.K.O.'s movie exhibition business from its film production and distribution business.

The new theatre company was formed to handle the exhibition business and the new picture company was created to handle the production and distribution end.

The U.S. District Court in New York City, acting under a section of the agreement, ordered Hughes to sell his stock in the new theatre company by Feb. 20, 1955.

Dr. Logan's Wife

By Diana Gaines

All the way back to the hospital Jennet Logan and Peter Surinov chatted, company-mannered, as if chaperone were present. Anybody could have listened. She asked him with crisp politeness about his new experiments and he, displaying his composure like hard-won armor, explained almost too fully.

The emphasis of research in view of the world situation," he told her, "has switched from the cure of cancer to an antidote for the effects of atomic bombing. I mean the effects on people—military and civilian. Now, it's been known that when you treat patients who have blood diseases with X-ray over the spleen, you destroy many of the abnormal white blood cells throughout the body. . ."

"I hate to be so elementary but what, pray, is the spleen?"

"It's an organ under the ribs on the left side about the size of a hand, similar in consistency to the liver. It acts as a blood filter. Now some researchers at the University of Chicago reasoned that the spleen must contain some protective mechanism or substance which enables the body to withstand large doses of radiation. To prove this point they operated on a hundred animals. They took the spleen out of the abdomen, but left it connected—they just exteriorized the spleen so that it could be covered by a lead box. Then they irradiated the hundred animals. . ."

"Caught with their spleens down?" she cracked sulkily.

". . . and they found that the total dose necessary to kill 50 percent of these animals was five to six times greater than when the spleen was not protected by lead."

Jennet was awed in spite of the mental pout which his lecture voice evoked. "You mean that if we all wore little lead shields over our spleens during an atomic bombing, 50 percent more of us might live?"

"Well, that's the principle, yes. But Dr. Pelletier and I figure there might be an easier way to do it. We want to find out what the protective splenic substance is. We want to get a lot of rats, remove their spleens, put the spleens in a press and extract the juices. . ."

Jennet wrinkled her nose.

"Don't be a female—listen!" Peter scolded. "Then irradiate the animals whose spleens we've removed and immediately afterward inject them with the extract. If we're able to save them from death with this injection, then we'll know that the extract offers protection to people who have been exposed to atomic bombing."

"And this is your original idea? No one knows of this possibility but you."

Peter smiled indulgently. "In the field of science there's almost no such thing as an original idea. I got the notion of trying to isolate the spleen juice after reading some preliminary reports of the work being done at the University of Chicago. They're probably working on the same thing. For all we know, there are a dozen men throughout the country working on it."

She slowed to a stop opposite the walk near his laboratory. "It sounds very thrilling. I wish you luck with it," she said, the nonchalance of her tone turning praise into patronage.

Peter opened the door and let himself out. He closed the door with thoughtful precision and then leaned on the ledge, looking at her.

"You're not serious about our not seeing each other any more."

Jennet tossed her head. "I was never more serious about anything."

He sighed. "Okay. Have it your way. You're a strange girl, Jennet."

The panic of renunciation suddenly engulfed her. She wished him gone, but not like this, not without one loving word or look that she could use later as both stimulant and anodyne for pain.

"Don't go away saying that."

He grinned down at her and her eyes lay on his mouth like lips. "All right. Thanks for having lunch with me, Mrs. Logan. Thanks for nothing."

"Please don't Peter. There's a limit."

"What do you want me to say, Jennet? You're afraid to hear anything."

Her spurt of anger was the last foxhole in the jungle of her emotions. "Oh, very well. Perhaps I'm being infantile again. Goodby, you great big grown-up!"

She drove off with recklessly competent speed, but the anger turned to ache as soon as she could realize that he was gone and there is no ache like the ache of the unspoken and the undone.

Thursday morning, June 15, Maxwell Cota, fortified by the immaculate sweetness of Valencia orange juice faced the fact that to this day he had lived one half of a century.

Despite his wealth, he had worked hard. No one could say that he was the lazy, spoiled son of a rich man. He had not missed a day at the hospital in 10 years. He housed his paralytic sister whom another man might have put away. No one could say he was not a dutiful son and brother. Besides Elvirita's presence in the 14-room house gave point to its upkeep, and Maxwell would have been loath to abandon it now that he was master.

He gave $10,000 a year (his hospital salary) to charity as his father had done before him, and he lived comfortably but modestly off the income from the wine business, paid his property taxes from the profits of the Elvirita Beach Hotel, and never touched his principal. Neither miser, nor spendthrift, mindful of family and community obligations, he led an exemplary life.

He discounted the interns' calling him the "Crumb" and "Figface"— nicknaming was a common form of rebellion among underlings in a large institution. But there was Logan, who had been heard to say that he never met a man so devoid of human feeling. There was Pelletier the most popular man at the hospital, who at a closed meeting had denounced him as a "double-dealing politician with the eyes of a dead titmouse and the soul of of a banshee." (He had examined his eyes in the mirror for some time after that and had pondered the dictionary's definition of a banshee.) To Maxwell Cota, who had been eavesdropping all his life these snipings had little sting—his position at the hospital was secure; the board of directors was solidly behind him—but they proved again that he was not "one of the boys."

Fortunately he did not need people. In a struggle between his wants and his money, his morals and his money, his dreams and his money, money was always the victor. It was here in the very centre of his Achillies' heel that Peter Surinov had unwittingly pricked him, for among Maxwell Cota's properties were some downtown slum properties on which taxes were low, and the upkeep zero except for the small salary of the rent collector.

From the first, Cota had felt antipathy toward the tall Russian.

When, however, he heard of Surinov's interest in public housing, heard that Surinov had taken part in the demonstration against restrictive covenants, he determined to break him. In this decision, Cota sincerely felt that he would be acting in the best interests of Angel's University Hospital. There was no real evidence that the man was a communist, but there was reason to suspect it from his rabble-rousing behavior.

Peter Surinov's insurgence in the matter of the loyalty oath had played directly into his hands. It transformed any action taken against the man from persecution to patriotism. The Monday night meeting had been a disappointment to Cota. The fact that he, superintendent, had to get a vote of permission from a bunch of doctors who knew nothing about administration in order to fire a non-medical employee, was infurating. The founding fathers had undoubtedly meant well when they organized the hospital as a democratic autonomy, separate from the university proper. They had maintained that the doctors were better equipped to run a hospital than businessmen and politicians, and they had accordingly drawn up a charter which provided that a medical executive committee, composed of staff department heads, make hospital policy by means of majority vote.

There were 11 men on the committee. The head of the orthopedics department was in bed with a virus, the eye man on summer vacation. The chief of staff and at least three others could be counted on to vote Cota's way, had in fact prepared brief speeches which he had already read. If Warner and Rappaport persisted in supporting Pelletier and Logan, that made four against four. The pediatrics man, who could break the tie, had not returned Cota's repeated phone calls. It was possible that Pelletier had already got to him.

Well, if the doctors would not see reason in this matter, Cota was prepared to exploit a political connection or two. There were plenty of men in the state of California who understood the publicity value of crying "peril!"—especially now that they faced the November elections. Nor would the incumbent office holders object to the support of the university's powerful regents who were fighting mad about resistance of any kind to the loyalty check they had devised.

Two Men, Boy Instantly Killed At Rail Crossing

Ottawa, Feb. 5 — (CP) — Two Ottawa men and a 16-year-old boy were killed last night when their automobile, racing along a road bordering a railway track, suddenly turned into the path of a speeding passenger train at a level crossing in the west end of the city.

Albert Finn, 22, driver of the car, died enroute to hospital. William A. Hutchings, 20, and Gerard Roger, 16, were killed instantly.

Witnesses said the old-model sedan Finn was driving raced along Scott Street bordering the track on which the Canadian Pacific passenger train from Toronto was approaching Ottawa at high speed.

The car, carried more than 100 feet along the track, was demolished.

Model States She Was Beaten And Robbed

Toronto, Feb. 5 (CP) —Police last night investigated a report by Mrs. June Baker, 21-year-old photographer's model, that two young men forced their way into her west-end home, tied her up and beat her with a blackjack and a revolver butt in a vain attempt to force her to tell where her father keeps his money.

They escaped after ransacking the apartment and stealing $7 from her purse. The men left the young woman bound and gagged with her own scarves. The landlady who arrived home two hours later freed her.

The late afternoon holdup was believed a sequel to a Sunday night robbery at the home of Mrs. Baker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Paolucci. Three men with drawn guns entered the Paolucci home and went to a writing desk in which Mr. Paolucci said he often has as much as $1,800 in receipts from his bakery business.

In the Sunday raid, the thieves got only about $20 in small bills. Mr. Paolucci had taken $1,200 to a bank Friday.

KING GEORGE DIES IN SLEEP

Queen Elizabeth Returning Home From East Africa

Royal Party Will Reach London Thursday Afternoon

London, Feb. 6 — (AP) — Britain's new Queen Elizabeth will fly home Thursday to take over the task of ruling Britain's far-flung Empire.

The slim 25-year-old Queen who succeeded to the throne on the death today of her father, King George VI, is expected to reach London at 4.30 p.m. (11.30 a.m. EST) Thursday.

The new Monarch and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, were at their hunting lodge in the hinterland of Africa's Kenya Colony when the King's death was announced.

They must dash 100 miles by road through the brush to Nairobi, capital of Kenya, to board the plane which will take them back to England.

The flight from Nairobi to London is expected to take about 17 hours.

The realm will be without a constitutional head until Queen Elizabeth gets back to London.

Though no official announcement has been made in London, it seems certain that her planned tour of Australia and New Zealand will be cancelled, perhaps to be resumed later as Queen.

ACCESSION COUNCIL CALLED

Britain's Accession Council was summoned to meet at 5 p.m. (noon EST) to proclaim Elizabeth formally Queen of Great Britain, Ireland and all the Dominions beyond the Seas.

All members of parliament will start swearing allegiance to the new sovereign some time tonight.

A newspaper, The East African Standard, gave the first news to the staff at the Royal Lodge in Nyeri, Kenya, where Elizabeth was resting on her Commonwealth tour.

Not until a direct radio-telephone call had been made to Buckingham Palace and the tragic news confirmed from there, was the Princess told of the King's death and that she is reigning Queen.

The young Queen's first official act is expected to be to order a period of court mourning for her father.

She must also decide the funeral arrangements for the King. If precedent is followed, the King's body likely will be taken first to the little private chapel on the Sandringham estate.

It would then be brought to London where it would lie in state until taken to nearby Windsor for burial.

UNIQUE SITUATION

The fact that Britain is without a constitutional head until the Queen returns home is unique in recent British history.

The ailing Monarch was scheduled to leave on a health cruise to South Africa March 11. Counsellors of state, which were to be appointed before his departure, would have taken over virtually all royal functions.

Such counsellors are appointed whenever a king becomes incapacitated from carrying out his duties, as during the period following King George's lung operation last year, or when the monarch is out of the country.

The announcement of the new Queen's accession to the throne will be proclaimed in an ancient ceremony at St. James's Palace, after drafting of the official proclamation announcing the death of the King and the accession of the new ruler.

Queen Elizabeth's first constitutional duty will be to hold an accession meeting of the privy council, an ancient body which advises the king. It is composed largely of nobles and leading political figures.

At this meeting, the new sovereign will swear to fulfill her duties and be a good ruler. The oath will be administered by the Lord Chancellor, Britain's highest law lord.

Under the 1702 Settlement Act, the Accession Council must have affirmative answers to two questions before Elizabeth can be proclaimed queen:

1. Is she a descendant of the Electress of Hanover, reigning head of the British dynasty of the day?
2. Is she a Protestant?

LINE OF SUCCESSION

The new line of succession to the throne is:

1. The new Queen's three-year-old son, Prince Charles.
2. Prince Charles' little sister, one-year-old Princess Anne.
3. Princess Margaret, 21, sister of the new Queen.
4. The Duke of Gloucester, 52, youngest living brother of the late King.
5. Prince William, 10, elder son of the Duke of Gloucester.

Elizabeth Proclaimed Queen Of Britain

London, Feb. 6 — (Reuters) — The Privy Council, constitutional advisers to British monarchs, tonight formally accepted Elizabeth II as Queen of Britain.

The dignitaries met at St. James's Palace to draft the proclamation announcing that the 25-year-old girl has become the country's seventh reigning queen.

She becomes Britain's first ruling queen since Queen Victoria died in 1901 and the fifth in English history since Mary in 1553.

Elizabeth II comes to the throne every inch a queen. From childhood she has been brought up according to the strict tenets of British royalty.

Ever since her father came to the throne it was evident that one day she would be queen. She has been drilled and schooled for the task.

Britain, for some deep psychological reason, has reached its peaks of greatness under women monarchs. The first Elizabeth's reign produced Shakespeare, Sir Francis Drake, great poets, statesmen and soldiers. Under Victoria the most powerful empire in world history grew up.

Britain, watching Elizabeth assume more and more responsibilities during her father's illnesses, has no doubt she has inherited his great sense of duty.

Elizabeth is acutely conscious of her royal heritage, even to the extent of a touch of imperiousness in her character.

Since her children, Prince Charles and Prince Anne, were born, however, she has shown more and more how human she is behind the facade of royalty.

Only her official duties have prevented her from spending more time with them.

Elizabeth was 10 when she was told that her uncle, King Edward VIII, had abdicated and that her parents had become king and queen.

The Princess did not go to school, for many of the things a queen must know are no part of a school curriculum. Instead, she and her sister Margaret were taught by Miss Marion Crawford, a Scotswoman whom they nicknamed affectionately as "Crawfie."

Under Miss Crawford the Princess learned French, German and Spanish and received special tuition in constitutional history. Some lessons were taken standing, because later on Elizabeth would have to stand for long periods at public functions.

Elizabeth's independent attitude, strong will and regal outlook, were noted early in life. Her grandmother, Queen Mary once took her on a shopping expedition. Her small 11-year-old companion became impatient and began to tug the skirts of her grandmother.

Hurry please, do hurry," said a small voice. "What is your hurry, Elizabeth?" Queen Mary asked. "Well," returned the little Princess, "there are a lot of people waiting outside there to cheer me."

A lover of outdoor sports, Princess Elizabeth has become a familiar figure in the royal box at racetrack events in recent years. She has entered several horses herself and has always taken a keen interest in her father's horses.

She first entered public life when she was 12. Then she became president of a children's league in London's east end.

Beloved Monarch Never Recovered From Last Illness

Coronary Thrombosis Believed Cause of Death

London, Feb. 6 — (CP) — Tired and spent, King died today after 15 years on the throne.

Princess Elizabeth, his 25-year-old daughter, automatically succeeds him — the first ruling queen in more than half a century.

The King, the steady sort of monarch Britons love — died in his sleep at Sandringham, the royal estate in Norfolk where he was born 56 years ago. All over Britain, the people said:

"He was a good man."

The King and Queen, with their two pretty daughters, Elizabeth and Margaret, had won the hearts of Britain by their steadfast refusal to seek safety abroad during the Second World War.

They travelled extensively and met citizens of the Commonwealth at first hand. In 1939, the King and Queen toured Canada and won the acclaim of people o Britain's oldest dominion with their charm.

HAD LUNG REMOVED

It was believed that a blood clot — coronary throm-bosis — was the immediate cause of the King's death. Last September, a surgeon removed one of his lungs, an the King had looked ill for a long time. But even hi immediate family did not know death was so near. Princess Elizabeth was in the first stages of a Common-wealth tour, but planned to fly home immediately from Kenya in East Africa.

News of the death was flashed immediately to Nairob and Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh made prepar-ations to fly home at once. They are expected in Londo at 6 p.m. tomorrow (1 p.m. EST).

The Princess burst into tears when she heard th news.

A London announcement said the Privy Counci would meet this afternoon to proclaim Elizabeth officiall queen.

Following the Privy Council's formal action, th accession of the new queen will be proclaimed by a roya herald from the roof of St. James's Palace. Later th announcement will be made from public building throughout Britain, accompanied by ceremonial fanfar of trumpets.

COUNTRY STUNNED

The King's death, after his apparent recovery from a lung operation five months ago, stunned people the lengt and breadth of the country.

Conferences and meetings were dramatically inter-rupted, law courts and stock markets closed and door were shuttered for the day at theatres and other place of entertainment.

Crowds gathered outside Buckingham Palace i London, gazing sombrely at the great stone building. Th hush was broken by the sounds of women sobbing.

Flags of dozens of nations were hauled to half-sta over embassies and legations. And flags over the building of humble folk came down as well — for the King liked t be known as a "very ordinary person."

The announcement of the King's death came a 10:45 a.m. (5:45 a.m. EST). It was given out by the BBC which went silent after that except for news bulletins.

Unwillingly, George VI became king by a whim o the fates — when Edward VIII (now the Duke of Windsor abdicated rather than give up the love of the American Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

He lived to see Britain lose much of her empire, an to see his countrymen in wartime valor and peacetim austerity.

FIRST QUEEN IN 51 YEARS

Now Britain has her first queen in 51 years. The las was Queen Victoria, who ruled from 1837 to 1901. An Britons believe firmly that the country waxes prosperou under a woman's reign.

The heir to the throne will be Charles, the three-yea old son of Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh. He i destined someday to become Prince of Wales.

While there was no official announcement, well informed specialists speculated that the King died o coronary thrombosis — a clot on the heart. This is ofte the cause when death occurs during sleep. Additionally the King had a history of circulatory ailments — he wa operated on in 1949 to relieve a circulatory disorder o the leg.

City and District News

CATERPILLAR SEEN ON BACK STOOP OF SIDNEY FARM

Although no robins or orioles have been sighted in the district to date, a sure sign that spring is on its way was noticed by Alex Bovay, R.R. 2, Belleville, early this morning.

Mr. Bovay, who resides on the 2nd concession of Sidney township, came across a caterpillar gracefully wending its way across his back stoop in a definite spring-like manner.

Likely Schools Will Continue To Hold Classes

Belleville schools will continue to hold regular classes with no holiday expected to be declared because of the death early today of King George VI.

Flags at all the schools are flying at half-staff, while at the Collegiate students stood with bowed heads during assembly in honor of the dead King. Special prayers were then said for the Royal Family.

Principal G. E. Currie said if the funeral of the late King was held on a school day, in all probability school classes would be closed for the day.

Fire Committee And Association Agree on Terms

To permit city fire fighters having a work week of not more than 56 hours as provided for in the provincial statues, provisions for the hiring of five additional firemen have been made by the city council fire committee.

Decision to hire that five additional men was made at special meeting of the fire committee held yesterday at which time the 1952 wage agreement was accepted. Announcement of the decision to hire the five additional firemen was made by Alderman Angus Duffy chairman of fire.

The wage agreement with firemen gives fire fighters a $70 increase in their cost-of-living bonus. The basic salary will remain the same with the cost-of-living bonus increased from $180 per year to $250.

The agreement still has to be ratified by city council as a whole.

New Regulations Cause

New regulations passed recently by the Ontario Government made it necessary to increase the personnel of the local fire department City firemen have been working a 72-hour work week and additional firemen were necessary to work out the 56 hours per week schedule. With the five additional men the strength of the local department will be increased to 35 men and the chief.

The local fire committee had considered the use of auxiliary firemen in order that the 56-hour week schedule might be worked out but following investigation of the use of volunteer firemen it was decided to hire permanent men. Fire committee members Aldermen William Argue and Robert Temple visited Niagara Falls to investigate the use of volunteer firemen in that city. A full report on information gathered was made to council.

Budget Meeting Monday

City council committee are now working out their 1952 budget and a preliminary budget meeting will be held by council next Monday evening. The tax rate is expected to be struck at the council meeting on Feb. 18th.

Former Belleville Couple Wed 50 Years

Pictured above are Mr. and Mrs. Levi Buckley, of Lincoln Park, Michigan, formerly of Belleville, on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary on January 8th. Other members of the family surround the happy couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi J. Buckley celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on January 8th in the Catholic Veterans Hall, 1071 Southfield Road, Lincoln Park, Michigan.

Levi J. Buckley and Annie McAvoy were married in St. Charles Church, Read, Ontario, by Rev. Thomas McCarthy, pastor of Read parish, on January 8, 1902, and resided for 15 years on the 7th concession of Tyendinaga where they raised a family of four daughters and three sons.

In 1915, Mr. Buckley became associated with the automobile industry in Belleville where he became widely known by his many friends and customers. He later moved to Detroit, Michigan where he became affiliated with the Detroit Ice and Fuel Company. He has resided in that city for 23 years.

The family, all married, consist of Mrs. Thomas (Mary) Maloney, Dearborn Hills, Mich., Mrs. Arthur (Helen) Dupuis, Ecorse, Mich., Mrs. Irvin (Maude) Kalb, Detroit, Mich., Joseph Owen of Lincoln Park, Mich., Michael Edmund of Vandyke, Mich., and James Cecil of Centerline, Mich. One daughter, Mrs. Zigmund (Lena) Bergler, died in 1944.

The family, their relatives, and friends numbering 75, gathered in the gaily decorated hall to honor the couple's half-century anniversary. Miss Patsy Maloney, a granddaughter, presented Mr. and Mrs. Buckley with a well-filled purse of money.

Mr. Buckley arose to the occasion and in a few well chosen words, thanked the family, those connected with the family, and all others present, for their cards and generous contributions to a pleasant and happy occasion.

He also called for a vote of thanks to a long-standing friend of the family, Mr. James Grima of Ann Arbor, Mich., who made and donated the beautiful cake for the occasion.

A delicious supper was served by the ladies of the family and very much enjoyed by all present.

Revelry, including music, dancing and singing, was carried on until well into the next day.

Kiwanians Treated To Preview Of Coming Show

Kiwanians were treated to an advance preview of the "Pack Up Your Troubles" show, which their organization is producing for presentation at the Belleville Collegiate auditorium later this month, on Tuesday when several members of the cast were guests at a luncheon held in the Kiwanis Centre.

Among the cast members who were present were Ethel Lawrenson, Sylvia Motley, Ronald Elmy, Donald Rose, Arthur Duby, Dean Whalen and Lawrence Brown.

Following the opening rendition of "Summertime" by Mr. Elmy, Dean Whalen favored the audience with a fine piano solo of "Lover".

Miss Motley, a contralto, sang "Embraceable You", following which Mr. Duby offered a chorus of "Stardust" sung in a deepening baritone voice.

A highlight of the program was the soprano voice of Ethel Lawrenson who sang "You Are Love", to the enjoyment of everyone present.

Donald Rose and Miss Motley combined to conclude the preview with a comic adaptation of "Hey, Good Lookin' ".

Charles Cawker acted as master of ceremonies with Dean Whalen accompanying each soloist at the piano.

Gordon Base on behalf of the club, thanked all members of the cast for the time and effort which they had spent in making the production a success and especially to Mr. Brown, the musical director, for his fine efforts.

Other guests at the luncheon included Roy McFadden and Alex Mackie of Toronto, Jack Barr and Jack Lafferty of Belleville.

Prior to the luncheon, a sing-song was conducted under the leadership of Victor White with Philip Huddleston accompanying at the piano.

Dr. Harold Craig announced that two inter-club meetings would be held later in the week; one on Thursday in Trenton and the second in Madoc on Friday. Anyone wishing transportation to either of these meetings was advised to contact Dr. Craig.

Mayor Haig Expresses Sorrow Of All Citizens in Death of King

"The sad news of the unexpected passing of His Majesty King George VI comes as a real shock to all citizens of Belleville as it does to those of Canada and the rest of the Empire," Mayor A. McLean Haig said today.

"His Majesty perhaps never recovered from the anxiety and strain of the war years."

"Through his radio broadcasts he has been more personal to us than any of the preceding monarchs, I am sure that all citizens of Belleville join with me in a deep feeling of sympathy to all members of the Royal Family."

"To our new Queen and her husband go our sincere wishes and prayers for a long, successful and beneficent reign."

Flags fluttered at half-staff on all public buildings and the Army, Navy, Air Force veterans building at an early hour today.

Feeling of Sadness

A large number of citizens were not aware of the passing of King George until they arrived down town. A stunned populace went to the daily tasks with a feeling of sadness. The suddenness of the news came as a distinct shock.

Early-morning workers paused in their stride to seek confirmation from their fellows as the word was passed that His Majesty had passed away. Unbelieving they sought word from restaurants and other shops open at the hour.

On newspaper teletypes prominent current events stories were pushed aside temporarily as the "big story" broke. Sports, war, elections, taxes were shelved for the moment as the full impact of the news, coming from all sources surged over the "tickers."

The death of His Majesty transcended all other conversation topics in office, shop and factory. On the street, pedestrians spoke in lowered voices. In restaurants, early-morning breakfasters ate in an almost silent atmosphere.

Belleville bowed its head in sorrow as the full impact of the sad news came home.

Mayor McFarland Announces Development of Deep Water Shipping Centre Near Picton

Picton—Development of a deep water shipping centre on the high shore, just east of Picton was announced last night by Mayor Harvey J. McFarland, who is personally interested in the project. To make shipping from that point, it is necessary to build around five miles of new railway. Rout for this spur line has been surveyed from a point two miles west of Picton.

Mayor McFarland stated that the Bethlehem Steel Co., which is developing iron ore at Marmora, will ship its iron ore concentrate to Picton by rail and thence to the United States by water. The Marmora mine is being developed by the Marmoraton Mining Corporation, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Company.

Options on several farms, which lie along the high shore road, a mile or more east of Picton, on Highway 37, have been taken up, and payment made as soon as surveying is complete. It is from the high bluffs there that loading of boats will take place. Unusually favorable conditions exist there for gravity handling of iron ore concentrate from ore cars to ore carrier vessels at the deep water docking area below.

May Begin Next Fall

It is expected that shipping may begin next fall, and that two or more ore trains daily can be expected when the mine gets into operation.

While admitting that he also held options on land at the site, Mayor McFarland stated that they were in connection with plans which he has had under consideration for some time, but which he did not announce.

Several other ports have believed they had been chosen as the shipping point, but it is understood that where other options are being taken up, others are concerned.

At Marmora, there is to be an open pit mine, and engineers estimate that it would take 25 years to empty the ore body, even if a quarter of a million tons of ore could be moved daily.

Actual production will not be near that figure, it is stated.

Now, work is proceeding to remove 2,500,000 ton limestone cap from the ore body, previous to commencement of mining activity. At Marmora, a smelter is planned near the railway, and land cleared for a possible town site.

Area of the Marmora ore is said to be 1,200 feet by 2,500 feet. The hole in the surface will be a great deal larger, and it will go 475 feet when the limestone cap is removed. The Marmora project is said to require 250 to 300 workers when development reaches production stage.

It was stated by Mayor McFarland that this inauguration of Picton bay as a shipping point may be the first step in the development locally of a more important shipping centre. At the present time, Picton has one of the few natural, deep water ports in this district.

Theatre Guild Moves To New Location

Through the courtesy of the School Board and to allow scope for its expanding activities, the Belleville Theatre Guild is meeting tonight in Queen Victoria School on Pine Street. Members will be greatly helped in their dramatic endeavors by the use of a stage. A full program is planned including the presentation of a workshop play entitled "Scattered Showers", and a short exercise in voice production, as well as casting for the program of one-act plays scheduled for presentation at the end of March. Any interested members of the community are cordially invited to attend.

Teachers to Stay Away from Desks Till Demands Met

Sydney, N. S., Feb. 6 — (CP)— Cape Breton county's rural and village teachers, on strike since last Thursday, closed ranks today after serving notice they will stay away from their desks until salary demands are met.

Developments came quickly last night after a lull in the dispute, first of its kind in Nova Scotia.

1. The teachers voted at a mass meeting to remain on strike and not to return to work pending restudy of their position by the county council, as had been predicted by observers.

2. H. H. Wetmore, president of the county local of the Nova Scotia Teachers' Union, resigned at the meeting which was closed to the public and press. There was no immediate explanation and Mr. Wetmore declined comment.

The vote to remain on strike was 91-29 with one teacher abstaining. Altogether, 243 teachers are on strike but 68 are not union members and not all teachers were able to attend yesterday's meeting.

The earliest the teachers' demands could be met appears to be Feb. 15, date set for a special session of Cape Breton county council, which turned down the salary requests last Friday.

The teachers are seeking an increase of $300 a year.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 6 (CP) —Stock market prices held firmly to morning gains today in early afternoon dealings.

Steady opening support extended yesterday's late rally into early trading as all sections except golds pushed higher. Support then strengthened slowly until mid-session when mild profit taking skimmed a few advances.

Utilities, agricultures and miscellaneous issues led industrials upward with a majority of fractional advances. Papers, steels and liquors also drew firm support but textiles weakened.

Western oils posted a broad list of gains ranging from pennies to about 50 cents. Canada Southern Oil was a standout as it jumped 60 cents to its high of $10. Canadian Atlantic, General Petroleum A, Pacific Petroleum, Scurry and Selburn also climbed strongly.

Base metal leaders were firm. Consolidated Smelters Golden Manitou, Hudson Bay, International Nickel, Noranda, Waite Amulet and United Keno Hill strengthened steadily. Eureka, Sherritt-Gordon and United Asbestos added pennies.

BELOVED

The King's voice sounded husky when he broadcast his annual Christmas message, and some specialists saw that as a possible indication that cancer, having been removed from his left lung, was still present in his right.

Elizabeth gave him a long, anxious look last Thursday when she left London by air on her trip to Africa, Ceylon, Australia and New Zealand — a trip from which she was not scheduled to return until July. Spectators at the airport felt it was almost as if Elizabeth had a premonition she might not see her father alive again.

ACCESSION MEETING

Queen Elizabeth's first constitutional duty will be to hold an accession meeting of the Privy Council.

At this accession meeting, the new sovereign will swear to fulfill her duties and be a good ruler. The oath will be administered by the Lord Chancellor, the highest law lord.

Then lords of the Privy Council swear to accept the new monarch "as their lawful, rightful liege lord."

The council meeting also must agree on the wording of the proclamation announcing the accession of the new queen. This is the proclamation that will be read from the roof of St. James's Palace.

The same proclamation will be read at three other places in London — at Charing Cross in the centre of the city; Temple Bar, which marks the boundary between the old city of London and Westminster, and on the steps of the Royal Exchange, in the heart of the old city.

The proclamation also will be read in each of the dominions of the Commonwealth and in the capital cities of every colony in the empire.

Prime Minister Churchill called an emergency meeting of the cabinet to set in motion the machinery which will lead to Elizabeth's formal taking of the throne. One of her first duties will be to set a period of mourning for the court. When her grandfather, George V, died, court mourning was ordered for nine months.

While Elizabeth became queen immediately on the death of her father, Britain actually is without a constitutional head until she returns home from Africa.

The ailing Monarch was scheduled to leave March 11 on a health cruise to South Africa. Councillors of state, to have been appointed before his departure, would have taken over all royal functions except the power to dissolve parliament and to create peers. Such counsellors are appointed whenever a ruler becomes incapacitated, as during the period after the King's lung operation last year.

HEAVY RESPONSIBILITIES

Much of the responsibility for the state funeral of King George and the ceremonies surrounding the accession of Queen Elizabeth to the throne will rest on the shoulders of the 43-year-old Duke of Norfolk, hereditary Marshal of England.

The new heir apparent to the throne, Prince Charles, was at Sandringham when the King died. There also was his little sister, Princess Anne, now second in the line of succession.

The King showed no hint of approaching death when he bade goodnight last night at Sandringham to the Queen and Princess Margaret.

The new Queen's husband, the handsome, 30-year-old Duke of Edinburgh, may receive a new title in due course. There is a precedent — Queen Victoria's husband, Prince Albert, had the title of Prince Consort.

The palace statement said the King retired last night in apparently good health after a country outing.

The King's lung resection last September was his fifth operation since 1914, when his appendix was removed.

His first operation as King, in March, 1949, was a lumbar sympathectomy "with a view to improving the blood supply of the right foot and to safeguard this for the future." A few months before this an official announcement that the King was suffering from obstruction to the circulation in the right leg was the first indication to the public of his ill health.

SAW DAUGHTER DEPART

The King's last public appearance was at the airport last week to bid farewell to Elizabeth and Philip.

The King recently felt sufficiently recovered to take up some of the threads of his old social life. He paid his first visit to the theatre last Wednesday since his operation. With the Queen, Princess Elizabeth, the Duke of Edinburgh and Princess Margaret he saw the American musical "South Pacific."

If precedent is followed the King's body may be taken first to the little private chapel in the grounds of Sandringham. After that it will probably be brought to London and then taken in state to Windsor, the royal castle 25 miles from London, before the funeral.

But all arrangements must wait on the decision of the new Queen.

Normally the coronation of a new sovereign follows a year or 18 months after the accession. The King was crowned in Westminster Abbey on May 12, 1937, six months after his accession.

By the middle of November it appeared the King had made an excellent recovery. There had been no suggestion of a relapse from his operation.

Doctors hailed the bulletin of Nov. 15 as "very reassuring," and on that day British newspapers featured photographs showing the King looking fit and well, sitting by the side of Prince Charles.

From then on the King began to make an increasing, though gradual, return to his normal life and routine. His duties of state at this time included several privy councils.

He left by car from London for the Royal Lodge,

The King's last public appearance was last week when he said goodbye at London airport to Princess Elizabeth and the Duke when they left on their tour of Commonwealth countries in Africa, Asia and Australia.

News of the death was immediately flashed to the new queen at the shooting lodge at Nyeri, Kenya.

It was expected she would return to Britain immediately. Parliament was likely to be adjourned in the middle of an important foreign affairs debate.

Prime Minister Churchill held a meeting of the cabinet immediately after the Sovereign's death was announced.

Born Dec. 14, 1895, the second son of King George V and Queen Mary, who survives him at the age of 84, the late King succeeded the abdication of his eldest brother, King Edward VIII.

Endeared to Millions

The quiet family man who put royal duty above personal pleasure quickly endeared himself to his millions of subjects around the world.

The monarch led Britain through her worst ordeal when the island kingdom faced the victory-flushed German armies alone. His words of comfort, his prayers, his encouragement, helped Britons meet and turn back the foe's blitzkrieg. With his Prime Minister Churchill, the King will be long remembered for his part in Britain's finest hour."

The monarch was better known both to his own subjects and to foreigners than any other modern king. His radio addresses were heard around the world. He travelled extensively despite poor health which plagued him from the time he ascended the throne.

To the modest, young brother—who wanted nothing more than to live a quiet life with his family—fell the task of being the nominal ruler of an empire with a total population in excess of 500,000,000 approximately a quarter of the people of the globe. He lacked three days of being 41 years old at the time.

Though the days of his reign saw the Empire shrink greatly, the King and his family vastly increased the love and respect in which the royal institution was held.

Typical Family Man

He ascended the throne in a wave of indifference and unflattering comparison with his elder brother.

He overcame it and became a symbol of national character, a devoted and typical family man—an "ordinary bloke" the English called him. He was unpretentious and in every way the product of the British tradition of constitutional monarchy.

He came to the throne during a family crisis in a critical year of war and rumors of war—yet he left the popularity of his house greater than ever.

During a reign which saw the worst crisis Britain and the Commonwealth had ever weathered—the Second World War— culminating in two years of illness, he endeared himself to his country and the world.

He added lustre to the British tradition of constitutional monarchy.

In the gruelling war years and the aftermath of austerity this unswerving devotion to duty inspired the confidence and trust of his people.

He and the Queen started slowly—they were themselves.

Just as George V conquered the wave of unpopularity which surged against him at the outset of his reign, so his second son dispersed the public fears.

The visit of the King and Queen to France in 1938 proved to be the great turning point.

The French people took the royal couple to their hearts and his triumph was contagious. On their return home there were scenes of mass loyalty reminiscent of the jubilee days of George V.

Nation Shocked

The official news of the King's death shocked the nation, which had been deeply worried about his health.

Some courts abruptly adjourned their hearings. One murder trial was suspended for 10 minutes after the presiding judge received the official news.

Both houses of parliament are expected to adjourn immediately after meeting today and making formal expressions of sympathy with the royal family. The House of Commons is in the midst of an angry debate on foreign policy.

Both Churchill and the leaders of Britain's other two major parties—Laborite Clement Attlee and Liberal Clement Davies—are expected to speak at the brief House of Commons session.

BUSINESS FIRMS SUFFERING

If we are willing to accept the Ontario Bureau of tatistics and Research as an authority, things have not one very well with certain types of business enterprise uring the last year.

In its "Economic Review of Ontario," the bureau says, n part: "By June, the sales of new motor vehicles were own 25 per cent from the previous year, electrical appliances were down 15 per cent and furniture six per cent. our-months later, these declines had grown to 39 per ent, 19 per cent and 14 per cent, respectively.

"The drop in the volume of retail trade was quickly eflected in reduced levels of employment in the textile, utomobile, automotive parts and accessories, electric ppliance and furniture industries. While the city of indsor received the greatest direct blow because of its mphasis on automobile manufacturing, other centres ere similarly affected, e.g., Kitchener, Oshawa, Galt, hatham, Guelph, London, Owen Sound and Toronto."

At another point, the review says: "Retail trade activy as reflected in department store sales for the month of ecember was two per cent below last year in dollar value, espite a considerable recovery in the last week of the onth. In the week ending January 12, 1952, sales were f 28 per cent from the corresponding week in the preding year."

Who is responsible for all this? Here is what the ureau says about responsibility: "Before the middle of e year, it became evident that the federal government's ti-inflationary policy was beginning to exert a dampeng influence on economic activity. Consumer credit egulations, originally imposed in November, 1950, and rther tightened on March 19, 1951, were largely reponsible for declines in the sales of numerous consumer oods."

The Ontario Bureau of Statistics and Research is a epartment of the Ontario government. In fact, it even ears at its masthead the notation: "Published by the thority of Hon. Leslie M. Frost, K.C., prime minister and rovincial treasurer." Hence, the Ontario Bureau of atistics and Research may be a trifle prejudiced in aming the deterioration in the province's economy on e federal government's anti-inflationary policy.

In any event, workmen who have no jobs, merchants nd dealers who cannot sell their wares and industrial rectors who cannot pay dividends to their shareholders e all going to be looking around and trying to ascertain ny things are going haywire. Whether they find the real lprit or only a scapegoat, they are certainly going to ask estions when the opportune time arrives.

FURTHER ACTION ADVISABLE

The Ontario Appeal Court last Tuesday ordered a rtain Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shedrick of Waterloo to be set e and acquitted of thirteen charges of fraud. Mr. and s. Shedrick had been convicted and sentenced to six onths' definite and six months' indefinite on these fraud arges, and had been in jail since December 11. The nviction, according to the Toronto press, was registered Magistrate Polson, who, we may assume, operates in e Kitchener-Waterloo area.

Mr. and Mrs. Shedrick, it seems, own houses. They llected money from their tenants for the purpose of aking certain repairs in these houses. Seemingly, these pairs did not get under way soon enough to satisfy meone, with the result that Mr. and Mrs. Shedrick were ought into court, convicted and jailed.

In discussing this affair before the appeal court, own Counsel W. B. Common said: "I cannot support ese convictions. There was nothing criminal in their tions." Mr. Common added that the repair work on the uses was under way. Although he did not say so, it may ve been started while Mr. and Mrs. Shedrick were in l.

Mr. and Mrs. Shedrick, we fancy, will be pleased at ving their liberty restored after a sojourn of about two onths in jail. But, we suggest, this affair should not end abruptly. We do not think we would be too presumptus if we suggested that Attorney-General Dana Porter ould look into this piece of business.

Do innocent people like Mr. and Mrs. Shedrick, who e sent to jail wrongfully, receive no compensation other an a piece of paper called a certificate of honorable quittal? How many affairs like this one involving this aterloo couple are there in Ontario in a year? It is all y well to talk about the need for preserving the indendence of the judiciary, keeping it free from political ntrol and so on, but this Shedrick case is bound to be erpreted, in some quarters at least, as indicating that haps greater care should be exercised to avoid miscarge of justice.

The administration of justice is too important for us allow even a small number of people to believe that our courts are too zealous in imposing convictions.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Some of the howling, groaning, wailing and hollering that comes over the radio these days in the guise of popular music must raise for many of us the question: who is it popular with?

It is not the vocal efforts alone. The instrumental items sound less like music to us old codgers that the noise we make at old boys' reunions, when we are all handed dish pans, wooden spons, paper horns and those rattles you whirl around, and are told to whoop her up.

I am credibly informed by the younger generation that all this radio rumpus is not merely music but that a widespread cult is founded on it; and the practitioners of it are regarded not merely as musicians but as artists. Those of us whose musical standards were formed in preradio days, when most of the singing we heard was in church, with only occasional visits to the vaudeville and musical comedy theatres and a much more occasional musical recital, find the going pretty heavy in this modern popular music.

In my case, I don't sing, because I know I can't sing. But in this new deal for music, any number of people who can't sing not only do sing, but win fame at it. The other day, I was up in my bedroom, sorting through some dresser drawers, and I found an old cardboard box which contained some knitted khaki neckties, khaki handkerchiefs, detachable collars for khaki shirts, regimental buttons and other relics not of the late war, but of the one before that: the 1914-18 war, which is the one back next to the Boer War.

Sentimentally moved by these souvenirs of times long past, I started to sing some of the old songs, "Keep Your Head Down, Allyman!", "Far, Far From Ypres," and "Oh, Mrs. Jones, I Love Your Daughter;" and after I was finished singing, I experimented in front of my mirror with a few commands, given at the top of my lungs, as I used to when I was an adjutant.

When I came down stairs, my children equired casually: "Have you got a radio going in your room?"

OUR TOWN

BY JACK SCOTT

THAT'S LONDON

I never thought the day would come when I would agree with anything written by Beverley Baxter, the professional Canadian abroad.

If Baxter said the world was round I'd look at the statement narrowly to see how he was going to use it to prove that (a) Baxter adores Churchill or (b) Baxter adores Baxter.

Still when Beverley—or anybody else—writes sentimentally about the charms of London I can be had, even when the tribute is put together, as all of Baxter's stuff seems to be, with the help of Roget and a Ready Guide to Famous Sayings on Any Subject.

So, I've been reading the pompous old poop's recent London Letter about London, which he naturally calls "Bagdad on the Thames," and—though I wring the words out—I enjoyed it.

At the ripe old age of 36—37 in another month—I've done most of the things I want to do, but there's one gaping hole in my front of self-satisfaction. I've never had enough of that dear, damned, distracting town. (Alexander Pope said that, Bev, and I'm surprised you missed it).

* * *

My own love affair with London was a wartime infatuation and for a long time afterwards I wondered if it was the real thing. Friends of mine who had also loved her went back and some of them were disillusioned. With the excitement and the tension gone and the lights on again and the beef still rationed they were disenchanted.

When I went back myself a couple of years ago I was inwardly prepared for this brutal awakening. But I hadn't been an hour in London before I knew that my feelings were deeper than ever.

I liked everything I saw; the big red double-decker busses trundling down the graceful curve of Regent Street; the bright splashes of color in the flower vendors' carts; the long open view of grass and sky from a bench at Marble Arch; the crowds hurrying along Oxford Street in the warm sunlight of a spring day; the old river slipping by under Battersea Bridge at a place where I used to sit nights and watch the flame-tipped buzz-bombs flying in from the Continent; the sound of Big Ben, the children feeding the pigeons in Trafalgar Square—all of it was the same and peace had only made it more beautiful than ever.

Thus, when Baxter writes, characteristically, that "there is grandeur and there is beauty in the strange mosaic of the world's greatest metropolis," I can only nod my head in solemn agreement.

* * *

The great charm of London, to me, is its incredible contrast.

You can stand in a thousand streets, look one way and get a view warm and pretty as an old print. Look the other way and it's a street of dead stone, gaunt and filled with cold shadow.

Or I can take you to a pub—ah, come on! Where you sit out in a quiet little garden with sunlight filtering down through the green leaves of a century-old chestnut.

A block away there's another that's a dark room, dripping ageless sorrow and called —I hope to die!— "The World's End."

Melancholy lives next door to joy. The city can seem an immense, well-ordered cemetery one minute and a garden party the next.

I find myself remembering the first "tour" I made of the city when a guide led some of us from the Beaver Club on a prowl of London.

I remember going first to the statue of Peter Pan and how we delighted in the symbol of everlasting youth.

The mood stayed with us until we were passing a churchyard where the cemetery was built up on a much higher level than the street.

"That's because of the mass burials, layer upon layer of 'em, in the Great Plague", our guide explained airily. "Ninety thousand of 'em." And Peter Pan was forgotten.

* * *

If there's a "real" London I don't think I ever found it (although I claim to be the only man who has walked both banks of the Thames from Tower Bridge to Richmond).

It still remains to me a beloved place of imponderables, of organ grinders playing "Oranges and Lemons" in one street and the latest be-bop coming from an amusement arcade in the next, of dignified old gents in striped pants brushing by lunatics standing alone in the street singing obscene songs.

Beauty or squalor around the next corner, but never dullness.

That's London.

Letter to the Editor

Disapproves Students Selling Subscriptions

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Being the mother of a family of four, who have progressed through the Belleville schools, and one who is primarily interested in a democratic system of procedure in all affairs, as well as being the wife of a taxpayer in our community, I fail to see the necessity for the students to be selling magazine subscriptions to finance the replacement of school equipment, such as stage curtains for the auditorium at the collegiate.

I am open to correction, if I am wrong, but I have always been under the impression that the chief aim of the Home and School Associations and the Students' Council was to foster greater co-operation between parents, students and teachers, for the benefit of the student's progress and education, physically, mentally and emotionally. After all that is the prime concern of education on all levels to prepare our children for the complex life in this world of today. It is not the place of these associations to furnish or replace equipment in the schools, and if the stage curtains are in such a state of repair that they should be replaced, could not the powers that be come to some agreement with the students, whereby they (the students) would not be spending their time soliciting business that is not necessary? Instead, I understand, an offer made by the students was turned down by the board and a surplus of $21,000 turned back to the city council.

Another project that has fallen by the wayside is the proposed track and sport field that was much discussed a couple of years ago. It seems that there is need of greater co-operation somewhere in order to supply the outlet in worthy projects. No one realizes the need for planning any more than the parents who have to finance a family these days, and knowledge with complete understanding of the cost brings greater co-operation amongst all persons concerned, therefore where all persons work together for an objective it is an achievement for which to be proud.

MICROBIC MUTATIONS STUMP THE EXPERTS

My right hand counsellor and guide, the New International, presented with the compliments and best wishes of the publisher nearly 17 years ago—although neither v-i-t-e nor c-r-i was admitted in the sense in which (I hope) a million readers of this column understand and use the words—defines mutation:

> A sudden variation, the offspring differing from its parents in some well-marked character or characters . . . and the hereditary transmission... of the characters so appearing.

In man mutation, like atavism (throw back), doesn't occur—and I'm not interested in any yarns about it.

In the lower animals and plants something of the kind seems credible.

By breeding Danish Landrace hogs, noted for meat superiority, with British Tamworths, characterized by the ability to bear and rear large litters, a new breed of hogs was established in ten years —the breed called Minnesota No. 1. It took fifty to a hundred years to develop the older breeds of hogs in general use in this country today.

Among the microbes mutations, or changes of type or characteristics with changing environment, are common. Of course, the lowest living organisms (it's a toss-up whether germs should be classified as plants or animals) multiply a thousand times as fast as animals, ten thousand times as fast as man, so what may seem "sudden" variation—a mutation—in a strain of bacteria such as Bacillus coli (colon bacillus), ordinarily a harmless inhabitant of the intestinal tract, into a strain which is capable of causing pathological effects such as appendicitis and pyelitis, is not sudden at all, biologically.

Neither is such a variation in the pneumococcus from the strain which is a harmless occupant of the mouth (saliva, sputum) of most healthy persons into a strain which may cause follicular tonsillitis, quinsy, acute multiple arthritis (inflammatory rheumatism), pleurisy, meningitis, pneumonia, bronchitis, acute conjunctivitis (eye inflammation), acute sinusitis, even endocarditis. Just what changes of environment induce such variations in the character of the Pneumococcus is an interesting point for speculation. Sometimes it is difficult to distinguish the Pneumococcus from the notorious Streptococcus under the microscope. The great Dr. Osler wrote in his famous Practice: "Its kinship to Streptococcus pyogenes" (pyogenes means pus-producing) "is regarded by many as very close." Sternberg discovered the Pneumococcus in 1880—he inoculated rabbits with his own salvia and isolated a coccus spherical germ) which he at first called micrococcus, then Diplococcus pneumoniae and finally Pneumococcus. About the same time, Louis Pasteur discovered the same germ in the sputum or saliva of a child dead of hydrophobia (mind, children, I'm not quoting verbatim from Osler's Practice).

A few years ago two or three "types" of Pneumococcus were held accountable for most cases of pneumonia and specific serums were used in treatment. This ultra-scientific management of pneumonia gave the dilettantes, the moms' boys, the born specialists a field day, but when the scores tabulated we found that pneumonia remained the same problem it had been before.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Dried Yeast, Wheat Germ, Etc.

In your article "What Causes Physical Loss" you suggest wheat germ, dried yeast and blackstrap molasses. But an article in a kitty-corner magazine (as you call it) advises readers not to fall for such fads... (G. L.)

Answer — I never wrote an article with such title. I recently recommended Adelle Davis's book "Let's Have Healthy Children" in which this top drawer nutrition authority tells how to purchase wheat germ, yeast and blackstrap molasses at a low price.

Just Let Alone Did it

My mother fought costiveness all her life by eating bran and other "roughage" and taking mineral oil by the gallon. I started out that way, but at 40 decided to take my mind off my bowels— at 56 I am as "regular" as clockwork, once or twice a day, and have not used bran or other "aid" in the past 16 years ...(O. R.)

Answer—With such bringinge up it is a wonder you were able to let the alimentary function alone. Hundreds of thousands of slaves to physic could gain freedom if only they had the knowledge and the courage to quit interfering. Send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope for booklet The Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene. Bran and other "roughage" in the diet is of little significance, but one of the essentials for colon hygiene is No Mineral Oil; indeed this is essential for good health.

Scandinavians Need It

Would like to know if we Danes in Minnesota need iodin. (Mrs. B. J.)

Answer—Yes, just as much as we Irish in Michigan do. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for pamphlet The Iodin Ration.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SILENCE

What a boon there is to Silence! When I return at night to my modest home, situated twelve miles from the city's hum and whirl, I feel as though I had suddenly been released from jail. Here I retire to my library, where several thousand books look silently upon me, but never does one move until I have invited it to me:

Books are so Silent, but how they can arouse and stir one when once read! That's the wonder of books. They never intrude upon you until you give them the urge. I think of the Silence in which each one was born. Montaigne in his castle, writing, thinking, and producing his book, which he said was himself. Or Stevenson, on his island, writing for the teeming millions in cities and country places.

How wonderful was the Silence, as a boy upon a Michigan farm, after work had been finished, and the tired body welcomed the straw mattress! In one of the choicest files of my memory I still hear the mocking birds sing at midnight in Miami, Florida. The Silence of the night intruded on by no other sound. And from my little bridge at Weskawenaak, my summer island home, what solace to each night in the Silence of forest trees with the stars dancing their reflections upon the smooth waters of Grand Lake.

"Silence is golden" in more ways than one. It is golden in reflections of the mind, in the utterance of a sincere prayer, and in meditation upon all the blessings that are ours. Many a friend has been saved to us through Silence, and many a misunderstanding wiped out. A friend once told me that the first lesson a tenderfoot should learn among the cow-boys is Silence — to give no advice until asked for it.

Silence has its medicinal uses— the Silence of the forest or the sea when it is calm, but never when wrongs need to be made right or a word of hope or encouragement is needed solely by someone. Then it is that words become golden!

WHERE DO YOU CLASSIFY?

Many of the blessings of life we accept without appreciating their value. Chief among such blessings is that of living in a Christian civilization. Our attention has recently been called to the difference between Christian and non-Christian practices by the treatment which American prisoners of war received in Korea. Nations largely untouched by Christianity have no conception of certain of the decencies and fair practices adhered to by all Christian nations.

The truth of the matter is—whether we are conscious of it or not—that the influence of Jesus on the life of the world has been the most prodigious single factor in world history. Lecky, in his history of European morals, says of Jesus that he "has not only been the highest pattern of virtue, but the highest incentive to its practices . . . The simple record of three short years of active life has done more to regenerate and soften mankind than all the disquisitions of philosophers, and all the exhortations of moralists."

If you belong to a church, reflect with pride on this statement of one of the world's greatest historians. If you do not belong to a church, ask yourself why you are not a part of a movement which more than any other has been benefitting the human race.

Reign Of George VI Added Prestige To British Royalty

Ruled As Monarch During Times Of Great Difficulty

(By The Associated Press)

George VI, more perhaps than any British Sovereign before him, was the common man's King. The people at home and in the distant Commonwealths esteemed him for his personification of that ideal as well as for his reign in extremely difficult times. The public esteem reached new heights in World War II.

The times were perilous when he ascended the throne. The dictator nations were in the ascendancy. There were grave forebodings of threats to the British way of life, even to the nation's very survival.

At the time his reign began George said:

"It will be my constant endeavor, with God's help, supported as I shall be by my dear wife, to uphold the honor of the Realm, and to promote the happiness of my people."

Albert, Duke of York, had been an unassuming Prince. For years he had insisted he was not palace-minded. He detested sycophancy. He rejoiced in simple, quiet, everyday things. He had never minded playing second fiddle to his dashing brother, Edward VIII, 18 months older than he.

Situation Changed

Then on Dec. 11, 1936, Edward abdicated the throne in order to wed "the woman I love" and the vast weight of the British crown, with many of the problems of a troubled world, was transferred to him.

To him fell the task of being the nominal ruler of an Empire with a total population in excess of 500,000,000, approximately a quarter of the people of the globe. He lacked three days of being 41 years old at the time.

At his side was Elizabeth, his wife, of an ancient line of noble Scottish thanes, her cheeks flushed with health and her smile broad and unfailing, winning everybody. There were also two young children, Elizabeth the elder, and Margaret Rose. These seemed more like ordinary children than Princesses. It became the vogue to compare their traits with those of one's own small daughters.

Plans for the coronation, with Edward as chief actor, had been under way for a year. George was like the understudy of a stage star suddenly called to enact a chief role. Of a natural retiring nature, he found the pomp and pageantry strenuous and wearing.

Brilliant Enthronement

The exacting days culminated on May 12, 1937, with the traditionally brilliant enthronement in Westminster Abbey. That night the newly crowned Monarch, in a radio address to the Empire, said:

"To the ministry of kingship I have, in your hearing, dedicated myself, with the Queen at my side,—in words of the deepest solemnity. We will, God helping us, faithfully discharge our trust."

He added:

"I follow a father who won for himself an abiding place in the hearts of the people, and a brother whose brilliant qualities gave promise of another historic reign—a reign cut short in circumstances upon which, for their very sadness, none of us would wish to dwell."

A few hours after Edward's abdication, King George had created him the Duke of Windsor.

On May 28, the King decreed that the Duke of Windsor's intended wife would not be entitled to the designation or rank of "Royal Highness." When Edward married Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, twice-divorced American, on June 3, no member of the Royal Family or official British representative was among the 15 witnesses of the ceremony.

A Contrast to Edward

After Edward, the bold, the unpredictable, the prime favorite, who had taken his leave historically in moving syllables and in an atmosphere charged with high drama, George seemed rather tame, almost commonplace.

"This one will never set the Thames on fire," people were wont to say in effect, affectionately enough, but not without a tinge of regret at the glamor that had been lost by the idolized Edward's renunciation. The reign, it was generally agreed, would not be brilliant or adventuresome.

Doubtless the new King was anything but audacious; maybe he appeared frail and unregal as some said, the understudy rather than the star. But at least he was level headed. He lacked superficial social gifts, but his dry humor and freedom from affectation were refreshing. Old comrades in World War I recalled that he was "good company."

In that conflict he saw action in the navy and was cited for courage under fire. He also served in the Royal Flying Corps.

A veteran naval officer who helped train Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George in his cadet days at Dartmouth (British equivalent of Annapolis) said "one knew instinctively that he would never let you down." Another who was a shipmate of the Prince, remarked in something like a flash of intuition that "the younger son will outstrip the elder."

Reached Heights in War

Edward, as Prince of Wales once said that his brother "would make a better King than I would." The then Duke of York modestly said of himself: "My chief claim to fame seems to be that I am the father of Princess Elizabeth."

Less than three years after George VI ascended the throne Britain was engulfed by war. In the crucible of that struggle he reached full maturity in statecraft and the heights in the public's loyalty and affection.

The King mingled freely with the people and won their hearts by his friendliness, informality and sympathy in their troubles.

No other British Monarch in history talked with so many of his people. He visited them at their work and in their bomb-blasted towns. He was constantly meeting England's housewives and factory girls, the soldiers, sailors and airmen.

He and the Queen steadfastly rejected all suggestions that their daughters be evacuated to some safer region as the danger of German invasion heightened. They say in effect:

Shared Dangers With Others

"We all face a common peril. Thousands of parents in this country are compelled to keep their children at home. We would prefer to share whatever family perils there may be with parents of this country."

The King "bucked up" his harassed people who for five years endured the most sustained bombardment of civilians in history. Once a bomb crashed through the apartment of the Queen, but failed to explode. Buckingham Palace was hit several times.

Even under aerial fire the King, many times accompanied by the Queen, hastened to scenes of blitz tragedy. He visited people as they stood defiantly in the rubble of their shattered towns, moved quietly and helpfully among them at their work, made sure that the bombed out received all possible help.

Touring London's bomb-scarred east end on one occasion, the King and Queen were told by a woman with a shawl over her head: "I have been bombed out twice and I am waiting to be bombed out again, but I shall stick it."

"That's the spirit," said the King, shaking her hand warmly.

Duke of Kent Killed

War cost the life of the King's youngest brother, the Duke of Kent. He was killed in the crash of a flying boat in Northern Scotland in the summer of 1942 while en route to Iceland on active service as an air commodore. The entire crew on the mission died with him.

The grandeur and misery of Dunkerque appalled the King, caused him untold suffering, yet at the same time thrilled him with its qualities of epic heroism. And his emotions were one with those of his people during the anxious months of the Battle of Britain, the perils of which he shared as a natural course.

He went to sea with Britain's home fleet that he might have a first hand view of naval defence, and kept in constant touch with all the armed services. He visited Allied troops in North Africa, Italy, and Malta, island citadel which with the motherland had stood up to years of furious aerial assault.

He collectively awarded this Mediterranean fortress the George Cross—civilian version of the Victoria Cross—for gallantry and valor in the face of the Axis onslaught. It was the first time that such a distinction had been bestowed on a part of the Empire.

Took Risks as Duty

Only a few days after the Allied invasion of Normandy in June, 1944, the King visited the littered beachhead, crossing the channel aboard a cruiser and landing from an amphibious craft.

There were many who thought the King ran too many personal risks, that he should not so expose himself to a multitude of hazards, that he taxed the ingenuity of the security authorities too heavily.

"It is my duty," he replied simply.

King George did much to strengthen Anglo-American friendship. Wounded soldiers, including many Americans, were entertained at Buckingham Palace. GI's were invited to royal dances and parties. He praised the battle brotherhood of the cousin countries, and behind the scenes the King strove to knit the transatlantic ties ever closer.

Elizabeth Seventh Queen of England

(By The Canadian Press)

The accession of Princess Elizabeth marks the seventh time in history that a queen has ruled England. The following is a list of her predecessors:

Jane	1553 (14 days' reign)
Mary I	1553-1558
Elizabeth I	1558-1603
Mary II	1689-1694
Anne	1702-1714
Victoria	1837-1901

Scotland has been ruled by two queens, Margaret (1286-1290) and Mary (1542-1567).

He profoundly admired President Franklin D. Roosevelt and disclosed after the war that he and the government had tried very hard to have him visit Britain.

The friendship between the King and Queen and President Roosevelt dated back to 1939 when George and Elizabeth made a historic trip to Canada and the United States. The King's handshake with the President at their cordial meeting in Washington symbolized the growing fellowship between the two English-speaking peoples who had parted politically in 1776.

Wedding of Daughter

In both Washington and New York, as well as throughout Canada, the royal couple was enthusiastically acclaimed.

The previous year he and the Queen had paid a brief visit to France. Shortly thereafter came the signing of a comradeship-in-arms agreement between the two nations.

In 1947 the royal family made a triumphal tour of South Africa. Shortly after their return to England the King announced the engagement of Princess Elizabeth to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, former Prince of Greece and Denmark. In November, at a magnificent ceremony in sacred Westminster Abbey, the twenty-one-year-old heiress presumptive was married to the man of her choice, newly created Duke of Edinburgh and Prince of the Realm.

By sovereign decree rules of postwar austerity were observed, yet there was a splendor about the occasion which had been absent from the British scene for ten years. The people rejoiced in the happiness of the royal bride and groom and found welcome release from care and hardship in the high excitement of the wedding week.

King's Early Difficulties

George VI was born at York Cottage, Sandringham, December 14, 1895. His childhood was spent chiefly there or at Marlborough House in London.

The difficulties of his own early days, which included frequent illnesses, helped to move him into closer sympathy with struggling youth and indeed with the little people generally.

Two serious handicaps plagued him at the outset. Never rugged in constitution, he suffered from boyhood into early manhood from a weakness which cut short his naval career in World War I: After an operation for a duodenal ulcer, his general health improved.

Much more obstinate was a stammer. He largely overcame it by will power, perseverance, the services of speech defect specialists and the constant help and encouragement of his wife.

One who knew the King virtually all his life asserted: "It is a tribute alone to his resolution and fortitude that in the early days he so succesfully masked the anguish he felt when speaking publicly. It was only his vigorous sense of public duty which impelled him to accept speaking engagements at all."

Called 'Industrial Duke'

In George's reign the monarchy—chiefly ceremonial, but exercising no small degree of influence nevertheless—became democratic to such as extent that it seemed in no way incompatible with the Labor-Socialist government that came in the wake of World war II.

It was meaningful that in the midst of Britain's heaving political experiment—often called a bloodless equivalent of the French revolution—the monarchy gained luster rather than lost it.

Labor party adherents were mindful of the King's services, as the Duke of York, in the active presidency of the Industrial Welfare Society. They were mindful also of his many visits to factories, mills and mines; of his talks with workers at their benches; of his earnest interest in all their problems.

The King once gave this definition of a true leader.

"The true leader is a man with the gift of vision and the desire in his soul to leave the world a little better than he found it. Such a leader does not demand immediate results, but is willing to strive for what appears to be unattainable, leaving it to his successors to gather the fruits, and to be content if he can feel that what he did made that ultimate harvest possible."

George VI believed in the power of prayer.

When Britain declared war on Germany Sept. 3, 1939, he broadcast an appeal to his people around the world to stand fast and to have faith.

"The task will be hard," he said. "There will be dark days ahead and war can no longer be confined to the battlefield, but we can only do the right as we see the right, and reverently commit our cause to God!...May He bless and keep us all."

The broadcast over, he and the Queen attended a prayer service at Buckingham Palace. Throughout the war he frequently set aside a "day of national prayer."

The King continued to exhort his people to remain steadfast, telling them they faced a "life and death" struggle in which defeat would "mean the destruction of our world as we have known it, and the descent of darkness upon its ruins." But always he expressed confidence of victory.

As the Empire's fortunes improved, he urged continued prayer and dedication.

When the Allies invaded France on June 6, 1944, he called for "earnest and continuous and widespread prayer throughout the present crisis of the liberation of Europe." Prayer, he said, would fortify the "determination of our sailors, soldiers and airmen who go forth to set captives free." He added in a broadcast:

Encouraged People

"We are not unmindful of our shortcomings of the past and present. We shall not ask that God may do our will, but that we may be enabled to do the will of God; and we dare to believe that God has used our nation and Empire as on instrument for fulfilling His high purpose.

In the darkest days his quiet confidence gave encouragement. On the eve of an Empire Day of Prayer in 1942 he said there were "moments, no doubt, when some of us may not feel as fresh as we were two and a half years ago, when we started at the bottom of the hill, but don't forget that we are also much nearer the top."

A year and a half later, when victory shone on the horizon, he made an address from the royal fireside in which he said that "the lamps which the Germans put out all over Europe, first in 1914 and then in 1939, are being slowly rekindled." He added that "we long for a new birth of freedom and order among all nations so that happiness and concord may prevail and the scourge of war may be banished from our midst."

At the time of Germany's surrender he made a V-E address in which he said:

"Today we give thanks to Almighty God for a great deliverance."

American Tour

When King George and Queen Elizabeth made their North American tour in 1939 it marked the first time that a reigning British Monarch had set foot on United States soil. Their experiences were as novel for them as was their presence for a democratic people with storybook ideas of royalty.

New sights and new customs greeted the regal travelers everywhere. The easy-going American ways amused them, but also—they confessed afterward—shook them a bit.

They arrived at Quebec May 17, after a rough and delayed passage of 11 days. Traveling westward across the Dominion to the Pacific Ocean, they stopped briefly in Montreal. Ottawa, Vancouver, Banff and other cities.

At Ottawa the King addressed the Canadian parliament. In Toronto he and the Queen met the Dionne quintuplets.

On June 7 they crossed from Canada into the United States at Niagara Falls, where Secretary of State Cordell Hull welcomed them with simple informality to the United States The couple went promptly by train to Washington. There President Roosevelt greeted them and took them to the White House as a throng of 600.000 roared out a welcome.

Visited Washington's Tomb

In the American capital—burned more than 100 years before by English soldiers—they attended a state dinner, a garden party and other functions. They met and talked with Representatives and Senators.

King George made a special visit to the Tomb of George Washington, the man who led the Army that wrested the American colonies from Britain a century and a half before.

After a two-day visit the King and Queen travelled on to New York and the World's Fair—and another tumultuous ovation from countless thousands of Americans, all impressed by the grace and beauty of Elizabeth and the constant dignified good humor of George. At Hyde Park, they zestfully attended a picnic—with hot dogs and all.

On June 17, they sailed from St. Johns, Newfoundland, for home. Another enthusiastic crowd greeted them there upon their return from their six-weeks, 15,000-mile trip.

In London George VI reported formally on his kingly job of "selling" Britain in Canada and the United States by modestly saying that he and the Queen had "in some sort succeeded" in their mission.

War prevented his further travels until it ended.

Trip to South Africa

It was nearly two years after the end of the war when the King undertook the ambitious fraternal mission to South Africa, youngest of the dominions, a politically touchy union of British and Boers, or Afrikaners as they prefer to be called.

The King and Queen, with their two daughters and essential members of the royal household, set out from Portsmouth at the end of January, 1947, in the mighty battleship Vanguard. They arrived in Capetown, February 17.

The thunderous ovation the royal party received in that picturesque city was merely the first of a long succession of rousing receptions on a two months journey. By train, air and motor-car, they covered some 10,000 miles in the Union and Southern Rhodesia.

To an Orange Free State audience, made up principally of Afrikaners, the King said: "British and Dutch had an equal share in the foundation and development of this region. That is something of which, I am sure, you are rightly proud. Wherever we have gone on our tour . . . .we have seen nothing but the happiest results of that co-operation between the two sturdy pioneering races.

"I urge you and your people not to forget your past, but to build upon the best of it, and so go forward with God's blessing for a bright and prosperous future."

Faith in Britain

No greater warmth toward the King, Queen and Princesses was manifested anywhere than in some of the native communities. Often the scenes were touching, as when children sang their folk songs or poorly clad blacks clustered at some isolated railroad station to hail and serenade the "father of nations."

The King gave an accounting of success when he returned to London in May.

He said he was impressed by the faith in the future of Britain that he had observed on the part of all races and creeds.

"For myself," he said, "I share that faith. I shall hold to it till the end of my days. Come what may, nothing will ever shake my belief that this old country—old in history, old in experience, old in achievement—is at heart, as young and vigorous as she has ever been."

Historians agreed that George's choice of a wife was a fortunate one, a boon to the Empire as well as a personal blessing. He referred to her as his "helpmate."

Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, youngest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Strathmore, was a lively, vivacious girl, popular alike in London society and in her native Scotland. As a close friend of young Albert's sister, Princess Mary, she naturally saw a good deal of her future husband in their growing up years.

Pressed His Courtship

Naturally also, perhaps, the young prince fell in love with her. Inescapably, legend flowed with the fact in the telling of their romance. And a story that was told repeatedly—and may well be true in the absence of official disclaimer—had it that Albert wooed devotedly and ardently for three years without any actual assurance that he would be accepted.

He proposed three times before he won her assent, the story ran, and it was the encouragement from his mother, Queen Mary, that impelled him to press his courtship. Lady Elizabeth was quoted as telling friends that the prospect, though then remote that she might one day be Queen filled her with dread.

The Prince and Elizabeth first met at a party when he was a 10-year-old schoolboy at Eton and she was 5. At Christmastime and other holiday seasons for several years they were together.

Spoke Too Readily On One Occasion

During his earlier years George had extreme difficulty with his speech because of a stammer.

He became accustomed to referring to George V as "His Majesty" or "my father" in order to avoid saying "the K-k-king."

This fault of speech, which he subsequently overcame to a large extent, was the background of a classic episode when as the Duke of York, he opened the Wembley Exposition of 1925 in London. As he stood before a microphone there was trouble with the battery of loud speakers and his voice carried only a few feet. While workmen strove to correct the difficulty, the Duke turned to a friend to make an aside remark.

Just as he did so the current came on and his voice boomed:

"The d-d-damned thing d-d-doesn't w-w-work."

Sweater-Girl Gets New Lease On Life in Dior's Paris Display

By NADEANE WALKER

Paris, Feb. 6. (AP)—The sweater girl—with a difference—received a new lease of life from style-setter Christian Dior in his spring 1952 collection which opened yesterday.

"Sinuous" is Dior's choice of a word for his new line.

Sweater dresses are in one piece, but with tops that continue to a band or cuff around the hips. Although there is no seam or belt at the waist, it is well-marked and narrowed by darts. On suits and coats, collars and revers are often replaced with narrow cardigan sweater bands, and many suits have sweater-type jackets. Length is unchanged.

The second-most-popular dress form has a blousy top with pointed shirt collar. It is gathered or pleated on to a corselet waist just below a high bustline.

The silhouette is only moderately full, except for giant-skirted ball gowns. Most skirts are flared, with widely-spaced inverted pleats let out below the hips for a full hemline.

As usual, Dior has dared to be different. While other houses' mannequins totter on towering, needle-thin shoe heels, he is still plugging sensible medium-low heels. And while spring hats have been almost universally reduced to not much more than a curving band set back from the brow, Dior hats cover the head like a helmet, showing only a little swept-back hair in front.

Semi-fitted coats have dropped belts behind ,and there are some of the rounded-off hip-length coats seen elsewhere, but Dior's models aren't cut away enough to be real swallow-tails.

Deeply-rounded necklines bare the shoulders as well as their bosom. Some of these are of the leaning-edge or catch-all type, filled in with roses.

Most sleeves are three-quarter length. A less exaggerated version of the new set-in sleeve is called an almond sleeve at Dior's.

Women's Institute

MELROSE W.I.

Mrs. E. Whiteman was hostess to the January meeting of Melrose W.I., with an attendance of 21 members and six visitors. The president, Mrs. A. English, opened the meeting in the usual manner and conducted the business period.

During this session three "thank-you" notes were read for cards and gifts received and an invitation was extended to all members to attend "Achievement Day" at Madoc to learn of the activities of the Girls' Club. A social evening was planned for Feb. 20 in the Melrose Hall. It was decided to insure the chairs recently purchased by the Institute and to store them at the president's home where they are available for loan in the future.

Mrs. K. McMechan, convener of Citizenship, took charge of the program and read a paper entitled "Art of Being a Good Citizen", stressing the importance of the two words, 'women' and 'home', which are inseparable and that the Institute is a product of the democratic way of life.

Mrs. C. Hagerman gave a poem "Throw Wide the Gates". Mrs. Bruce Sherman favored with a solo which was much appreciated by all. Mrs. J. Kimmett, of Roblin, presented a most interesting address on "Everyday Citizenship", which took the form of a questionnaire and when answered in the positive proved that you were a good neighbor, wife and mother.

Mrs. M. Lazier followed with a reading "Democracy in the Community," after which Mrs. Demille conducted a contest which was won by Mrs. Sherman.

The president thanked all those who had contributed to the varied program and also the hostess for her hospitality after which refreshments were served and a social half hour spent.

John Martin Describes Northern Yukon

A pleasant time was spent Monday evening when about 40 members and friends of the Quinte Field Naturalists Club met at the Parasite Laboratory to view the beauties of the rugged Yukon by means of colored slides. The president of the club, Dr. Morris Smith presided.

Mr. John Martin, of the staff of the Parasite Laboratory, who spent last summer in that northern district, showed some exquisitely colored scenes of northern Yukon, its beautiful flora and fauna, depicting herds of migrating caribou, as well as some most interesting slides of young eagles in their native habitat.

Coffee and cookies were served later, concluding an interesting and informative evening.

The next meeting will be held the first week of March.

CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

ing and introducing her son's wife from Germany

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son, who is in the Army in Germany, has just written me he is going to marry a German girl, and will bring her home time this year. Please tell me to greet her, and what I should say first?

Also how should I introduce her to the family and to friends?—M. S.

I hope that you and your son will, as soon as possible, make plans for you to write to the girl he is to marry. Then in your letter to her (even if your son has to translate it for her) you can establish loving relationship with her, welcome her into your family, her of your and your family's happiness about the engagement, what charming things your son has written about her, and how much you are looking forward to knowing her. Naturally everything motherly you write to her will not only make her happy but will also please your son, make him proud of you and your loving understanding and welcome.

Your letter or letters to her make everything so much easier when she arrives. Then, as greet her, kiss her and say something like this: "At last we are meeting, Elsa—and how wonderful it is to welcome you to country and to our hearts! through your letters and Bill's letters we feel that we already know you."

To relatives and intimate friends, "This is our Elsa" is a warm-hearted introduction-form will charmingly suggest the affectionate relationship you will, am sure, establish with your son's wife. And she will be happy and proud when she hears you say these gentle words in your introductions. . . particularly if you look lovingly at her as you say them.

"Aunt Mary, this is our Elsa," or "Cousin Jane, this is Elsa." Or to a not-so-close friend, "This is Elsa, Bill's wife." To a casual acquaintance, when more information is necessary, "Miss Foster, this is my daughter-in-law, Bill's wife (or 'my son's wife')."

church organist to wedding reception

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Both the prospective bride and groom are members of a choir. The church organist is to play at the wedding, and is to be paid his professional fee. Should the organist be invited to the wedding reception?—S. R.

If there is to be a wedding reception of any size. . . .that is, not one limited to the families and some intimate friends. . . . it would seem to be a most natural gesture to invite the church organist with whom the bride and groom work so closely in choir proceedings. The fact that the organist is paid his professional fee for playing at the wedding which he certainly should be paid) makes no difference in this social gesture that should be made him.

Special Menus For Women Boarders

I quote this letter first, and comment below:

"Dear Mary Moore: My husband passed away recently, leaving me with 2 small youngsters (4, 9) I don't feel that I should leave them and work outside the home—not this year anyway. But I have two bedrooms that I can rent. Can you please give me some hints on a week's menu (breakfast, lunch and supper) on how to serve filling and appetizing meals so that I will be able to make some extra money to keep our home together. The rooms may bring $5.00 and $6.00 per week. Will it be at all possible to serve good meals for about $10.00 each a week. I would have to have women boarders. I always have enjoyed your column but I. have never seen a request like mine.—R. F."

In this city $15.00 per week for room and board for women would be a minimum. Do not charge less or you will not make enough profit for your effort. By all means stay home until the children are of school age, then only work while they are at school. You are lucky to have the two rooms to rent.

To keep your boarders happy and healthy think of food from the nutritional viewpoint, then flavor and attractive appearance can be considered. I will have economy in mind all of the time.

BREAKFASTS

(1) One-half medium-sized grapefruit or 1 sliced orange or 6-oz. glass canned orange or grapefruit or pineapple juice; oatmeal or cornmeal or whole wheat or mixed whole-grain cereal with brown sugar and top milk, whole wheat toast and jam, coffee.

(2) Poached, boiled, scrambled or coddled egg, 1 or 2 slices of toast, fruit same as in No. 1 breakfast, jam, coffee. (You will notice there are eight alternative meals at least in those choices—so the breakfast menu never need be monotonous.) On Sundays have jowl bacon and French toast.

LUNCHES OR SUPPERS

(1) Homemade soup; whole wheat bread sandwiches with chopped egg or chopped bacon and peanut butter or bacon and tomato or toasted cheese—all with lettuce; applesauce or canned plums or fresh apple, and date and oatmeal cookie; 8-ounce glass milk.

(2) Potato and meat pancakes, or macaroni and cheese or French onion soup with cheese or Split pea soup with cheese fingers or clam chowder with toasted rye bread; celery or sliced tomato or tomato jelly on lettuce; whole wheat or dark rye bread; 8-ounce glass milk; prune or lemon souffle or fruit cup.

DINNERS

(1) Halibut trimmings, egged and crumbed and fried or baked (you will have to shop for these but they may be bought at large fish shops where you must become acquainted with the manager—for 30 cents per pound and are delicious) or shoulder pork chops baked on scalloped potatoes (make the scalloped potatoes from reliquefied milk made from skim or whole milk powder) or hot salmon loaf (from pink salmon) and potatoes baked in jackets; and shredded beets baked in casserole with butter or in top of double boiler; or scalloped tomatoes or/and boiled outer celery stalks with mushroom soup sauce, raw carrot strips or cole slaw or celery and lettuce salad; cherry or apple pudding; tea or coffee.

(2) Chili con carne or chop suey or creamed tuna on biscuits; fine cabbage and carrots slaw; hot tea biscuits or cornbread or bran muffins; upside down prune or peach or rhubarb or apple pudding; top milk; coffee.

My correspondent and other readers who earnestly want to nourish their families well, and yet make the budget stretch to the squawking point, will do well to study those menu suggestions—plenty of thought has been spent on them by me and other nutritionists.

R. F.—You keep writing to me and I'll keep sending along the help.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her boy friend wants a promise—she doesn't wish to make one

Some girls get hurt and angry because their boy friends, more mature, perhaps, than some of the other boys—refuse to let themselves be rushed into a hasty marriage before being inducted into military service.

On the other hand, there are girls who are troubled because their boy friends about to enter service want to make sure of them before going away by going through a marriage ceremony.

Somewhere in between these two there are the young people who are reluctant to make too binding promises because they don't quite trust the future.

In this group is the girl who writes that she has been "going steady" with a boy for two and a half years who has just been called to the Army.

"There is an understanding between us that when he is out of the Army we will marry," she writes me, "but he will be in the Army for two years and I am worried lest during that time things might change between us. He wants me to promise that I won't go out with anyone else while he is away, and he says that if I do, it means that I really don't love him.

"What do you think about this?"

What I think about this is that it is most unwise for any boy to try and tie his girl down too closely during his absence. It is not really fair to expect any young girl to give up all normal good times and just sit at home every night thinking about the boy who is so far away. As time goes on, she will almost always grow very restless, and begin to resent the fact that she was made to promise not to go out.

Genuine Love Survives

It is a hard thing for any boy to have to accept, but the fact is, that the only sensible thing to do in cases of this sort is for him to be willing to take his chances on his girl being true to him. The point is, of course, that if the feeling she has for him is real love, it will automatically regulate her activities in his absence so that this feeling remains intact. In other words, she won't want to do anything that might interfere with her relationship to the boy in service.

But if she has mistaken her true feelings, and her affection for him does not really go very deep, then it is likely she will lose interest in her absent boy friend and become interested in someone nearer home. This is difficult for a man in service to take, but it's better for him to know that the girl's feeling wasn't what she thought it was, than to go on believing she loves him and finding out later that she really doesn't.

So I think this girl had better try to make her boy friend understand that if their love for each other is strong enough for marriage, it will survive their separation. Let her try to make him see that for any young girl to be without companionship among boys and girls of her own age for a long period of time will not make her feel any more kindly toward the boy who insisted on this. Let her tell him that she certainly has no intention of picking out any other boy and "going steady with him" and that she will always make it perfectly clear to anyone who asks her out for an evening that she is not "in the market" for a boy friend. If she finds, as she well may, that not many boys are pals enough to take a girl out on these terms, she still can have good times with her girl friends and with young people in a crowd. And she can, if she will, fill many hours that might otherwise be empty ones by taking part in community activities and making herself useful with volunteer work here and there. A person who gets interested in doing things with and for other people is usually too happily busy to be lonely.

If the young man in this particular girl's case, and any others in the same situation, will see things this way, be willing to trust the girl he loves and leave her free to use her own judgment about her activities, there is, I think, a far better chance that the affection between them will be sustained.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Feet hurt? They're mad at you.

Feminine feet are long-suffering. At a meeting of an association of chiropodists, a member made the statement that, in his opinion, the only perfect foot to be found anywhere is in a textbook. Everybody, it seems, has corns or calloused spots, ingrowing nails or bunions. Hammer toes are not uncommon. They are caused by shoes that are too full of feet, pushing one toe up and away from its neighbors. It sometimes happens that this poor little toe has to be amputated. What a price to pay for not having sense enough to select footwear that conforms to the contour and general pattern of one's feet.

Feminine feet are long-suffering.

If you do not give your feet proper housing, or if you do not give them proper care, they will rebuke you. They will remind you of your neglect. They have ways of getting even with you. They are often the direct cause of poor posture; and without correct posture a woman cannot have a beautiful body or wear clothes with splendor. Neglected feet can cause nerve strain and back ache.

The foot is a delicate piece of machinery, composed of 26 bones and several times that many ligaments. No wonder such a complex mechanism puts up a protest when improperly shod.

Do you know how to choose shoes that keep your feet happy all the day long, and when you fare forth for the merry evenings? First of all, they must fit properly. They should be long enough and wide enough to accommodate your feet without cramping. If you cannot wiggle your toes in them, they are not for you; you are keeping your feet in a prison.

Shoes should be snug at the heel to prevent friction and chafing, Materials are important; soles should be made of real leather, strong enough to cushion your feet against jolts and jars, yet flexible enough for freedom of movement. Choose uppers that are soft and pliable. Heels should be no higher than an inch and a half. High-heelers will curl up their noses at that statement. They can have their stilts—and heaven help them—if they will wear them only now and then. To clump around on them all day long will bring miseries. We will spare you the long list.

When bathing, use a soaped brush on your feet to soften the flesh around the nails. Cut nails straight across, never down at the sides. If the feet perspire, friction them lightly with a foot powder, and dust a little inside the shoes. Take regular walking exercises if your work keeps you sitting all day. When resting at home, elevate your feet and legs so as to relieve, congestion in your lower extremities.

British Plan on Mobilizing New, Streamlined Home Guard To Dispose of Paratroopers

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CP) — A modern, streamlined version of Britain's famous home guard which stood as a bulwark against the threat of invasion in the Second World War, will soon be on the march again. Authority to remuster the force was granted last December by an act of parliament.

The initial call has already gone out to prospective volunteers. But for the time being candidates are required to register only pending final agreement on the conditions of service. Actual enrolment is not expected to start until April and training a month or two later.

Officials in charge of recruiting are aiming at an operational target of 900,000 men, about half the number mustered in the last war. The new army, however, will have a distinct advantage over the 1939-45 edition which began basic training with pikes, staves and broomsticks.

To Get Good Weapons

Modern weapons and equipment will be available immediately to members of the revived force after enrolment and courses of specialized instruction will be given, including the scientific aspects of atomic warfare.

Any man between the ages of 18 and 65 may apply for service, but registration will not involve any obligation on the individual to enrol nor commit the army to accept him. Men subject to service with the reserve forces will be accepted only if they are not marked down for a full-time job with the services in event of war.

Engagement on enrolment will be for two years but may be terminated at any time by giving one month's notice. Training, to be confined to evenings and weekends, will be on the basis of no pay but consideration is being given to payment of nominal out-of-pocket expenses.

Serve Near Home

No home guardsman will be required to serve in any overseas theatre of operations and volunteers will be assigned to units as near as possible to their homes or places of employment.

Battalions are to be brought to full effective strength as speedily as possible in the more eastern areas of the country to facilitate the program of specialized training. Elsewhere, small organizational units, with a nucleus of 50 men or so, will be set up. These cadres will be entrusted with building up formations and preparing plans for quick deployment in emergency.

In the larger cities where the demands of civil defence are heaviest, the size of the home guard force will be curtailed and small detachments that operated in remote areas in the last war will not be raised again.

Tasks Different

The tasks of the reconstituted force will be somewhat different to those of the last war, said Maj.-Gen. E. O. Herbert, director of the territorial army and cadet forces.

The old home guard had been mobilized to meet the possibility of a large-scale seaborne invasion. The threat today, however, might take the form of an airborne attack against naval or offensive air bases. There was also the possibility of sporadic raids by small parties of saboteurs.

To meet such attacks, Gen. Herbert said, home guardsmen would have to stand ready to play a rehearsed part, operate quickly in deep defensive belts, know how to harry the enemy and be able to shoot straight.

Prime Minister Churchill gave it his own picturesque version: "Our country should suggest to the mind of the paratrooper the back of a hedgehog rather than the paunch of a rabbit."

WANT GOVT. HELP

Port Colborne, Feb. 6 (CP) — Town council yesterday decided to seek government aid in expanding its overloaded sewage disposal system. Councillors said that since the town is split in two by the Welland ship canal, duplicate disposal plants are needed on each side. They felt that the government should help pay for the system.

Fights Extradition on Murder Charge

Aldo "Ike" Icardi, former U.S. lieutenant accused of the murder of his commanding officer, Maj. William V. Holohan, during a World War II secret mission in Italy, reads the news of Italy's attempt to extradite him. Photo was taken in Icardi's Pittsburgh home. Also accused of the murder is former Sgt. Carl G. Lodolce of Rochester, N.Y. Both Icardi and Lodolce, back in civilian life and immune from military prosecution, emphatically asserted their innocence and charged they were victims of perjured testimony. — Central Press Canadian.

Canadian Industrial Expansion During Next Year Expected To be Largest in History

By HAROLD MORRISON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa — (CP) — Canada, in the midst of the greatest industrial expansion boom in history, is expected to increase public and private investment in 1952 to a record $5,000,000,000.

A detailed survey of government and industrial plans for investment in new machinery, equipment, plants and housing during the year has been undertaken by the trade department.

The official estimate will be tabled by Trade Minister Howe when parliament reopens Feb. 28.

Emphasis on Defence

The big investment emphasis during 1952 is expected to be concentrated in defence and defence-supporting industries, such as in the fields of strategic metals. Experts believe strong support in these fields will help overcome some weakening in such other categories of investment as housing and light industry, including textile manufacturing.

The expected climb to the $5,000,000,000-mark will mean a $400,000,000 increase over the $4,600,00,00 invested during the previous peak year of 1951.

But the increase—$400,000,000—likely will be only about one-half the $800,000,000-jump recorded during 1951 when the investment boom climbed to $4,600,000,000 from $3,800,000,000.

Peacetime Record

Adding some stimulus to the general picture is the expected increase in the federal government's defence budget of $300,000,000 to a peacetime record of $2,000,000,000 from $1,700,000,000 during the 1951-52 fiscal year.

However, experts estimate that defence projects provide only about 10 per cent of the total investment and industrial expansion. The big increases are likely to come from aluminum, steel and other metal industries, expanding to meet civilian as well as rearmament needs.

In regard to housing, financial organizations which have money for mortgages are finding higher interest rates in other investment fields. Increasing local taxes coupled with rising construction prices are tending to make some prospective homeowners postpone their building plans, the experts said.

Some Business Hit

Light manufacturing industries, such as textiles, refrigerators and washing machines, are just not getting the business of previous years, and their expansion plans are not expected to be heavy this year.

Other commercial building is being frustrated by a lack of materials such as steel, and by the government's deferred depreciation program. This restricts some industries from depreciation allowances for taxation purposes for four years.

On the whole, however, the experts feel that the general investment picture is bright, making for increased economic stimulus during 1952.

Britain Left Stunned, Sorrowing by King's Death

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 6—(CP) — The King's death today left Britain stunned and sorrowing

Many couldn't believe it at first.

"Our King?" said a British housemaid who works for a Canadian family in London. "Why, that's impossible."

Then the first reaction, of startled incredulity, gave way to a sense of shock and genuine sorrow.

The throne holds a place in the hearts of Britons that perhaps even some Canadians, sympathetic and loyal as they are, do not fully appreciate.

The news was stunning because it was unexpected. The King's gradual recovery from his operation had led most people to believe that there was no immediate cause for concern.

One newspaper said two or three days ago that the King himself was convinced there was nothing to worry about.

The paper said the King had a philosophy that once a physical ailment was traced to its source and destroyed, the rest would be easy. This attitude of mind was said to have been especially pleasing to his physicians.

The King had seemed in good health and good spirits. The last time the people saw him in public was at London airport last Thursday, when he arrived with the Queen and Princess Margaret to bid farewell to Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh on their Commonwealth tour.

Ironically, the plane bearing the Princess and her husband bore the radio code name: "How King."

At that time the King looked well and cheerful. He wore no scarf and appeared not to notice the sharp wind and scattered snowflakes as he stood bareheaded to watch the take-off.

Offers Sympathy

The announcement of the King's death came after 10 a.m. (5 a.m. EST). An hour later the BBC announced the news, departing from its usual detached style of news presentation to offer "profound sympathy" to the Queen and the Royal Family.

The BBC then closed for the day, except for news bulletins, shipping forecasts and gale warnings.

The Sandringham bulletin was too late for the first edition of London evening newspapers, but appeared in the "Stop Press" section of the second editions. In one paper the words "The King Dead" were in inch-high capitals.

Newspaper offices were flooded with telephone calls. Crowds gathered outside Buckingham Palace before noon, although officially neither the police nor the guards on duty had been informed of the King's death.

At Canada House, Canadian diplomatic centre to Trafalgar Square, it was stated that the news had been communicated to L. Dana Wilgress, Canadian high commissioner who now is in Paris.

May Cancel Journey

Vincent Massey, newly-appointed Canadian Governor-General could not be reached at the London home where he is staying with his son, Hart. It was not known immediately whether Massey, a personal friend of the Royal Family, would cancel his arrangements for sailing to Canada. He is scheduled to leave by sea Friday prior to taking up his new appointment.,

Soccer matches, one an important cup final, are expected to be called off.

Theatres throughout the country closed.

Law courts also closed.

Prime Minister Churchill quickly called a cabinet meeting.

The London stock and commodity exchanges closed at noon. There was no trading on the London metal exchange. Lloyds of London closed down also about noon, tolling the famous Lutine bell usually used to announce losses.

The foreign office cabled the sad news to British envoys in the world's capitals and also notified foreign missions in London.

Wool Profitable To Britain, Dominions

London (Reuters)—Wool has proved a golden fleece to Britain and the three wool-producing Dominions—Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

In six years they have made a profit of £170,610,000 from sale of wartime stocks of 10,500,000 bales.

The figure was announced in accounts of the joint organization set up to sell wartime wool surpluses—U.K.-Dominion Wool Disposals Limited.

The British government bought up the wartime surplus to aid the Dominions. Profit from sales is divided equally, half for Britain, half to be split among the Dominions.

The wool which brought the record sum originally cost only £6,000,000 at wartime prices—some 700 per cent probit.

The organization now has sold all its stocks and is going into voluntary liquidation.

WALLBRIDGE

Wallbridge—The W.I. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Sam Nicolson on Wednesday night. A good attendance was present. After the meeting refreshments were served by the lunch committee. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Nicolson for opening her home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hendrick and family were recent callers of Mr. and Mrs. F. Harris.

Mrs. Arnold Wannamaker and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. Smith.

A successful euchre party was held on Friday night in the Orange Hall put on by the Wallbridge L.O.B.A. All enjoyed a happy evening. Refreshments were served by the ladies.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Pound were guests on Friday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris.

Skiing and skating has been brought to a halt by the recent thaw. The zero weather the first of the week was enjoyed by a large number on the skiing hill and skating was enjoyed by young and older people.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Langabeer and Mrs. B. Latchford, of Belleville, called on Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris on Sunday afternoon.

A few of the school children are confined to their homes with measles and mumps.

The Conservative meeting which was held in the Orange Hall on Thursday night, was well attended. Refreshments were served by the ladies at the close of the meeting.

FIVE CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH AT TIMMINS

Several Hundred Immigrants Stage Hunger Strike

Demand Wives, Children Be Brought from Europe

St. Paul L'Ermite, Que., Feb. 6 (CP)— A black flag was hauled up the flag staff of the labor department hostel here today to mark a hunger strike by several hundred immigrants.

Between 600 and 800 immigrants awaiting employment decided to call the strike yesterday in protest over an "unsatisfactory" reply to their demands that 350 wives and children be brought here from Europe.

The flag, apparently put there by those participating in the hunger strike, replaced the Union Jack for more than an hour.

A Bulgarian immigrant, George Spasov, tore it down and with the help of guards ran up the Union Jack.

Posters in English, French, German and Yugoslav were plastered over the hostel's walls during the night demanding that the wives and children be brought here.

The strikers have asked the Canadian government to pay the transportation costs for their families on the understanding that the money will be returned when the immigrants get jobs.

Must Have Work

However, the government's rule has been not to bring out families until the immigrants have work.

Erik Huttere, a German mechanic, said the immigrants were not told "anything about work being scarce in Canada. Our wives are starving in German camps."

Miechyslaw Krzeminski, a Polish immigrant, received a telegram from Labor Minister Gregg last night saying that the government would send its director of immigration to Geneva to discuss the plight of the immigrants' wives with officials of the International Refugee Organization.

Mr. Gregg's wire said the immigration director would see what could be done to speed up arrangements for transporting the families to Canada.

A spokesman for the strikers said six such "indefinite" wires had been received from Mr. Gregg.

Today's hunger strike was the second staged by the hostel's 800 residents. They struck last month to protest the delay in getting them jobs.

CBC Cancels All Commercial Programs Today

Montreal, Feb. 6 (CP)—The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation today cancelled all commercial broadcasts on its networks for 24 hours in deference to the Royal Family on the death of the King. The commercial broadcasts are being replaced by appropriate music.

Polish Soldier Tells of Seeing Mass Slaughter

Washington, Feb. 6—(AP)— A former Polish soldier, masked to conceal his identity, was called before a house sub-committee today to tell how he witnessed the mass slaughter of Polish officers in Russia during the Second World War.

An estimated 10,000 Poles were shot down nearly 12 years ago in tangled Katyn Forest, 33 miles west of Smolensk.

The witness hid in a tree and watched the gruesome drama, subcommittee counsel John Mitchell said.

The Polish soldier and two companions had escaped from a Russian prison camp and hiked for six days across Russia, Mitchell said, after hearing that Russian officers planned the assassinations.

They wanted to watch the killings, Mitchell said, so they could tell about it later.

Mitchell said he has evidence to prove the Russians killed the Polish leaders and dumped their bodier into trenches, where the Germans found them in April, 1943. Moscow has claimed the killings were by Nazis.

The special sub - committee, headed by representative Ray J. Madden (Dem. Ind.) is investigating the Katyn massacre on behalf of Polish-American constituents.

Marion (Mike) Gawiak, a former Polish army cadet now living at Port Colborne, Ont., testified yesterday that thousands of Poles disappeared in 1940 from a Soviet prison camp he was in.

Frowned On Exploiting Royalty for Gain

King George had firm opinions on many subjects. One was a strict aversion to the exploitation of royalty for private gain.

He himself was reported to have ordered a shakeup in the system of court presentations to keep "cash-and-curtsy" debutantes out of Buckingham Palace's white and gold throne room. Some financially-embarrassed peeresses were reported to have accepted as much as $5,000 in previous reigns for sponsoring a young woman for the season.

He also tightened up on the issuance of royal warrants, those coveted grants of patronage to manufacturing firms and retailers.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Feb. 6 (CP) —Synopsis: Blue skies are gradually replacing grey ones in most regions of Ontario today, with only a small area in the vicinity of Lake Huron continuing to be overcast. Temperatures in southern Ontario while being a little cooler than yesterday will not be unpleasant.

A great deal more sunshine is forecast for all the province Thursday, and little change of temperature is expected.

POLICE BREAK MILLION-DOLLAR BABY RACKET

Two Appear in Court Eight Others Sought

Montreal, Feb. 6 (CP) — The backbone of an international baby-smuggling ring, reported to have netted more than $1,000,000 from traffic in illegitimate children, is broken today.

That is how police described the arraignment yesterday of two men said to be key figures in the ring that disposed of such babies across the United States and Canada. Price tags on some of the babies were set as high as $5,000.

Meanwhile, eight persons all said to be residents of Montreal, are expected to be picked up and arraigned this week. The eight police said, include two doctors and two women.

Brought before Judge Guy Guibault on charges of depriving an unmarried mother of her children were:

Herman Buller, 31-year-old lawyer from Williston, N.D., who has been practising law in Montreal since 1949, and Bill Dutka, 34-year-old construction foreman.

Preliminary hearing in their case was set for Feb. 12 after both applied for trial by jury.

At the arraignment, Buller was freed on parole and bail of $950 was set for Dutka.

The two men charged under an article in the criminal code, are accused of intent to deprive the mother of her children under the age of 14 and of possessing and detaining the children.

The specific offence is alleged to have occurred around May 20. 1951.

Crown lawyers asked that the name of the mother, a Montreal hair-dresser, not be disclosed.

WILL TAKE OATH

Toronto, Feb. 6 (CP) —Members of the Ontario cabinet will take the oath of allegiance to Queen Elizabeth Thursday morning, Premier Frost announced this afternoon. The oath will be administered by Chief Justice R. S. Robertson.

Deputy ministers and senior civil servants will be sworn in "as speedily as possible."

Members of the legislature elected Nov. 22, who have already been sworn in by the clerk of the House must renew their oath to the Queen before taking their seats.

Flags Throughout World Dipped In Respect for Commonwealth

London, Feb. 6 (AP) — Flags throughout the world were lowered to half staff today at the news of the death of King George.

In Paris the United Nations' secretary-general, Trygve Lie, ordered the lowering of the flags of the world organization's 60 members, who yesterday concluded their 6th general assembly.

At Gen. Eisenhower's Atlantic Pact headquarters outside Paris the flags of Britain and the 11 other pact countries were lowered as soon as the news was received.

In the West German capital of Bonn, flags were lowered on all public buildings.

In Berlin the Russians notified the western powers they would like to join in lowering flags out of respect to the King.

The Soviet control commission sent word to American, British and French authorities that they were willing to dip the red flag, which flies with those of the western nations over the defunct Allied control authority headquarters.

Queen Juliana of The Netherlands was "deeply shocked," her secretary at Soestdyk Palace said.

Denmark's broadcasting system interrupted a program of light music to announce the death, then began playing solemn music.

In the Indian capital of New Delhi, officials said tomorrow probably would be declared a day of mourning.

Prime Minister Nehru told the Indian parliament "I am sure the House will deeply sympathize with Her Majesty the Queen, Princess Elizabeth and the people of England with whom the King was so popular.

"It is significant in this world of republics how the British Royal House stood firm, not merely in law, but in the affections of the people."

In Italy the Pope was informed by Walter St. C. H. Roberts, British Ambassador to the Holy See. The Pontiff instructed that a telegram of condolence be sent at once to the King's family.

In Ottawa, flags on the Canadian parliament and other buildings throughout the city were lowered. Aides said Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent was deeply shocked by the news.

In Stockholm, King Gustaf VI of Sweden was closeted for more than an hour with his Earl Marshal preparing formal messages of condolence. It was expected that 21 days of mourning would be proclaimed

King Haakon of Norway sent a message to Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mother Mary. The Norwegian parliament held a memorial meeting.

News of the King's death came as a great shock to the people of Australia, who were eagerly preparing for a visit from his daughter. Elizabeth.

Prime Minister Robert Menzies announced the news to parliament a few minutes later the house adjourned.

In Malaya, after the news was broadcast, only mourning music was played on all radio programs. Movie houses and amusement parks were closed. The Singapore stock market will be closed tomorrow.

In Korea a British soldier commented: "One thing is certain: the Queen Mother will keep her chin up, so the rest of us can."

King's Death Shocks Ottawa Immediate Meeting of Cabinet Called by Prime Minister

Ottawa, Feb. 6—(CP)—Thisdeath at Rideau Hall early this capital was deeply shocked early morning. today by the news of the sudden death of the King.

Immediate plans were made to call a meeting during the day of the Canadian cabinet.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, informed of the King's death by members of his staff, informed the members of his cabinet and went early to his office in the east block of the parliament buildings.

Flags on the parliament buildings and other government structures throughout the city, raised at dawn before word of the King's death seeped through the city, were lowered to half-staff.

Aides said the prime minister, as all Canadians, is deeply shocked by the passing of a monarch who came to visit this country personally little more than a dozen years ago.

Must Swear Allegiance

One of the first constitutional requirements upon the death of a monarch is the Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret, the administrator pending the assumption of the new governor-general, must swear allegiance to the new queen—Elizabeth II.

Then the whole of the federal cabinet must take its oath to the queen.

Otherwise, official sources said, it would be technically illegal for the cabinet to act.

This procedure presumably will be followed in each of the country's 10 provinces.

It was not known immediately what alteration the King's death might require in the plans for the opening of the 1952 session of parliament Thursday, Feb. 28.

Alexander Soon Leaves

It is planned to have Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey sworn in as governor-general the morning of Feb. 28 to succeed Viscount Alexander, who leaves Canada shortly to become Britain's defence minister. The present arrangement then is for Mr. Massey to open parliament that afternoon.

Whether there will be any alteration in that schedule presumably will be decided shortly.

Viscount Alexander, who has had an earldom conferred upon him by the late King for his six years of service here as governor-general, received word of the Word of the King's death circulated quickly through the city as sombre-faced civil servants began moving to their offices, Many of them, in the higher ranks of the government service, will take new oaths of allegiance.

Has Fond Memories

This capital has fond memories of the noble king and the gracious queen who came to Ottawa in 1939 during their state visit to Canada. The king was the first reigning monarch to visit this country.

While here, the king gave royal assent to bills passed by parliament, then in session.

It was a glittering state visit and this capital neither before nor since has seen its equal.

Then, only four months ago, the new queen — as Princess Elizabeth — followed in her royal parents' footsteps as she and the Duke of Edinburgh undertook a month-long tour of Canada, with a side trip to Washington.

Princess Elizabeth spent three days in Ottawa and then was able to report, to a state dinner, that her father was "progressing well and gaining strength daily" from the lung operation which had so weakened him.

Functions Cancelled

All formal state and diplomatic social functions were immediately cancelled. By custom, this capital will go into a period of mourning.

The curtailment of social activities will run through the social strata of the capital.

Mr. St. Laurent called the cabinet into session for 11 a.m.

The government now must issue a proclamation naming Elizabeth as the Queen of Canada.

The cabinet also must name representatives— presumably a cabinet delegation—to represent this country at the funeral of the King in the United Kingdom.

A state memorial service presumably will take place in this capital and probably will be duplicated in essence in churches throughout the country.

Once the coronation date is set for the crowning of the new Queen, the government will appoint representatives, again a cabinet delegation, to take Canada's place at the ceremony.

King George Was a Great King, A Good Man Says St. Laurent

Ottawa, Feb. 6—(CP)— Prime Minister St. Laurent said today that King George was "both a great King and a good man."

In a statement, Mr. St. Laurent said:

"The people of Canada were profoundly shocked by the news this morning of the sudden death of His Majesty King George VI.

"We all realized how precarious was the state of the King's health, but the universal anxiety of three months ago had given place to deep gratification at what seemed to be a rapid and steady recovery.

"For Canadians, as for all His Majesty's subjects, the death of their sovereign will be a personal sorrow. Our loyal attachment to the Crown has been strengthened throughout the King's reign by our universal admiration for the high courage and the exemplary family life of King George VI.

"To the people of this country who have never forgotten the visit of the King and Queen in 1939 and their many associations with our armed forces during the war, the King was both a great king and a good man. His passing will be mourned not only in Canada and elsewhere throughout the Commonwealth but everywhere in the free world.

"To Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth who shared so fully the life and the duties of the King, the sympathy of the Canadian people will go in fullest measure. We also feel deep sympathy for Queen Mary, for Princess Margaret and the other members of the Royal Family.

"For our new sovereign, Queen Elizabeth II, our sympathy is all the greater because, in this hour of sorrow, she was separated from her father and mother and sister. Her Majesty's recent visit to Canada has given us all the sense of her nearness to us and the feeling that this land, too, is her home.

"With our sympathy, we extend to our new Queen not only an expression of complete loyalty but also of abiding personal affection. It will be the prayer of all that Divine Providence will sustain Her Majesty in the discharge of her heavy duties."

Tinkering, Knitting Were King's Hobbies

Mechanics interested George VI. He wanted to know what made a machine work. Tinkering with things about the house was a hobby. So was knitting. What people did with their hands never ceased to arouse his curiosity and prompt him to make little experiments of his own.

When building of homemade radios was in vogue, he fixed a work bench in his studio. Sets he made found their way to the homes of friends or to hospitals.

During World War II the Monarch took a job as a parttime worker in a war factory. He stood at a bench two evenings a week turning out precision parts for RAF guns. His foreman described the overalled King as "clever with his hands and the use of precision tools."

'God Save the Queen' New British Salute

London, Feb. 6—(CP)—For the first time since 1901, the British salute to the sovereign will be: "God Save the Queen."

In official proclamations and in the National Anthem the new Queen Elizabeth II will be hailed as was her great-great grandmother, Victoria, who died 51 years ago.

The Queen's birthday, April 21, may become a public holiday.

Her father's birthday, Dec. 14, was observed in Britain at a variable date in June with the famous ceremony of the trooping of the color in London.

In Canada it was observed as a public holiday, fixed by proclamation annually for a Monday in June.

Woman Dies in Fire

Detroit, Feb. 6 (CP)—A spectacular early morning blaze Tuesday cost the life of a 33-year-old woman who was alone in her house.

Mrs. Ethel Green was dead of suffocation when firemen wearing oxygen masks reached her. She was lying against a wall of her bedroom in night clothing.

Mrs. Green's husband, John, who had been spending the evening with friends, drove up to the blazing house as firemen carried his wife's body through the front door.

Cause of the fire was unknown. Damage to the 10-room colonial house was estimated at $25,000.

Party of Six Top Scientists Goes To Australia for Scientific Meet

Ottawa, Feb. 6 (CP)—A party of six of Canada's top scientists will leave shortly for Australia to attend a meeting of the British Commonwealth Scientific Official Conference where vital discoveries in many fields are exchanged and discussed.

It will be the first full meeting in more than five years of the Commonwealth scientists whose air is to ensure full collaboration between civil government scientific organizations in the Commonwealth and to make formal recommendations to their governments. The last was held in London in 1946.

Since the London meeting, specialist conferences have been held to discuss collaborative arrangements in such fields as fuel research, radio, geology and mineral resources, plant and animal nutrition and culture collection of micro-organisms—a subject of importance to bacteriologists. These will be further discussed in Australia.

Canada's delegation will be headed by Dr. E. W. R. Steacie. vice-president (scientific) and director of the division of chemistry for the National Research Council.

Other Canadians are Dr. G. H. Ettinger, head of medicine, Queen's University, Kingston, Ont. and assistant director of N.R.C.'s division of medical research; Dr. Paul E. Gagnon, head of the department of chemistry and chemical engineering, Laval University, Quebec; Dr. George S. Hume, director-general of scientific services for the department of mines and technical surveys; Dr. K. W. Neatby, director of science service, department of agriculture and Dr. G. B. Reed, professor of bacteriology, Queen's University and chairman of the fisheries research board.

The conference will open Feb. 18 at Canberra for a four-day session. Then it will move to Melbourne for further meetings from Feb. 26 to March 7.

Attending will be a working party of 30 delegates, including the six from Canada. Other countries to be represented are Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, Pakistan, Ceylon and Southern Rhodesia.

An invitation has been issued by the Australian government for one or more observers from the United States but no nominations have been received.

Stove Explodes, Victims Trapped In 4-Room House

Father at Mine and Mother Delivering Laundry at Time

Timmins, Feb. 6 — (CP)—Rita Poissant, 11, died in hospital today, fifth child victim of a fire which swept through a four-room home here Tuesday night.

The blaze, believed to have started when a woodstove exploded, claimed the lives of three brothers, Gerald, 5, Roland, 3, Claude 2; and a sister, Lilian, 6.

The father, Edward, 35, was at work in a nearby mine when the fire started. Leo, 13, who escaped, said that his mother, Irene Poissant, 31, was out delivering laundry. He and another child, Laurent, 9, fled from the blazing tar-paper-covered home in 10-degree weather.

Leo said he had filled the stove with wood and closed the door shortly before it blew up.

Flames scorched the whole interior of the building but it did not burn down and the roof was not burned off. Fire Chief William Stanley said the cause of the fire was not definitely determined.

The two children who escaped in the 10-degree weather ran to a neighbor's home and raised the alarm. Leo said he returned to the burning house but was unable to enter because of dense smoke. Inside, he heard one of the younger children crying.

The fire was the worst—from the standpoint of lives lost—in Timmins since 1936 when the five children of Arthur Charboneau died in a Nov. 7 fire. Charboneau died a week later from burns suffered while trying to rescue them.

Strasser Still Banned From Entering Germany

Bonn, Feb. 6 (AP) —Allied authorities here said today Otto Strasser, who helped Hitler to power and then fled, is still banned from returning to Germany and they are confident he can be kept out.

Strasser has announced in Canada he plans to return to form a new political party.

An Allied spokesman said Strasser's plans to come back have been known for a long time but there are ways of keeping him out.

Although issuance of visas abroad is now in German hands, the Allies have given Germans secret black list of persons considered undesirable.

Premier Frost Expresses Regret For Province

Toronto, Feb. 6 (CP)—Premier Leslie Frost today expressed his personal regret and that of the people of Ontario at the death of the King. He said in a statement:

"It is with profound regret that we learn of the King's passing. In view of his apparent recovery, it is indeed a great shock.

"His Majesty has made a great contribution to his people with a great record of service going back to the days of the first war.

"And at this time I would say what has been the custom in years past—the King is dead! Long live the Queen!"

Duke of Windsor Sails for London On Thursday

New York, Feb. 6. (AP)—The Duke of Windsor announced today he will sail tomorrow night to attend the funeral of his brother, the King, but that the Duchess will remain in the United States.

The Duke, who as Edward VIII abdicated the throne to marry the former Wallis Warfield Simpson, will depart for Southampton on the liner Queen Mary.

The Duchess has visited England since she married the Duke in 1937, but she never has been received by the royal family.

Both the Duke and Duchess were in seclusion in their suite in the Waldorf Towers.

His secretary said the Duke was "terribly shocked and surprised over the passing of his brother."

Aldermen Want Raise

Sudbury, Feb. 6 (CP)—City council last night decided to ask the Ontario Department of municipal affairs to set remuneration for aldermen at $750 a year.

The department must approve increases over the present $500 limit.

A suggestion that aldermen be paid $5 for each meeting was turned down in favor of the straight $250 increase.

Canadians Voice Sorrow at News Of King's Death

(By The Canadian Press)

Most Rev. W. F. Barfoot, Primate of the Church of England in Canada, said at Edmonton today that the King's death has plunged the country "into the shadow of a great bereavement."

Services in all Anglican churches Sunday will be of a memorial nature, the Primate added.

Prof. Scott Mackenzie, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, said at Montreal "news of the King's sudden death comes as a profound shock and is a personal bereavement to all of us."

Premier Douglas Campbell, of Manitoba, said the King's death "is a great loss to Canada, to the Commonwealth and to the world, because the guidance of this man has been sorely needed in these troubled times."

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said the Commonwealth lost a man "who represented many of the best features of family and official life. One was shocked at the news, although in the King's condition it was not as unexpected as it might have been."

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said King George "was a good monarch and has endeared himself to people throughout the world. He has done much to retain for the British Royal Family that place of love and esteem in which they certainly now are held."

Visiting Ottawa the Moderator of the United Church of Canada, Rev. C. M. Nicholson of Halifax, said "he was so great a King because he was so great a man. In the years he reigned over us he showed us how complete may be devotion to a high and demanding office. . ."

United Churches across the Diminion will hold memorial services next Sunday.

George Drew, leader of the Progressive Conservative party, now is in the Bahamas but his Ottawa office issued a statement by Mr. Drew saying the King's death brought a sense of "great personal loss to the whole free world."

Gordon Graydon, foreign affairs critic of the Progressive Conservatives, said the King's "courage, humanity and exemplary family life has been an inspiration to his subjects in every corner of the globe.'

At Rouyn, Que., E. J. Parsons, Dominion president of the Canadian Corps Association, said that during the war years the King visited Commonwealth troops and showed a sincere feeling for their welfare and appreciation of their services.

OFFICIALS SHOCKED

Washington, Feb. 6 (AP) —British officials in the United States awoke with a shock today to the news that their King was dead.

The word had not yet reached Washington when British offices were called immediately after the announcement.

News Relayed Of King's Death In Quiet Whisper

(By The Canadian Press)

It was almost a whisper—"The King died this morning."

In the cities, the news was passed along quietly at bus stops, on street corners, on street-cars, by early risers who had heard it on the radio.

In the country, the news spread by radio and by telephone.

It came when most of Canada slept.

At 5:52 a.m. E.S.T., it was too early, in the east, where most persons were turning over for another hour sleep in the predawn darkness.

It was too late, in the west, where stragglers were making their lonely way home at the fag end of the night. For it was only 2:52 a.m., in Vancouver.

Mostly, the tidings were relayed by word of mouth, to be received with hushed incredulity.

In the west and in some eastern cities there were bold headlines on extra editions of morning newspapers. Most morning papers in the east had "gone to bed".

Upon the all-night disk jockeys on local radio stations fell the task of reporting the momentous news. They broke into programs with bulletins then switched from the customary swing to appropriate music.

The CBC banned broadcast of commercials for 24 hours. It announced that its Trans-Canada and Dominion networks will be linked throughout the day to carry music, news bulletins and overseas broadcasts from the BBC. Tonight's regular programs have been cancelled.

NHL Game Postponed

Toronto, Feb. 6 (CP)—The National Hockey League game scheduled for tonight between New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs has been postponed because of the death of the King, George McCullagh, vice-president ofMaple Leaf Gardens announced today.

No new date for the game was set.

The postponement was the second of its kind for the Leafs. Thesy called off a game with Montreal Canadiens Jan. 21, 1936, because of the death of King George V the previous day.

Junior Hawks Regain Top Slot With 4-2 Victory Over Kingston Vics

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

CELEBRATE RETURN!

The junior Hawks first-line celebrated its return to the hockey wars last night in Kingston with seven scoring points in the 4-2 win over Max Jackson's Vics. Billy Strahan sidelined for a lengthy period through illness banged home a goal and was credited with two assists while Lalande scored one and got a helper with the third member of the line George Jacklin getting two assists. According to reports from the scene the game was not of the sensational type with the cellar-dwelling Vics pushing the Hawks to the limit before saying "uncle" in the third period. Mason flung home the winner early in the last heat and Peter Green scored the insurance marker with scant seconds to go.

The win vaults the Hawklets into top slot over the Lindsay Kinsmen by one point, and from here in they'll have to keep their sights lined on the victory target if they are to knock off the group leadership at schedule end. Lindsay and Peterborough hook up in an important game tonight in Peterborough, the result of which may have an important bearing on the ultimate standing.

The Hawklets came through with a neat performance last night albeit the game is said to have been rather listless. However the good news is that Lalande, Strahan and Jacklin are back in triple-harness again and with this scoring threat now in action the squads playoff chances will be considerably enhanced. Pete Green, Ross Mason and Don Barclay came through with neat efforts last night.

OLDTIMERS READY!

Strangely enough, and in direct contradiction to all forecasts, predictions and prognostications, members of the Oldtimers hockey teams who make a personal appearance at Oldtimers night in Memorial Arena on Friday, did not emerge from their practice in casts, with bandaged limbs or crutches support.

Whether the workout had had the same effect as a beaker of the Ponce de Leon elixir is not known, but suffice it to say the grey-thatches are going about town this week as sprightly as six-weeks-old lambkins gambolling on somebody's green.

And they're happy about the whole thing. Bill Cook shook off a few pounds avoirdupois, which he'll pick up next week when he goes back on the regular diet. Hank Fenn who wore size 13 skates, a belt of barrel staves, and a bullet-proof vest is ready for action. Cap'n Ben Bowen says he'll be all right if he is allowed to wear collision mats, or three or four old tires. Al. Wardhaugh who surprised even himself with his speed, is thinking of taking up figure-skating after the game. Bill Green is practising secretly on the bay, as is Murney Green who has wagered Jack (Flack) McNab he can defeat him in a ten-mile race, five miles out from the government dock and back.

Incidentally the Oldtimers game has been definitely set for the interim between the first and second periods of the Kingston Vics - Belleville Hawks junior "B" game Friday. The Red Wings and Canadiens peewee teams will usher in the night's fun with a fifteen-minute battle starting at eight o'clock sharp. The Oldtimers game will start about nine o'clock. The line-ups will appear in Friday's edition.

GLENS-TRENTON HERE TONIGHT!

Two of the hottest teams in the Trent Valley Hockey League will see action in Memorial Arena tonight when the Belleville Glen Roys and Trenton Jewellers clash in a league fixture. There is plenty of keen rivalry between the squads and fans should see a hot tussle. The Jewellers have edged the Glens on the two former occasions they met and Timmy Williams and his crew will be out to wipe out those setbacks. Both squads are favored as possible contenders for the league championship and tonight's game should see them at their best. Children under twelve accompanied by a parent will be admitted free to the arena.

RANGERS ARE TOUGH TO SHUT OUT!

New York Rangers may not be leading the National Hockey League, but they are the toughest team in the League to keep off the score sheet. The Rangers, up to the morning of January 31, had not been shut out in 62 straight games. The Broadwaylites were shut out last on February 17, 1951, by the Toronto Maple Leafs in New York. The score was 2-0 for the Leafs. Every other team in the NHL has been shut out at least once this season.

STEWART TURNS AUTHOR!

Nels Stewart, twice winner of the Hart Trophy as the National Hockey League's most valuable player and holder of the record of most goals scored — 324, has authored a booklet called "How to Watch and Enjoy Hockey." This booklet should add to the enjoyment of any hockey fan who reads it. Anyone interested in obtaining a copy may do so by writing to "Hockey", O'Keefe House, Toronto, Canada.

Break Second-Period Deadlock With Two Counters in Third; Lead Lindsay by One Point

Belleville Junior Hawks regained temporary possession of first place in the Junior B circuit last night in Kingston Community Centre when they defeated the Vics by a score of 4-2 in a rather listless encounter.

Although slightly outplayed in the first two periods, the Hawks held the Vics to a 2-2 deadlock. Mason's score from the opening faceoff in the third stanza proved to be the winning marker although the outcome was in doubt until the Hawks scored another in the dying seconds of the game.

The tilt, played before one of the largest attendances to witness a junior game in the Limestone City this year, 275 fans, several of whom travelled from Belleville, was very cleanly played. Only seven penalties were handed out, four of these in the second frame when play became considerably rougher and tempers flared.

First Line Clicks

The Hawks production trio, Lalande, Jacklin and Strahan, accounted for both period scores, each being the result of neat passing plays.

Kingston held a decided edge in the first frame after the first five minutes of play and only some cool-headed netminding by Don Barclay kept the score from mounting rapidly. The Vics had their passing plays working smoothly but appeared to lack finesse around the Hawk net.

The same could be said of the Hawks starting line which, after the first period, worked smoothly and gained many opportunities but was unable to finish the plays off.

Don Senior bagged the first Vic score at 13.30 of the first frame as the result of a ganging attack and a screened shot which Barclay had little chance on.

The tying goal by the homesters in the second period, appeared to go into the net off a high stick. Whyte fired a rising shot from the blue line and Birchall raised his stick to partly obstruct the goalie's view. In so doing, he tipped the puck downward and into the mesh by the goalie.

PETER GREEN

... Scores Clincher

Ted DeGray took the opening faceoff of the third period and with Mason and Doran, worked the puck in to a position in front of the Kingston net. Mason raised a cross-net shot from about ten feet out which beat Senior, Vic goalie, cleanly.

Play Ragged

Both teams had their chances throughout the remainder of the chucker but play generally was ragged. It was not until Tozer of the Vics went off at the 19-minute mark for holding that the Hawks were able to wrap it up. Strahan broke away from his own side of centre ice and down the left boards. His pass to Pete Green in front of the net was right on and the latter caught the far corner for the clincher.

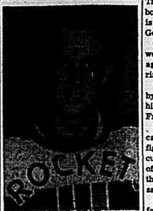
Billy Strahan, playing his first game since before Christmas, proved the opportunist for the Hawks, scoring once and assisting on two others. Lalande and Jacklin each picked up a pair of points.

Ted DeGray turned in another stout performance, and although picking up only one assist, played the best two-way game of any player on the ice.

Only standout player for the Vics was netminder Bob Senior who, on at least three occasions thwarted one and two man breakaways as well as generally playing well in the clutch.

The teams:

Kingston Vics: Goal, R. Senior; defence, Montgomery, Birchall; centre, Redmond; wings, P. Hegarty, Whyte. Alternates, Tozer, Chevrefils, Gerow, D. Senior, Reid, Vallier, Roy, Mulholland.



TED DeGRAY

... No. 1 Boy

Belleville Hawks: Goal, Barclay; defence, Wilson, Green; centre, Lalande; wings, Jacklin, Strahan. Alternates, DeGray, Doran, Therrien, Mason, Carey, Gilmour, Houle, Munroe.

Officials: Louis Lecompte, Trenton; referee, Art Casterton, Kingston, linesman.

Summary

1st period

1 Hawks, Lalande (Strahan, Jacklin) .39

2 Hawks, Strahan (Jacklin, Lalande) 12.46

3 Vics, D. Senior (Reid, Roy) 13.30

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Feb. 6 (AP)— They say that tears rolled down Warren Giles' cheeks the other night while Ralph Branca was singing his heartbreak song at the baseball writers' annual dinner here.

The National League president listened to the pitcher's rich baritone lamenting the home run that Bobby Thomson hit off him in the final playoff game and said, "it's the most wonderful thing that ever happened to baseball."

A number of thick-crusted critics called Branca's warbling the greatest act in the 29-year history of the writers' show.

It is customary in these everlively reviews to impersonate the baseball character who is being dissected. This has proved a highly effective method of taking the hide off, layer by layer, both of the game's stuffed shirts and of those individuals who figured in some amusing or otherwise significant event.

As the man who threw possibly the most expensive single-pitch in baseball history, Branca couldn't miss.

First, Thomson, the grinning Scot who scrambled Branca's life came through the curtains in the flesh. Bobby sang his version of "Because of You" in a nice tenor.

Then, there stood Branca in his Dodger uniform, bathed by the spotlight. He began to sing of the blow that crushed him in a baritone whose quality was truly surprising. It wasn't just amateur-good. It was a couple of notches better than that.

When Ralph finished telling what Bobby had done to him there was floor-stomping applause. A great many eyes were no more dry than those of Giles.

Fight Technique In US, Europe Low--Carpentier

Buenos Aires, Feb. 6 (AP) — The level of boxing technique in both Europe and the United States is lower now than in his time, Georges Carpentier said today.

Carpentier, European heavyweight boxing king some 30 years ago, was known as one of the ring's finest boxers.

"The boxer has been replaced by the puncher who can knock out his rival with one blow," said the Frenchman on a visit here.

"This has come," he said, "because of public's desire for bloody fights with dramatic finishes. The current crop are but pale shades of boxers whose ability enabled them to overcome cruder adversaries."

Carpentier had high praise for former heavyweight champion Joe Louis. He said Louis would have made trouble for any of the fighters in his own time, including Jack Dempsey.

Carpentier was knocked out in the fourth round by Dempsey in their 1921 title fight in Jersey City, N.J.

Calgary Stamps Nip Quakers 6-4

(By The Canadian Press)

Calgary Stampeders, playing a reshuffled lineup, last night downed the second-place Saskatoon Quakers 6-4 in a Pacific Coast Hockey League game. Edmonton's crippled Flyers, in the other contest of the night, downed Victoria Cougars 1-0.

Minus four injured players, Edmonton cashed in on Jim Uniac's goal with eight minutes left.

Calgary scorers were Hank Blade Bing Juckes, Don Anderson, Cy Thomas, Bob Goodacre and George Agar. Ken Hunter led Saskatoon with two, Bill Heindle and Neil Strain getting the others.

Meanwhile, New Westminster Royals yesterday signed defenceman Jim Bedard after his release by last place Calgary Stampeders.

Red-Hot Teepees Sink Hurricanes By 11-1 Score

(By The Canadian Press)

Playoff fever is mounting early in the Ontario Hockey Association's 10-team junior A loop and St. Catharines Teepees are showing a form that could make them real contenders for league honors in the coming post-season playdowns.

The Niagara district team caught fire with seven goals in the third period last night against Waterloo to sink the Hurricanes 11-1 at St. Catharines. It was their 18th win in 23 starts in a reawakening that began before Christmas, and it moved them from fifth place into a third-place tie with Toronto St. Michael's.

Guelph Biltmores, in second place in the junior loop, moved to within two games of the leading Toronto Marlboros with a 4-1 win over Barrie Flyers in Guelph.

The OHA senior A race tightened up as well, with Owen Sound Mercurys moving into a third-place tie with Brantford by virtue of a 7-1 win over the Redmen in Owen Sound.

Sudbury Miners dropped farther from playoff contention in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association four-team senior A league when they lost 11-8 to third place North Bay Black Hawks in North Bay.

Montreal Canadiens defeated Chicago Black Hawks 6-1, eight years ago tonight, to set a National Hockey League mark of 18 consecutive home games without a defeat. Canadiens completed their 25-game home schedule without defeat that season but in the first game of the Stanley Cup playoffs against Toronto, the Montrealers were beaten 3-1. Canadiens however went on to win the Stanley Cup.

Surging Bruins Blank Hawks, Stretch Unbeaten Streak to 5; Richard Leaves Habs' Lineup

(By The Canadian Press)

The National Hockey League spotlight is focussed on Boston's upsurging Bruins these days.

In the only game played in the NHL Tuesday night—at Boston, of course—it was tantamount to "old home night."

The Bruins blanked Chicago Black Hawks 5-0; Jim Henry chalked up his fifth shutout of the season; veteran winger Woody (Porky) Dumart scored his 20th NHL goal; the victory stretched the Bruins' unbeaten streak to five games; it extended their fourth-place lead over the New York Rangers to six points.

But while there was joy in one town, there was little in another—Montreal.

Rocket Out Again

Reason for the gloom is the fact that Maurice (The Rocket) Richard perennial goal-scorer for Les Canadiens, has had to leave the team on the road.

Richard, sufferring from a groin injury, is expected home today.

The right-winger will confer with club officials here about his future plans. It is possible that he may be sent to Florida for a vacation as physicians have told him that rest is the only thing that will do the injured groin any good.

Richard missed seven games because of the ailment and his return to the ice during the last few games found him far below par.

In Boston, play was halted when Dumart's tally came early in the third period. Teammates and rivals congratulated him and gave him the puck as a souvenir.

A member of the famed pre-war Kraut line, the 35-year-old Dumart is in his 13th season with the Bruins.

A single game will be played tonight with Rangers tangling with the Leafs at Toronto.

Sport in Brief

Applications from four new teams for franchises in the intercounty baseball league's senior series will come up at Thursday's executive meeting in Galt, it was reported last night.

The four are said to be Oshawa, Niagara Falls, Windsor and Port Huron, Mich.

Otto Manske, league president, has said that all seven of last year's teams have filed entries. They are London, Brantford, Kitchener, Waterloo, Galt and St. Thomas.

Successful basketball games are staged every Monday night at Knox College gymnasium by a group of youths who can't see the basket. The youths are from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. None has more than 10-per-cent vision. Most of them can pick out the backboard when they get close enough for a shot. They know the target is in the middle.

Henri Salaun of Boston will defend his Canadian squash racquets championship at a tournament at Toronto's Granite Club Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Philadelphia Athletics announced yesterday Frank Skaff of Baltimore will manage their international league farm team in Ottawa this year. The American League club recently bought the Ottawa franchise from New York Giants, which operated here last year for the first time. Ottawa finished seventh.

The Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission, in a brief statement full of loopholes and contradictions, said yesterday it would not recognize a contract in which heavyweight champion Jersey Joe Walcott guaranteed a return bout with Ezzard Charles.

Commissioner John (Ox) Dagros, summed it up that Walcott morally should fulfill his half of the written bargain but noted that the commission would put no pressure to make him do it.

Walcott won the title from Charles in a fight at Pittsburgh last July. He signed the pact for a return bout in June, 1951.

Organized baseball hauls out its heavy legal guns today to combat a recent government ruling which puts a new squeeze on diamond salaries. Louis F. Carroll and Ben Fiery, attorneys for the National and American Leagues respectively, head a battery of sports figures to appear at a special hearing called by the salary stabilization board. The board on Jan. 15 issued a ruling which put a limit on overall club budgets rather than individual salaries.

The Ontario badminton championships will be held at the Stratford Badminton Club Feb. 14 to 17, club officials announced yesterday.

An all-Galt final today for the Zone 8 finals of the Ontario curling championship was assured last night when rinks shipped by Normie Hines and F. Perry won their semi-final games at Kitchener. The Himes foursome defeated Ray Coad's Woodstock quartet 11-6. The Perry rink came through 10-7 over Sid Smithers' Galt group.

Avery Brundage, chairman of the United States Olympic committee, said Tuesday the Russians has not asked for any special privileges in the Summer Olympics in Helsinki. Brundage told the weekly meeting of the New York Track Writers Association before leaving for Oslo for the winter games that the Russians "have read the rules and accept them."

"We either could take them at their word or not," Brundage said. "They said they had ceased to give cash prizes to their athletes and do not intend to continue their training camps."

A United States Congressional Committee decided yesterday to try to have the Olympic medals of Jim Thrope, the great Indian athlete, restored to him. Thorpe won the medals in Olympic games at Sweden in 1912, but they were taken from him when it as learned he had played baseball for money.

American League Will Play 216 Night Games

Chicago, Feb. 6—(AP) — The American League this year will play its greatest number of night games, 216, it was disclosed today with the release of the circuit's 1952 schedule.

The 154-game season opens April 15 and closes Sept. 28.

The nocturnal program offers 19 more games than last year's 197-tilt Arclight card and tops the previous high of 204 night games in 1950 by 12.

This increase developed under a one-year rule permitting unlimited night play. However, four clubs—Detroit, Cleveland, New York and Boston—kept their after-dark total the same, and Chicago added only one game for 20.

St. Louis Browns, operating their first full season under Bill Veeck, have the biggest night game increase, 11, from 30 to 41. Washington Senators, greatest exponent of night play, upped last year's total only by two, to 46, Philadelphia Athletics will play 38, five more than last year.

Jimmy Carter Decisions McFater In 'One of Best Fights in Years'

By CRAIG SWAYZE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Feb. 6 (CP)—A 20-year-old Canadian lad who wasn't rated a chance at going more than five rounds with lightweight boxing champion James Carter of New York, last night stuck around for nine in one of the best fights seen in these parts for years.

Even though he dropped a unanimous decision in the nine-round non-title clash, Toronto's Allan McFater put up a show that veteran fight followers termed his best ever. A crowd of 8,666 paid $17,334.

Carter beat McFater to the punch over most of the route, but the Canadian was never on the run. Managed by Willie Ketchum, the Negro title-holder directed his attack at the Toronto fighter's mid-section, keeping him off balance with jabbing lefts and a lightwing-like right cross.

Boo Decision

The Canadian Press score card gave Carter six rounds, McFater two and one even. There were no knockdowns in the nine rounds, a compromise distance between eight and 10.

The galleries booed the decision. They had roared time and again throughout the bout when McFater laid into Carter, but most of the punches glanced off the champion.

McFater weighed 141, five pounds more than the champion who let him carry the first two rounds. The third was all even as the Toronto boy tired, Carter taking command for the remaining six.

Best exchange of the fight came midway through the seventh when both fighters stood toe to toe trading lefts and rights. McFater broke out with his favorite right hook near the end of flurry and Carter quickly clinched.

The only damage was suffered by the winner. McFater opened a cut over the titlist's left eye and raised a mouse under it.

After the fight, Carter described McFater as a "tough, very strong young fellow. He took a lot of punches and sure hit with that right of his. I think with a little more experience he'll go far. He caught me with a couple good ones."

Sacos Retain Major B Lead

Sacos maintained their top-slot standing in the Major "B" Bowling League at Recreation Alleys last night defeating the "Champs" by a 7-0 count. Sacos are out in front with three points over the "Inkspots."

The printers also won their tilt with the Comebacks by a 5-2 count while Reid's Dairy edged the Opticals 4-3.

Micky Moreau rolled high triple with 741 with J. Semark scoring the high single of 318 for a 740 triple. Cec Hardwick came through with a 735. Other scores were R. Kavaner, 659; C. Martin, 671; D. Batchelor, 666, H. Calnan, 663.

The scores:-Sacos (7) 3041, Champs (0) 2757, Reid's (4) 2706, Opticals, (3) 2715, Inkspots (5) 3462, Comebacks (2) 2855.

SECRET SESSION OPENS

London, Feb. 5 — (AP) — The executive committee of the World Council of Churches opened a 5-day secret session at Lambeth Palace last night. About 30 international leaders will survey women's work in the churches and complete plans for a central committee session in Lucknow, India.

Dempsey 'Movies' With Bob Hope

Hollywood, Feb. 6—(AP)—Twenty guests were originally invited but by the time the luncheon got under way at the studio, 50 or 60 had crowded into the narrow dining hall to welcome a real old timer back to the movies.

The veteran was Jack Dempsey, who recalled with something of a grimace that he starred in a serial in Hollywood more than 30 years ago. He seemed more concerned about the serial, not the era.

He was famous then, of course, as the new heavyweight champion of the world, a point that was quite important with his movie debut. And as the former champ, it is no less significant today.

Many of the luncheon guests were sports writers, which was more than appropriate, as Dempsey's "co-star," Bob Hope, pointed out.

Dempsey is playing a now familiar role in Hope's latest picture something about military policemen, Marilyn Maxwell and no telling what else. Dempsey is a fight referee.

Province Gives Film Program Good Reception

"Curtain at 8.30" that newly-devised method of bringing off-beat movies to smaller communities seems to be more successful than its promoters hoped for, says Jack Karr, in the Toronto Daily Star. Twenty-nine theatres in as many communities all across the country are now participating in the scheme and all but three have reported attendance figures ranging from good to capacity.

The new venture in motion picture entertainment was inaugurated here two weeks ago at the Capitol Theatre. A capacity house greeted the showing of the first picture "Kon-Tiki," and the idea seems to have caught on with the city's motion-picture public. It is a leisurely and comfortable way of "going to the movies" since patrons can secure their seats in advance and be assured of a first-run high class film.

Special Appeal

"Curtain at 8.30" was not designed primarily to cater to those of the mink and sable class. True there are some people who think it is the thing to do but there is an overwhelming large number of patrons who come because they can see high-class films which ordinarily would not be shown here.

Manager Tommy Mascaro has several top-flight pictures lined up for the winter series of "Curtain at 8.30." Included are "Bitter Rice" which is presented here on Thursday night; "The Ghosts of Berkely Square"; "Henry V"; "The Guinea Pig"; "The Dancing Years"; "Last Holiday"; 'Devil and the Flesh" and "Mister Drake's Duck".

Speaking of "Bitter Rice" which features the sensational young Italian actress Silvana Mangano, when a theatre in Noranda offered its patrons one showing and opened its box office a week in advance, people lined up in forty-below weather and in one afternoon the house was sold out.

"Bitter Rice" brings out to the full the outstanding acting ability of Miss Mangano. Filmed in the rice fields of a Mediterranean country, the picture portrays the lifes and loves of those women who toil next to earth.

British Comedian Presents Revue To Aid Project

When show people put on a stage presentation for one of their own pet charitable projects, theatre-goers may be assured that they are going to witness the tops in theatrical entertainment; and this will be evident when Tommy Trinder, Britain's No. 1 comedian, brings over his "Royal Command Music Hall Varieties", a London revue of outstanding acts, that will be presented at the Kingston Community Centre on Feb. 23.

The Tommy Trinder cross-country tour of Canada is in aid of "Variety Village", the vocational training school for handicapped children. The only one of its kind in the world, this unique training centre has become internationally famous since its founding three years ago. Operated under the direction of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, this splendid residential school was founded and financed by the Variety Club of Toronto, its Dominion - wide membership drawn from every branch of the amusement industry, including films, the stage, radio, vaudeville, night clubs, the concert fields, all phases of indoor and outdoor sports.

When the Canadian club was founded, the approximately 200 members pledged themselves to build and finance "Variety Village." They then raised over $250,000 and got the building project underway. Architects gave their services without fee in their designing of the buildings; consulting engineers also contributed their services free; and the contracting firm handled the construction on an actual cost basis.

The objective of "Variety Village" is to provide technical education, plus academic training, for young lads who, because of physical disability, cannot participate in conventional educational schooling; and then to provide them with jobs so that these 'teenegers can fend their own way in the world. Enrollment pays no regard to race, creed or color. Future expansion plans provide for the care and training of physically handicapped girls.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 6—(AP)—This week the stand-in for Michael Rennie, English actor, fell ill and the studio scurried around for a substitute.

"No hurry," assured Rennie. "I'm an old hand at standing in."

He wasn't kidding. Without poring through the records, I would hazard a guess that he is the only stand-in to achieve starring status.

Rennie, who has done a number of leading roles for 20th-Fox, is currently playing Jean Valjean in the remake of "Les Miserables". Playing opposite him is Sylvia Sidney. When she reported to work, Rennie said to her "You don't remember me, do you?" She allowed that she didn't.

"I was the stand-in for John Loder in a picture called 'Sabotage' that you and he made in England back in the 30s," he said.

Miss Sidney still didn't remember, but the memory is a vivid one for Rennie. That was his first movie job.

The Hard Way

"I wanted to be a film actor," he recalled. "I figured the only way to be one would be to watch how it was done. I thought of being an extra, but that would have meant that I would only work a day or so in every picture. If I were a stand-in, I could watch the whole picture being made."

So Rennie took the stand-in job, which consists of standing under the lights until everything is ready and the star steps into the set. "It was physically exhausting to be standing for so long," he remembered. "But it wasn't mentally exhausting, because I had much to watch and learn."

Glen Roys Defeat Picton 71-33; Enter Basketball Loop Playoffs

Bill Spafford's Glen Roys basketball squad will enter the Bay of Quinte Basketball League playoffs on Saturday night against the Peterborough Marines by virtue of their 71-33 victory over the Picton entry here last night.

The first game of the best-of-three series will be played in Peterborough Saturday night with the second likely here next Tuesday. The third game, if necessary, will be played in Peterborough.

The Marines grabbed figurative first place honors by the successful calling of a coin following the game last night. The "flip" was called via phone and the Marines' luck was good.

Best of Seasons

The Glens had little trouble in disposing of the Picton quintet when they flashed the best court display of the season. Every member of the team accounted for a field goal with diminutive Doug Soules leading the parade with 15 points.

The Glens piled up a 38-16 lead in the first half and went on to score 33 in the second with a 17-point return from the losers.

Other scorers for the Glens were. Batchelor, 11; Muirhead, 10; Garrow and Watson, 8 each; Kane 7 and Hayman 6. Glens hit for 9 of 18 free throws with Picton sinking the ball 11 out of 26 tries.

Cornelius led the Marines with 13 points and was the best player the visitors fielded.

Coach Spafford expects to have Kip Summers back in action for the all - important first - playoff game on Saturday night. Summers injured a leg during a game a short time ago.

Belleville: Watson 8, Dudley 2, Muirhead 10, Hayman 6, Batchelor 11, Kane 7, Ketcheson 4, Garrow 8, Soules 15—71.

Picton — R. Colliver 4, Hepburn 2, Chalmers 3, Cornelius 13, B. Colliver 2, Manlow 4, Bell, Thompson, Cole 5—33.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Thursday February 7

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—May be no real evidence of reward for your day's effort but don't ever be pessimistic. Take the view that things are going to grow better with your help, and they will.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Be more optimistic. As for Aries, think in terms of success and you can overcome obstacles quickly. You generally use your intelligence well. But you can do much more with it.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Trouble today, if any, may be crowding too much into your working period. An ounce of wise prevention can avoid many ills. Relax after due activities; get proper rest for tomorrow.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—You should be riding high by noon on your way to fruitful day's ending. Of course much depends on how you try, the course you pursue, and how you apply advantages.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—You can move forward appreciably in your special endeavors. Favorable rays for essential tries. Don't hurry things and do not brush aside well-meant advice.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Opportunities to invest, to make profits. Look over carefully, don't rush, but don't be over-cautious either, or you may miss out on worth-while gains. Personal affairs hold new benefits.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Some instances that can be used to fresh advantage; be wide-awake. Direct endeavors so that you may fulfill important obligations first and well. Romance asks good balance.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Likely to overenthuse today, to get involved in affairs that later you will wish you hadn't. And don't take on more than physically possible to do properly. Be sensible!

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Stand on your two feet in matters that should be your blame or responsibility. Know what you should take and what you should not. Day can be unpleasant if not rightly handled.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—May be right now to keep some ideas to yourself. Desist from temptations to fall back on loved ones or others in important matters. A little more "get-up" on your part can double results.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Check outlook before starting on daily chores. May need more research to be fully informed.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Indications here may be reversal of some trends. Keep close watch on vital matters. Give personal affairs sufficient thought.

YOU BORN TODAY: Generally quiet disposition patient, but can be persistent, stubborn at times. Strike a happy medium, go along with ease. Keep your thoughts, activities on high level always. You deal in facts rather than theories and when you really concentrate can attain top goals. Kindness can sway you; do not be fooled by wrong influences. Many inventors, artists, writers, musicians in this sign. Avoid procrastination, indecision.

Birthdate: Sir Thomas More, Eng. statesman, philospher; Millard Fillmore, 13th U.S. Pres.; Chas. Dickens, Eng. novelist; Jos. V. Connolly, great newspaperman.

I've been fleeced of my furs!

Oh, tragic moment!

Oh, woeful day, when some foxy crook makes off with your fine fur coat.

If this thought doesn't worry you it ought to.

But end all such worry at once with our fur insurance, which will protect you in case of loss by fire, theft, hold-up, damage by water — and certain other risks — while worn — in storage — at home or elsewhere.

Furs are supposed to add to your comfort, but there is no such thing as complete fur comfort without complete fur insurance coverage.

Why We Say--

CHEWING GUM

People have been chewing gum for a few centuries. But the principal chewing gums before the discovery of America were paraffin and resin. A monk in Mexico first borrowed chicle gum, which we now use, from the Aztecs. He noticed that the women had long uniform teeth and attributed it to the fact that they chewed chicle from trees which grew nearby.

WILL CONTINUE FIGHT

Visits Canadians

During the Second World War, none of the royal family spared themselves. While Canadian troops were stationed in England, they were visited many times by Their Majesties. Here in this United Kingdom Information Office photo, His Majesty The King inspects members of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, "Somewhere in England." — (CP Photo.)

East Enders Applaud Easy Colloquialism

Changes wrought by two world wars paradoxically drew the British people closer to the Crown but farther from the awe and magic and mystery it had inspired in bygone eras. A new, vital and refreshingly human coloring came into the relationship between majesty and people.

The extent of the change was particularly reflected by numerous incidents during World War II. One such incident was the King's display of easy colloquialism during a royal visit to the bombed east end of London in 1941.

Emboldened by the sovereign's friendliness, a hard-bitten workman ventured to ask how Buckingham Palace had fared in the blitz.

"Not a blinking window left in the place," the King replied.

East Enders cheered that.

Southpaw at Tennis, Otherwise Righthander

A right-hander in everything else, King George was a southpaw on the tennis courts. The explanation, those who knew him longest said, was simply that he found it easier to play tennis that way.

Some people thought the King was ambidextrous, but actually he was not. In other sports—such as golf, shooting and polo in his younger days — he was right-handed. He wrote with his right hand, too.

"Consequently," one of the elder courtiers said, "it was always a bit of a mystery to the King himself that he was able to switch so adeptly to the left hand stroke in tennis. He was, I may say, not without a certain pride in the facility, especially as he had some little reputation as a tennis player."

RULED AS

Years later, when they met again, they eagerly summoned remembrance of their childhood fun, and it made a renewal of their association easy. It was in 1919 in the ballroom of a big town house at the peak of the London social season, that they saw each other after a long interlude.

True Love Match

The court circular of January 15, 1923, confirmed the swiftly travelling rumors of a ripening romance. It stated:

"It is with the greatest pleasure that the King and Queen announce the betrothal of their beloved son, the Duke of York, to the Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, to which union the King has gladly given his consent."

Soon details of the courtship became public knowledge. The Duke had won his bride in the course of a Sunday afternoon stroll at the Hertfordshire seat of the Strathmores. It was wintertime but the young girl was fascinated by the contours and vistas of a wood which in childhood she had always believed to be enchanted. It was there they made their pledge.

Since a brother of Charles II married Lady Anne Hyde, daughter of the Earl of Clarendon in the 17th century, no prince in direct succession to the throne had been betrothed to a commoner.

Britain and the Empire exulted in the Duke's engagement to Lady Elizabeth. They considered it a striking example of a new democratic spirit. The marriage, it was said, would draw the people closer to the monarchy. Everywhere people seemed to sense that it was a true love match.

Wedding Brilliant Event

The wedding in Westminster Abbey, April 26th., 1923, was a brilliant affair, attended by kings and queens, princes and princesses, ambassadors and special envoys, and marked by showers of gifts from the world over. Edward, then Prince of Wales, was best man. It was the first large scale, semi-state occasion since the 1918 armistice, and the land was more than ready for it.

The newlyweds set up housekeeping in a grimy London mansion in Piccadilly at Hyde Park corner, only a short distance from Buckingham Palace. Princess Elizabeth was born to them April 21, 1926, and Margaret Rose, August 21, 1930.

For nearly 15 years the Duke and Duchess of York lived their quiet family life. It was only natural that Prince Albert, the Duke of York, was kept in the background in order that the full glare of the spotlight might fall upon the insouciant, much sought after elder brother. And then relative privacy suited the Duke—"Bertie" to his intimates—perfectly.

Edward's fateful "irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for myself and my descendants" changed all that.

Student of Government

King George was a consistent and serious student of the science of government. At Trinity College, Cambridge, he took a special course in history, economics and civics, preparing himself for his part in public life.

Earlier he had attended the naval training school at Osborne, Isle of Wight, and then Dartmouth, which corresponds to the U.S. Naval Academy.

The well-being of young people evoked great sympathy from both himself and the Queen.

"Take care of the children," George told a New Zealand audience before he was King, "and the country will take care of itself."

On the various royal tours the King and Queen made it a special point to watch children's pageants and other demonstrations, to inspect their school handiwork, to observe them in as many activities as possible.

Meanwhile, George did not neglect the lighter accomplishments. He was a good dancer. He was no mean raconteur. He liked the movies.

Liked Outdoor Sports

He excelled as a man of the outdoors, riding, swimming, shooting, fishing, and playing tennis and golf. He played tennis left-handed and was good enough to compete at Wimbledon. He was almost as good a shot as his father George V, who was one of the best in England. In his younger days he had a fling at polo.

This devotion to life in the open he linked with social welfare by organizing a seaside holiday camp where each year boys from factories and boys from well-to-do families mingled for several weeks. As Duke of York he joined them for a few days annually, sharing the camp life with zest.

The King was fond of the theatre. Some of the most revealing anecdotes—refuting an occasionally heard observation that his sense of humor was sharply limited—are associated with his evenings at the theatre.

On one occasion, before the Second World War, he indulged in a bit of play-acting at the expense of the Duke of Norfolk, first peer of the Realm and Earl Marshal of England. Due to a misunderstanding, the King and Queen arrived early to see a west end London play, but the Duke, who was to sit with them in the royal box, was late. The flustered manager suggested they wait in his private office.

Gave Impersonation

Amused by the situation, the King sat at the managerial desk, remarking to his host, "I suppose this is where you preside in all your glory to cast plays and find new stars." He then cleverly impersonated a manager interviewing talent.

In the midst of the laughter an usher was heard announcing the Duke of Norfolk, eager to apologize. The King looked up solemnly from the desk as the Duke walked in, shook his head and said: "I'm sorry. Our casting arrangements have been completed. There is no part which we can offer you in this show."

The King preferred simple food, plainly cooked, to any frills. He was willing to try anything once. He liked a not too strong whiskey and soda and was partial to cigarettes, although he occasionally smoked a pipe.

He was known for good, conservative tastes in clothes, with a liking for subdued color, especially blues and blue-grays in shirts and ties, and checks.

Exhibition of Bravery

His memory was astonishing. On an industrial inspection trip, he met a man whom he had not seen for 15 years. He promptly addressed the man by name, recalled their last meeting, and remembered the man's family background.

He liked to relax with detective stories and was a student of the works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes.

George was a man of great personal bravery. At an Armistice Day memorial service in Whitehall shortly before World War II, a man, shouting and screaming, broke through a double rank of naval guards and raced toward the King, whose head was bowed for the traditional two minutes silence.

Although the King knew what was going on he did not move a muscle, nor in any way show that his life might be in danger. Police felled the man before he reached the Monarch.

Saw Action in War

Early in World War I the future King served with the grand fleet at Scapa Flow and saw blazing action at Jutland. His post was in a gun turret of the warship Collingwood which valiantly fought off an attack and disabled one of the best of the enemy ships. His conduct earned him mention in dispatches for coolness and courage under fire.

In 1916 he underwent an operation for stomach ulcers and it was late in 1917 before he was fit again. Upon returning to duty he transferred to the Royal Air Force.

On the day set for him to take the final test to qualify as a pilot, a high wind was blowing. He was advised to postpone the trial, but declined. "I can't have it hanging over my head," he explained. He took the test and passed. In October, 1918, he was sent to the western front.

After the armistice he continued in aviation. He reached the ranks of squadron leader, wing commander and group captain.

Dr. Logan's Wife

By Diana Gaines

When Maxwell Cota arrived at his office, he had his secretary phone the Atomic Laboratory to make sure Surinov was there. Then he sent her to check, in person, with Surinov on the matter of disposal of contaminated materials. "For the insurance company," he explained. "They want a detailed report on the method of disposal of linen and all waste material for security reasons." As soon as the secretary had departed on her errand, he departed on his.

The interns' building lobby was deserted as he had hoped. There was no one in the corridor, no one on the stairs. A quick glance down the hall at the first landing revealed only the maid's cart of supplies standing in front of an open door. All clear. Nevertheless, as he climbed the second flight and his breathing grew labored, he felt a surge of resentment against his sister who glibly, in the fastness of her little girl's room, devised heroic quests for him to undertake in the world of men.

In the hall he shifted his weight to the balls of his feet, then tiptoed on to Room 211. He turned the master key in the lock with great care. His whole body was pounding by this time, and after relocking the door from the inside, he leaned against it for a few moments until his breathing deepened to normal.

The room was similar in furnishings to the medium-priced hospital rooms for patients. Cream walls with exposed heating pipes to match, cretonne at the window and on the large chair in a pattern that had the impersonality of cloth bought by the bolt, a floor lamp with a paper shade, a maple highboy, bed, night-table and straight chair.

The closet, small as it was, housed a few suits, a few sport shirts, some white hospital coats, an Indian patterned bathrobe, two pairs of shoes and a pair of dirty sneekers, a guitar, a tennis racket and a typewriter—with room to spare.

A cursory glance at the papers on the desk revealed that Surinov was concerning himself with the splenic tissue of rats. There was a middle pile of sheets, written in long hand, and surrounding it were notes and reprints and tables of dosage. Surinov seemed bent on winning himself another prize.

In the right hand desk drawer, lying on a bed of miscellany, Cota saw a curiously feminine silk mesh and as he picked it up between his thumb and forefinger, it gave off a delicate and expensive perfume. It was a light brown hairnet remarkable only in size. At the limit of its elasticity it no more than covered his hand. Cota dropped the net back, closed the drawer, and pulled out the one below it. Here, on top of a packet of Angels University Hospital envelopes, a certified check caught his attention. It was made out to Jennet Lecky Logan in the amount of $1,200. Cota turned it over—it was endorsed by Jennet Lecky Logan to Peter Surinov.

His lips pursed in soundless whistle. Gus Logan's wife! He remembered her piquant face from sundry cocktail parties and as he pre-empted the memory of her face he realized that he had the answer to the miniature hairnet—Jennet Logan wore her dark blond hair in a knot at the nape of her neck.

He slipped the check into one of the long hospital envelopes, and slid it along his hand into his coat pocket.

He unlocked the door, and walked down the flight of stairs to the room nearest the stalled cart.

"Delfina," he called.

The woman got up from her knees, dried her hands on her apron, bowing "Buenos dias, Senor Cota."

"Delfina, I want you to go up and clean room 211 right now. You can come back here and finish up later. I want you to move all the furniture, some in the doorway—some things out into the hall and give the floor a good going over. Clean it thoroughly. Keep the door blocked and take your time. No one is to come in until I get back."

Delfina's brother had four children. He and his family lived in San Gabriel. Before the war, he worked for Senor Cota in the vineyards. After the war Senor Cota put her brother in the winery where he was boss of many men.

She bobbed her head, flashed a baroque smile.

When Maxwell Cota returned to the dormitory an hour and a half later, the cart of cleaning supplies was standing in the hall near room 211.

Cota bent his weight to the large chair and squeezed through.

Delfina threw the switch on the vacuum and smiled broadly in the sudden quiet.

"Good work, Delfina. Did anyone come around?"

No one is come. I clean with great slowness."

The meeting of the Medical Exexecutive Committee was orderly enough during the opening speeches. Walter Pelletier's speech, delivered last, had not been received as he could have hoped, as his family had received it, but then it was one thing to be obliged to listen, another to want to hear. After it, the discussion period raveled to wrangling

Into the heated argument, Gus Logan, who was perhaps the only composed member of the group, his hands sleeping on his blue gabardine sleeves, his magnified blue eyes gentle as flowers, injected a peacemaker's note.

"Gentlemen," he said in a tone of exemplary quiet, "we are all beginning to repeat ourselves and no one seems to be convincing anyone else. I think we're forgetting that we're not enemies. We're all here for the same purpose—that is to act in the best interests of the hospital. There is really no question here of a difference in politics. We all hate communism. Let's not put each other on trial.

"Peter Surinov is on trial tonight because of the note which he appended to the loyalty oath and we are here solely to interpret and so to estimate the importance of that appendage. Now Mr. Cota and those who agree with him consider this an unpardonable act of bad faith, of insubordination. Dr. Pelletier and those who agree with him feel that it was merely a protest, not against the hospital but against a measure which Surinov felt restricted his liberty as an American."

Some of the men nodded assent, and Logan continued. "Now our loyalty oath, as it was phrased, tested only subversives of the Left. I think all of us will agree that the Ku Klux Klan is organized along fascistic lines. Peter Surinov's postscript, however legally gratuitous, serves to avow that he is also not a subversive of the Right. Viewed in this light, there is no question of disloyalty or insubordination, no damage or disrespect to the hospital and its administrators. I therefore, move that the discussion be closed and I make a further motion that Peter Surinov be permitted to continue his excellent work as a member of the Department of Radiation Therapy with the suggestion that his immediate superior, Dr. Pelletier, have a little talk with the boy and explain to him the co-operation expected of him as an employee of Angels University Hospital."

Dr. Pelletier knew a moment's envy—as one writer feels toward another whose ideas seem fresher than his own—and then admiration topped envy. His clapping was interrupted by the Chief of Staff's pounding gavel. Maxwell Cota jumped to his feet, and his deeply wrinkled face was black as a plum.

"Sophistry! Nothing but sophistry!" Maxwell Cota shrilled. "And your motion is premature. There is still a further point of discussion, Dr. Logan. I suggest that your sympathies with Peter Surinov are deeper than we think!"

"You better say what you mean, Cota," he warned.

"I think you're the one who's going to have to make yourself clear. Dr. Logan. Whether you like being on trial or not, I'm afraid that's where this piece of paper puts you." He threw down the photostatic copy of the check, shouting to those who had taken twisted positions in an attempt to read the paper, "a certified check in the amount of $1,200 signed over by Jennet Lecky Logan to Peter Surinov! Now, Dr. Logan, maybe you will explain what's going on here."

Dr. Logan's head bent to the thick paper, curling at the edges because of hasty removal from developer solution, on which was photographed the front and back sides of the check. When Dr. Logan could tear his eyes from the paper, he said through mask-lips. "I don't believe you, Cota. You're framing me—this is some trick— you made this whole dirty thing up. . ."

"Watch your tongue, sir! You must be able to recognize your own wife's handwriting."

Dr. Logan's hand clutched his left lapel, hung from it until the cloth gave way with a small sound He put his free hand up to ward off the faces and bodies that crowded him, whose breaths on his face used up the breath he needed in his lungs. "My wife. . ." Logan choked. "You lie—cheap, dirty lie. . ."

That was when Gus struggled up out of his seat and still pulling at the rag of his lapel, he took small bent-kneed steps out of the room.

Pelletier got up and followed Logan. In the hall, he saw the stricken man's hand reach into his pocket saw him slip the pill into a face contorted and motionless with pain.

There was a bench a yard or two down, the hall, and Pelletier half-carried the man to it, sat him carefully on it.

Second Fall Releases Girl From Paralysis

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 6 (AP)—Pretty Betty Postema, 22, has been using a wheelchair for six years. She appeared to have been hopelessly paralyzed as the result of a fall.

But now, because of a second fall, she is able to walk again.

Miss Postema first fell when she was in high school. She became paralyzed from the waist down, but completed her education and became a secretary at Calvin College.

Last April she pitched from her wheelchair on the steps of a college building and fell on her spine.

"Life just seemed to flow into my legs," she said. "The more I exercised the stronger they got."

Surgeons expressed belief the second tumble may have freed adhesions.

QUEEN ELIZABETH RETURNS TO ENGLISH SOIL

Canada Marks Accession Of Elizabeth II

21-Gun Salute Will be Fired And Flags Raised

On Friday Flags Will Again Be Lowered to Half-Staff

Ottawa, Feb. 7 — (CP) — The raising of the Canadian ensign atop Canada's parliament buildings and the firing of a 21-gun salute today marked the accession of Elizabeth to the throne as Queen of Canada.

The flag, at half-staff since the death of the King early yesterday, was lifted to full staff sharp at noon (EST) as the first blast of the royal salute began heralding the accession of the new queen.

The ceremony was repeated across the land, as flags were raised and guns thundered the news.

Only Few at Ceremony

Only a few people came to watch the ceremony of the guns firing with their barrels pointing over the Ottawa River towards Quebec Province.

No members of the Cabinet were among the small crowd of photographers, policemen and a few others who watched the guns fire a round every 10 seconds.

This is Accession Day in Canada, which yesterday was the first Commonwealth country to proclaim Elizabeth as Queen Elizabeth II. The cabinet took action a few hours after the King died.

Friday the flags will go to half-staff again and will remain there until the day of the King's funeral. That day, to be decided on by Queen Elizabeth on her arrival in London from her cancelled tour, will be a national day of mourning in Canada and artillery will fire 56 rounds—one a minute—for each year of the King's life. Canada will also observe the same period of official mourning proclaimed for Britain, probably six months.

Close Canadian Ties

Elizabeth comes to the throne with closer Canadian ties than any other monarch before her. They were born of the 36-day cross-country tour just three months ago when she and her consort, Philip, saw and were acclaimed by millions of Canadians and were seen by them. It gave Elizabeth an understanding of Canada's loyalty to the throne and a concept of Canada and its future.

May Not Crown Elizabeth Until Late Autumn

London, Feb. 7 (CP) —Arrangements for the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II—perhaps the most complicated ritual in all the pageantry of state—started even before the King's death.

But the ceremonial, involving lengthy planning and many officials, is not expected to take place before late autumn this year or early next spring.

The coronation of the late King, in May, 1937, was so elaborate suggestions were heard that the ceremonial might be curtailed, particularly for the benefit of those taking part.

Details of organization are drafted at the College of Arms in London's financial district. Heading the staff is the Garter King of Arms, Sir George Bellew, an expert in heraldry since his appointment as pursuivant 28 years ago. The arrangements are submitted to Buckingham Palace after approval by the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl Marshal.

At the crowning ceremony, the Duke of Edinburgh will be first to kneel before the Queen, his wife, and take the oath of allegiance.

Valet First to Break News of King's Death

By R. B. MacLURKIN

Sandringham, England, Feb. 7. (Reuters)—King George VI was discovered dead in his bed yesterday morning by his valet, John MacDonald, bringing his morning cup of tea.

Court officials were called from their beds and news was broken to the Queen. She went immediately to his bedside.

She did not weep, according to local reports. Though her face was racked with misery, she kept control of her emotions.

She kissed the forehead of the dead King.

Then, straightening up, she said: "We must tell Elizabeth. We must tell. . ." she hesitated, then added: "We must tell. . .the Queen."

Tonight inside the red brick house, Elizabeth, now Queen Mother, and her daughter, Princess Margaret mourned.

Villagers here kept their sadness pent up inside Most of the older ones knew King George VI when he was a shy child who used to come here on vacation with his father, King George V.

One old villager said the King had known for months past that he was under sentence of death.

"People wondered why he was living such a strenuous life after his lung operation," he said. "It seemed wrong on the surface that he should take risks by coming here and spending his days on tiring shooting trips.

"But many of us guessed why. He knew he had not much longer to live and wanted to spend the short time left to him living the open-air life he enjoyed most."

ESCAPEE CAPTURED

Guelph, Feb. 7 (CP) —George Pentiluc, 19, was recaptured today an hour after he escaped from the Ontario reformatory. Pentiluc was sentenced in Toronto for car theft.

Proclaiming of Elizabeth As Queen To Follow Tradition 1,000 Years Old

London, Feb. 7—(Reuters)—The proclamation of Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the throne tomorrow morning will follow a 1,000-year-old tradition of pomp and splendor.

Every town will have its own colorful ceremony but in London the ceremonial, in language spoken at the time of the crusades and under the eyes of officials whose titles date back to the beginning of heraldry, will be on a grander scale.

The main ceremony will be in the quadrangle of the Palace of St. James's, which dates back to the Norman Conquest in the 11th century and was rebuilt as a palace by King Henry VIII just more than 400 years ago.

There, just off London's busy Piccadilly the Royal Horse Guards in the scarlet and plumes of full dress uniforms will ride into the quadrangle, troops will fill the courtyard and the royal trumpeters, in gold-embroidered coats, will front the quadrangle from a balcony.

Wear Gay Clothes

Gathered with them will be the highest heraldic officials arranged in costumes of gold, cerise, saffron, crimson, white and blue.

At the head of the colorful group on the crimson-draped balcony will be the hereditary Earl Marshal of England the Duke of Norfolk, premier duke and head of the College of Heraldry, in black cocked hat with ermine crest. He alone is responsible for the details of all royal ceremonial in Britain.

By his side will stand the Garter King at Arms one of the three heraldic officials for England who bear the title dressed in a velvet tabard embroidered in gold thread, wearing a crimson cloak and holding in his white-gloved hands the parchment bearing the terms of the proclamation.

Will Read Proclamation

The black-draped drums of the band in the courtyard below will rumble as the sticks come to life in the hands of the great-coated guards drummers and then silence again. The Garter King at Arms will unfold the proclamation: "Whereas it has pleased Almighty God to call to His mercy our late Sovereign. . ."

The proclamation will come to an end. . . "Beseeching God by whom king and queens do reign to bless the Royal Princess Elizabeth the Second with long happy years to reign over us."

The band below will crash out the opening bars of the National Anthem.

The procession will reform and horse-drawn carriages rattle off to distant Charing Cross towards the city of London. There the Lancaster Herald will read the proclamation to the gathering crowd. Then on again along the Strand to Temple Bar where a red silken cord will bar progress over the city boundary into the actual territory of the City of London.

500 ARRESTED IN THREE DAYS AT ISMAILIA

Anti-Terrorist Drive Believed To Be Cause

Ismailia, Egypt, Feb. 7 (Reuters) —More than 500 arrests have been made in this explosive trouble spot in the last three days in an Egyptian police anti-terrorist campaign aimed at paving the way for negotiation of the Anglo-Egyptian crisis, it was announced today.

Official Egyptian sources disclosed that the drive began on orders from the Ministry of Interior in Cairo.

Latest swoop was yesterday when 150 arrests were made at Zagazig, long regarded as headquarters of Egyptian terrorists in the Delta region.

Two days ago, 39 suspects were rounded up in Ismailia, and police at Port Said were reported to be holding an estimated 200.

In London, the British government published the text of a note handed over to Egypt yesterday calling for drastic punishment of all involved in the "brutal and barbarous" death of British subjects during the Jan. 26 Cairo riots.

Britain charged that "little or nothing was done by Egyptian police to prevent these outrages," which brought about the deaths of 26 Britons, including the Canadian trade commissioner, J. MacLeod Boyer, a native of Victoria, N.B.

The note said that the British Turf Club was surrounded by "a savage mob under organized leadership which broke into the premises, set them on fire and barbarously murdered those of the occupants who were unable to escape."

Egypt Formally Charged

London (AP) —Britain today formally charged Egypt with responsibility for last month's Cairo rioting. A diplomatic note indicated it will claim compensation for the loss of British lives and property.

The note, handed over in Cairo today, expressed Britain's "strongest condemnation" of the barbarous and brutal manner" in which 26 British subjects were killed and others injured.

The note said little or nothing was done by Egyptian police to prevent the "shameful and vile events" of Jan. 26 and that the circumstances "strongly indicate" official connivance.

With the sudden death of her father, Elizabeth becomes the seventh queen of the British Commonwealth of Nations. She is the first of British queens to be deliberately trained for the position and in one of her first speeches to the Commonwealth she said: "My whole life, whether it be long or short, shall be devoted to your service - - - but I shall not have strength to carry out this resolution alone unless you join in it with me as I now invite you to do. God help me to make good my vow."—Central Press Canadian

Countries of Commonwealth Proclaim Elizabeth as Queen in Special Ceremonies

London, Feb. 7 (Reuters) — With the formal proclamation that she is Queen, Elizabeth II will officially become sovereign of some 580,000,000 subjects, more than one-quarter of the world's population.

During the reign of King George VI Britain loosened her hold on her far-flung empire. But the sun still never sets on subjects of the British Crown.

Many lands are independent but remain members of the Commonwealth—free, yet linked together by tradition and common loyalty.

Canada, a Dominion whose last legal tie to Britain was severed, still recognizes the throne and was the first to proclaim Elizabeth Queen. The proclamation was issued yesterday.

At noon today Elizabeth's accession will be marked in Canada with the firing of a 21-gun salute in Ottawa, in all provincial capitals and in Vancouver. Flags, at half-staff across the country in mourning for the King, will go full-staff temporarily for the salute.

In New Zealand, the governor-general will read the proclamation of Queen Elizabeth from the steps of Parliament House Feb. 11. Ceremonies will be repeated by mayors and local authorities throughout the Dominion.

In New Delhi a 21-gun salute will be fired tomorrow in honor of the formal proclamation. Flags will fly from the mast head tomorrow until sunset, then resume half-staff position during 11 days of state mourning.

The South African government today proclaimed Elizabeth "Sovereign in and over the Union of South Africa."

Queen Elizabeth will also be proclaimed tomorrow in the Gold Coast, which has the first native South Africa."

Australia will issue stamps bearing a portrait of the new Sovereign in about six months. The special issue of stamps prepared for the royal tour of Australia has been cancelled.

Prime Minister Robert Menzies announced he received a telegram from the new Queen saying: "Owing to the sudden death of my father I have had to return home immediately. I regret that for the present my Australian visit will have to be postponed."

She sent a similar message to Ceylon announcing the postponement of her Commonwealth tour. The message was signed "Elizabeth R." (Regina).

Missing Plane Found in Man.

Winnipeg, Feb. 7 — (CP) — A civilian plane, missing five days in northern Manitoba, was found today and its two occupants were picked up unharmed. They were marooned when the plane broke a ski.

The aircraft, owned by Riverton Airways of Riverton, Man., was sighted by another company plane which landed on the ice nearby.

The Riverton plane picked up Pilot R. B. Shinny of Winnipeg and his passenger, A. Nelson, also of Winnipeg.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Feb. 7 (CP)—Synopsis Light snow falling in northwestern Ontario will slowly move across northern and central regions of the province today. Skies will be generally cloudy throughout southern regions and no appreciable change in temperatures is expected.

Sunny skies and lower temperature are in store for northern sections Friday while persistent clouds will cover the southern parts throughout the day and temperatures will remain in the low 30s.

DEPOSITS INCREASE

Ottawa, Feb. 7 (CP) —Dominion government deposits increased $9,448,000 to $109,542,000 during the week ended Feb. 6, the Bank of Canada reported today in its weekly financial statement.

Argument Arises As to the Number Of Queens Who Have Ruled England

London, Feb. 7 (AP)—How many queens have reigned over England since the Norman conquest? Just pick any number from six to eight and join in the argument. . . .

Everybody agrees there have been six, at least: the first Elizabeth; her half-sister Mary; Mary, the daughter of James II who came to the throne with her husband as William and Mary and then reigned in her own right for several years after his death; Mary's sister Anne, Victoria and the new Elizabeth II.

The fight comes over Matilda, daughter of Henry I and Lady Jane Grey, a cousin of the first Elizabeth, who was convicted of treason for allowing herself to be called queen and was beheaded in the tower of London.

Some authorities list both these women as queen, others just one of them, and some say neither can actually be given the title because they were not recognized by the whole country.

Henry died in 1135 after having named Matilda as his successor. But her cousin Stephen got himself crowned instead. Matilda rallied her supporters and the resulting civil war ravaged the country for eight years.

At one stage Matilda captured and reigned as "Lady of the English." But the tide turned in favor of Stephen and Matilda finally gave up the fight on Stephen's promise that her son, rather than his own should succeed to the throne.

Pathetic Lady Jane Grey was only 17-year-old when she was executed, an unambitious victim of the religious and dynastic politics of her day.

She was actually proclaimed Queen on July 10, 1533, following the death of Edward VI, young son of Henry VIII. Edward was persuaded to declare her his heir by a group of largely Protestant nobles who feared the accession of the king's Roman Catholic sister Mary.

But their plans fell through. Mary fled into the countryside and raised an army. Only nine days after poor Lady Jane was proclaimed queen she was forced to give up her crown.

She and her husband, Lord Guilford Dudley, were beheaded Feb. 12, 1554.

Churchill Heads Official Party At London Airport

The King's Funeral May Take Place February 18

London, Feb. 7 — (CP) — Elizabeth II today set foot on English soil for the first time as Britain's queen.

The new ruler, summoned from a round-the-world tour of the Commonwealth countries by the death of her father, touched down at London airport from Africa at 4:19 p.m. (11:19 a.m. EST.)

She and the Duke of Edinburgh arrived only a few hours after batteries at Hyde Park and the Tower of London boomed out a 56-gun salute over the solemn capital.

The salute was echoed by ships of the fleet in home and foreign water and military and naval garrisons throughout the United Kingdom. It tolled one round for every year of the late King's life.

4,000-Mile Flight

The four-engined plane carrying the 25-year-old Queen set down after a 4,000-mile flight from Nairobi, Kenya Colony. Prime Minister Churchill headed the official delegation which welcomed the new ruler.

The airport welcome, held beneath grey skies that reflected Britain's gloom came just one week after Elizabeth had anxiously bade her ailing father goodbye before leaving on her tour.

The royal family was represented by the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, aunt and uncle of the Queen. Another uncle, the Duke of Windsor, sails from New York tonight to attend the funeral.

The scene at the airport was a cheerless one. The airport was ringed by scores of policemen sent to keep the arrival private. Churchill had appealed to the public in advance to stay away from the airport and respect the Queen's grief.

Will Take Oath

Elizabeth stepped out of the plane at 4.33 p. m. It was arranged that she go to Clarence House, her residence as a princess, and then, to Buckingham Palace to take the oath to uphold the constitution before the Privy Council.

Tomorrow she will be formally proclaimed queen—the first woman to rule Britain in 51 years

Six cars stood by at the airport to take the royal party and its luggage to the heart of London. Policemen were posted along the 15-mile route from the airport to central London.

Churchill bowed deeply and shook hands with the Queen as she stepped from the plane, closely followed by her husband.

Elizabeth wore a black hat and coat. The Duke, in a dark overcoat, was hatless.

Five minutes later they drove away toward London.

A thin line of spectators standing outside the airport saw the procession pull away.

Returns Salute

A group of soldiers snapped a salute at the royal car as it passed. The Queen unsmiling waved back.

Before leaving the airport, the Queen said she would like to see the crew of the airliner. They lined up on the concrete apron and in a low voice she thanked them all.

Her face was pale and she was plainly under a strain. But there were no tears.

As the royal car swept through the gates, the Duke solicitously bent forward and arranged the rug around the Queen's feet.

Their car was followed by one carrying the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester.

In the streets outside, men bared their heads and women—some in tears—waved handkerchiefs.

Meanwhile in London, 83-year-old Queen Mary was advised by telephone of the royal party's return.

She immediately drove to Clarence House to comfort her grieving granddaughter.

Cause of Death

It was disclosed today that the King's death early yesterday was due to coronary thrombosis, a thickening of the arteries which caused the blood to clot and stopped the flow of blood to the heart.

The King's funeral may be held next week but more prfobably on Monday Feb. 18th., an authoritative source said today. Queen Elizabeth will decide finally. The King will be buried with other British monarchs at Windsor Castle.

Work has begun on a catafalque, or raised dais, on which the body of the King will lie in state in centuries-old Westminster Hall. More than 1,000,000 Britons will file through the vast, cold stone hall to pay their last respects.

In the dead King's room a dim light glowed all night. The body is expected to be taken in a simple procession to Wolferton station two miles away for its train journey to London.

Night Life at Standstill

The night life of the capital came to a standstill.

Silent crowds, many clothed darkly in mourning, moved silently through the streets. A cluster of persons kept solemn vigil in front of Buckingham Palace all night. The crowd swelled today.

The widowed Queen Mother and Princess Margaret were in deep mourning at Sandringham.

The formal proclamation, written from historic precedents by the Privy Council, will be read first (at 6 a.m. EST) tomorrow by the Garter Knight of Arms, Sir George Bellew.

MILD WEATHER NOT INTERFERING WITH ICE CUTTING

The mild weather of the past few days has not seriously affected ice cutting operations on the bay, it was reported today by a local ice storing company.

Cutting of ice for storage has been under way on the bay for close to two weeks with from 12 to 14 inches of ice being cut. The bay ice doesn't lose much in thickness during brief mild spells during the winter, it was stated.

Mild weather does hold up cutting operations, however. During such times operators hold up work to prevent cutting up roadways leading from the storage to the bay.

W. Bent Honored By 'Y' Choir Boys

Last evening the members of the Y.M.C.A., the boys' choir, several parents and many friends gathered at the "Y" to pay tribute to Walter Bent who is severing his connection with the Y.M.C.A. and who during his short connection with it, has done much to establish himself as a decided asset to the community. Mr. Frank Grandame acted as master of ceremonies for the occasion.

In introducing Mr. Bent, Mr. Grandame paid tribute to fine manner in which Mr. Bent had assisted and helped the youngsters of this city by organizing and eventually welding it into one of the finest musical groups in the district, which choir has appeared in concerts at the Belleville Collegiate, Prince Charles School, the Home for the Aged, the Belleville General Hospital, and last summer, Mr. Bent took his boys to sing at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, where they gave a good account of themselves.

Peewee Baseball, Hockey Leagues

Besides organizing the choir, he also was instrumental in forming the Peewee Baseball League and the Peewee Hockey League.

As Mr. Bent walked to the front of the auditorium to receive from the hands of John Peoples, a member of the choir, the splendid gift and card signed by all the choir members, he was greeted with a tremendous ovation by his boys, which showed in no small degree the high esteem in which he is held.

In expressing his appreciation for this kindness, Mr. Bent said that he had derived a great deal of pleasure in working with the boys of this city. "All of my life I have been working with boys, but never have I seen a finer group than you have here, and adding, "I would like at this time to extend to the parents who have aided so greatly with the choir; to the pianists, Mrs. McBride and Mrs. Large, and also to Mr. and Mrs. Grandame for their kind assistance.

"I hope to be around town for a good many years and if any boys need advice or assistance do not hesitate to come to me for I shall always endeavor to assist you."

Mr. Arthur Keegan also spoke briefly, stating that "this city is indeed fortunate in having a man like Wally Bent around, for it is not often a man will, or can be found to help the youngsters the way that he has done. I, personally, trust that he will remain here for a long time and will continue to give his aid to the kids."

During the course of the evening, movies were shown for the pleasure of the youngsters, and refreshments served.

American Sabre Jet Damages Two Red Planes

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 7 (AP) —An American Sabre jet pilot damaged two communist MIG jets in a three minute battle high over snow-swept North Korea today. The action involved 17 Allied Sabres and 30 red jets.

The Sabre jets were flying escort for Allied fighter bombers which took to the skies as snow clouds cleared during the afternoon.

Light snow fell all along the battle line.

United Nations railing parties hit the reds west of Chorwon, one-time anchor of the communists' Iron Triangle. One unit fought two sharp 25-minute battles in the snow before returning to its own lines. The other reached its objective on high ground without trouble and returned while snow still was falling.

Red infantry made three small early morning probes of U. N. positions in the centre and extreme east of the battle front, but pulled back under fire.

Commonwealth troops, mourning the death of King George VI, fired a 101-gun salute to the dead Monarch and a 21-gun salute to the new Queen.

A blackout on identification of Allied units at the front was lifted to allow correspondents to report that the British division was in the line of battle when news of the King's death was received.

Woodcox received three months on the breaking and entering charge and a concurrent sentence for the theft of canned goods, while Redmond was given three months for the theft of a battery and a concurrent sentence on the theft of canned goods. Both men had previous police records.

Painting Removed From Rotunda To Railway Room

Ottawa, Feb. 7—(CP)—A painting of King George and Queen Elizabeth made during their visit to Canada in 1939, was removed today from main rotunda of the parliament building and placed in the railway committee room.

Speaker Ross Macdonald ordered the painting removed because it was hidden from view by a cover placed over it to protect it from dust caused by stone carvers nearby.

The carvers are expected to be at work in the rotunda for another two years.

Mr. Macdonald had the painting placed in a prominent spot in the large railway committee room on the main floor and it will be shown to visitors to the building.

The painting shows the King and Queen standing under the Peace Tower, accompanied by the late Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Nearly 1,000 Out of Work In City, District

With close to 1,000 persons "on claim" in Belleville and district, the winter's peak in unemployment is thought to have now been reached according to H. H. Reed, manager of the local employment service office.

At the present time there are 989 persons unemployed in Belleville and in that part of the county served from the Belleville office. This is roughly 200 greater than at the corresponding period last year.

"I think the peak has now been reached and soon seasonal work will commence which can be expected to relieve the situation," Mr. Reed said.

At the last of December the number of unemployed stood at 607 and by Jan. 26th this had increased to 885.

A breakdown of the total number of unemployed showed that 293 men and 66 women were on what is termed "postal claims." These are persons living outside a specified distance from the city.

Ordinary claims at the local office total 442 men and 166 women, while persons on short time claims or who have steady jobs but are working less than a full week number 34 men and 5 women.

Laying off of "extra gangs" by the railways has recently helped to swell the total unemployed, but in another few weeks the railways will be rehiring men for seasonal jobs.

The majority of persons out of work fall into the unskilled category, but a few skilled carpenters and other building trade workers are out of jobs.

Mr. Reed said there was a certain amount of construction work in sight and these jobs would require considerable labor as soon as they were commenced following the spring break-up.

Ward Official Slain

Chicago, Feb. 7 — (AP) — A Republican ward official, described as a vigorous foe of the so-called hoodlum element seeking domination of some of the city's wards, was slain in gangland style last night.

Seven shotgun blasts, apparently fired by two gunmen from an automobile, felled Charles Gross, 56, acting Republican committeeman of the 31st ward.

Political spokesmen speculated that the slaying stemmed from a steadily strengthening hoodlum encroachment into the ward's politics. They reported similar gangland invasion in several of the city's 50 wards.

Toronto, Feb. 7—(CP)—Fifteen per cent fewer persons are taking street-cars than before the Toronto Transportation Commission strike which ended 16 days ago.

"We just don't know what has happened to them," T. T. C. officials said today. "We had them before the strike but they're not here now."

Toronto firms said car-pool arrangements instituted during the three-week strike have ended. However, the T. T. C. still is 15 per cent short in its daily passenger count. It used to be 900,000 a day.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 7—(CP)—Western Oils held firmly to mid-session gains today in early afternoon stock market dealings but industrials turned slowly downward.

Trading opened briskly and continued steadily. Industrial dealings were mostly in leading issues but increased Western Oil and Base Metal speculation boosted the turnover for the first three hours to 1,919,000 shares.

Papers, liquors and miscellaneous issues led industrials lower while utilities, banks and retail stores posted a majority of fractional declines. Foods and textiles drew firm support and refining ols countered the trend with a scattered list of gains.

Western Oil gains ranged from pennies to about 25 cents. Ajax Petroleum jumped 18 cents in a turnover of more than 200,000 shares while Canada Southern, Devon-Leduc and Scurry also climbed strongly.

Base Metal leaders were mixed. Consolidated Smelters, Falconbridge and United Keno Hill climbed fractions while International Nickel, Waite Amulet and Noranda dipped.

Senior golds were firm. Secondary issues weakened.

Australians Ponder Uniting Science, Defence

By LOUIS L. LECK
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, (CP) — Australia's 360,000,000 rabbits have won—at some cost—another round in the battle to wipe them out. This time they have beaten what farmers triumphantly dubbed the "wonder disease."

Last year the disease, myxomatosis, spread rapidly over most of southeastern Australia, killing rabbits by the millions. Inexplicably it jumped the 800-mile-wide Simpson Desert to the Northern Territory and killed thousands of rabbits in Australia's far north.

Spread from one rabbit to another by mosquitos and possibly by ticks also, it raced along river-fed areas and, with pools of water from a year of record rains, hit practically every warren in much of Australia's richest farming land.

Farmers Clamor

Farmers clamored for virus-infected rabbits to speed the spread. Everywhere were dead and dying rabbits, with swollen and infected heads, running eyes and drooping bodies.

Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animal officials made a half-hearted appeal against official spreading of the virus, but Australian farmers, whose stations carry three times as many rabbits as sheep, were delighted with its results.

Experts say that if there were no rabbits Australian farms could carry 40,000,000 more sheep, or a third as many again as they do now.

In government agricultural stations in many parts of the country, well-fed rabbits have been inoculated with the virus and wait to be taken out to farms where the disease died down during winter months. To help the carrier mosquitos, each rabbit has a shorn patch along its body. Altogether about 500,000 rabbits have been infected for the current summer's campaign.

Mosquitos Missing

But so far, with near-drought conditions in many parts, the mosquitos have either been missing or haven't done a good job of passing on the virus. Thousands of the infected rabbits have died without infecting others.

Elsewhere research officers have found that some rabbits have resisted the disease. At Swan Hill, Northern Victoria, only two of 20 rabbits infected died. Others seem to get myxomatosis but recovered.

Some scientists now fear that the offspring of those rabbits which recovered will be able to resist the virus. And even if half their offspring die ,a pair of rabbits could multiply to 9,000,000 in three years.

Warns Dr. I. Clunies Ross, chairman of the Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization: "Myxomatosis will never wipe out the rabbit pest. It comes back to hard and continuous work by farmers using orthodox methods."

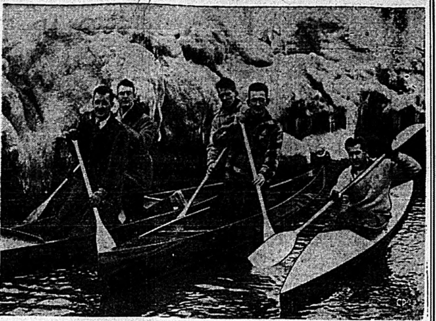
Winter Paddlers



The five Toronto members of the Canadian Olympic canoe team take a practice whirl in new boats which arrived recently from Denmark and Sweden. Despite chilly weather and ice piled high on the breakwater on the city's waterfront, they started training for the summer events to be held at Helsinki. Corruption Rife Among Officials In Japan

Tokyo (Reuters)—Heads are rolling in all departments following the worst year of government corruption and embezzlement in Japanese history.

Under the "house-cleaning" program of Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, fore than 1,000 dishonest tax officials out of a total of 60,000 have been dismissed each year since 1949.

The campaign is believed to have a secondary motive—to dislodge more than 120,000 surplus civil servants.

Most Japanese think the dismissals will not put a stop to government corruption. As in other parts of the east, they say corruption is the age-old privilege of public service and will remain as long as government pay cheques continue to be almost uselessly small.

SERVED HIS COUNTRY WELL

Few of the long list of monarchs who have ruled in Britain since faraway Anglo-Saxon times established a record of self-sacrifice, service and devotion to duty approaching that which King George VI leaves behind him.

Times have changed greatly since the first kings ruled in England. Then, a king had to be a man of action and decision if he were going to retain control over a fierce and turbulent people. Nowadays, a king is a sort of super-servant to those over whom he is nominally ruling. He must spend many hours each day signing legal documents, reading reports, listening to petitions and attending state functions. Like the other members of his family, he is under public scrutiny at practically all times and has little leisure.

George VI was not trained for kingship. He became king upon the abdication of his elder brother, Edward VIII, after a constitutional crisis which shook the foundations of the institution of royalty. Not only did he lack special training for the onerous duties which he was forced to undertake. His health was frail. What was worse for anyone requiring to make frequent public addresses, he stammered.

Before George VI had been king for long, Britain and her allies were involved in the most destructive war in history — a war which brought Britain closer to disaster than the country had been for centuries. It was during the worst days of the war that King George rose to the occasion which history demanded of him. He refused to leave the country, and even to send his two young daughters abroad. He was seen in public places in London and other major centres of population frequently during the blitzkrieg. His unswerving devotion to his duties had more than a little to do with inspiring the British people to stand firm against the worst menace they had faced in their long and stormy history.

In addition to adding to the prestige of the institution of royalty, George VI made several important contributions to history. When he and Queen Elizabeth visited Canada and the United States in 1939, the occasion was the first upon which a reigning British monarch had ever visited either a British overseas dominion or the United States. His marriage itself established a precedent — the queen, the former Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, was the first commoner to become a queen of England.

For several years before his death, it was apparent that George VI was extending himself beyond his strength. He had two severe illnesses, the second of which culminated in surgery. He could have "slowed down" and transferred many of his royal duties to deputies, but he did not choose to do so. His untimely death at the age of fifty-six marks the end of a career during which duty was invariably given the preference over personal inclination.

The young queen, who will reign as Elizabeth II, takes over in a time when international tensions, war threats and economic difficulties present an even darker picture than they did in the days preceding the Second Great War. But the external threat which confronts them has probably served to make the British people, in Great Britain and abroad, more conscious of their need for unity than they have been for generations. But British history, like all history, has a way of repeating itself. The beginning of the first Elizabeth's reign saw England surrounded by powerful enemies. Before its end, the enemies had been overthrown, British control of the seas was established, the first of the British overseas dominions had been founded, and the English language had established itself as a great literary medium.

Perhaps the reign of Elizabeth II will witness a similar upward surge of British prestige and power. Let us all hope it will be so.

CALL FOR VIDOCQ, BERTILLON

A fellow who gave his name as Napoleon Bonaparte and who said he was born at Ajaccio, Corsica, in 1769, has just turned up in France, where he faces prosecution as a war criminal who collaborated with the Germans while they occupied France during the Second Great War.

The prosecuting authorities think that his name is Pierre Constantini, but they are not sure. They recognize that he is a Corsican, but they have refused to accept his claim that he is Napoleon Banaparte, even although he did tell the court that he is prepared to die, "because since Waterloo nothing matters to me any more."

In establishing the identity of a chap who claims to be a revenant, it seems to us that the best thing for the French to do is to summon a revenant of their own. How about invoking the shade of the famed detective Francois Eugene Vidocq, or perhaps that of the equally famed Alphonse Bertillon, father of the Bertillon system?

THROTTLE, WHEEL AND BRAKE

Said the throttle to the brake:
"Oh, what fools of some you make,
Leading them to think you are
All they need to stop the car."
To the throttle said the brake:
"It is you the blame should take,
Were you not pressed down too far,
I could always stop the car."

"Greater care and lower speed,"
Said the wheel, "are what we need.
All yere safer on the street
If the ones who use their feet
When they're driving, chose instead,
Everyone to use his head.
It's the heavy-footed chaps
Who cause many sad mishaps.

"Some no courtesy reveal
When they get ehind the wheel.
Others think they ought to ride
With the throttle opened wide.
And still others life will stake
By depending on the brake.
When if wisely used were we Highways all would safer be."

NEW LAWS

There is a great deal of talk today about evil in high places. Students of modern life assure us that public morality today has reached a new low. They use certain public scandals as evidence of the fact that we are living in a day of moral retrogression.

It should always be remembered in this connection that evil in high places is only a reflection of the evil in other places. The public officials whom we label "rascals" are individuals who have carried their personal immorality into the exercise of public office. Corruption in high places is an indication that the general moral level has declined. Public acts of dishonesty and wickedness are only the dramatic extension of an immoral type of conduct existing among thousands and probably millions of people. We are horrified at the officeholder who takes a bribe, but there is a multitude standing about him for whom right or wrong is always a matter of negligible importance.

Undoubtedly public morals are registering a new low today, but this is true because private morals are bad. Two world wars, plenty of money, more leisure time, plenty of liquor, and a widespread determination to allow nothing to interfere with comfort and pleasure—these are the causes of private immorality, which in turn grows into public immorality.

Fair Directors Meet in Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 7—(CP) — The men and women who are responsible for much of the planning behind Ontario's fall fairs met yesterday to exchange ideas on how to make the rural showpieces more interesting and more useful.

Zip and comfort were discussed by J. A. Garner, director of extension of the Ontario agriculture department. He told the class B fairs section of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies that an impressive opening and closing ceremony would draw crowds to a fair.

Showmanship was important to a fair's success. Comfort of older persons at the fairs should be considered. and seats provided.

New Canadians should be attracted to the fall fairs by special classes and events, and fair boards should do something about extending the hand of friendship.

J. W. (Paddy) Conklin, well-known midway operator from Brantford, told associations that fairs should have more than one big day in case of rain. Fair directors should have some say in the prices charged by midway operators, instead of leaving it entirely to the midway manager.

Jack Hartley from the Woodstock district recommended a bigger plane for young men at fairs. Other speakers backed him up and said there is room for more young judges and officials.

Mrs. W. A. Hume of Campbellford, president of the women's division, suggested that women rate a place on the board of directors.

OUR TOWN

30-CENT POISE

Before I bought a little book called "Your Personality" I was a shy, introspective, awkward clod who could walk into a room full of people and never be noticed, even bare naked and slapping a tambourine.

Now, having vitalized my personality six ways and found the secret of emotional maturity (all available for 30 cents in "Your Personality") I am more of a nonentity than ever.

Oh, I'm not blaming "Your Personality." It's that you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear or, to put it more succinctly, if you ain't got it you ain't gonna get it out of no book.

Poise, for example. There's an "authority" named Miriam Teichner in "Your Personality" who advised me to clip the word "Poise" out of a magazine and past it on my typewriter. Thus with the word constantly in my mind (or as constantly as I'm before my typewriter) the thing would sink in and I would be all teed up to fascinate racy widows and stern executives.

I just want to say it didn't do me any good. I have the world's most poised Smith-Corona, but I am still a St. Bernard among greyhounds.

* * *

On my last trip into town I thought I'd try out some of the suggestions in the little book or, as they put it, I decided I would take my personality out of its pigeonhole. The results were disastrous.

For one thing, people would keep running up to me, inquiring, "Are you okay, Jack?" or "Would you like to lie down a moment?" or "Can I get you some bicarbonate of soda?"

I was in no trouble whatever. It was just that I was following the advice of Miss Helena Sorrell, dramatic coach and test director at a big radio studio, who said that the whole secret of poise was deep breathing.

Full, deep breathing, Miss Sorrell said, would give me vitality and a beautifully modulated voice. Look what it's done for Bette Davis, Rosalind Russell and Ginger Rogers, she said.

It must be that I'm built differently. Soon as I got to breathing deeply I could hardly talk at all, much less in modulated tones, and several times I started to wheeze and purple up alarmingly and, for me, if not for Ginger Rogers, the whole thing was a flop.

* * *

It wasn't much help, either, to know that my gestures were a telltale sign that I was a first-class charlatan.

Got the tip-off on that in the article called "Sizing Up People." Seems that when I passed my hand over my face people knew right away that I was evading the issue under discussion. If I crushed out a cigarette I was concealing some hidden anger. When I put my hand on somebody's arm I was betraying a lack of conviction. When I rubbed my nose I was revealing to the world that I was a dissatisfied man. A raised eyebrow? Suspicion.

Sort of unnerved me, I guess. I got to talking with my face like a wax doll and I walked around with my hands clasped tightly in front of me like a kangaroo and what with that and the deep breathing and the agonies I went through when my nose got itchy—Well, small wonder that I left a trail of uneasy, suspicious people.

Indeed, I heard one of my oldest friends whisper out of the corner of his mouth, "Scott isn't the same since he went to live in the country."

* * *

Not only that, but the chapter on "Handling Yourself in Tough Situations" nearly cost me my job.

It was while I was having my customary interview with the managing editor, a fellow who has always scared the life out of me.

Things started out all right. I was nodding my head vigorously and giving him the look of Open Admiration I save up for my visits. But suddenly I just couldn't go on. I realized I was tittering away like a school girl on her first date.

"You'd better go to the wash room and compose yourself, Scott", the managing editor said icily.

How could I ever explain to him that it was all the fault of one Dr. Harrison M. Karr? "If you are over-impressed with someone's greatness," Dr. Karr had advised "try this: Imagine the pompous, bay-windowed executive who tries to stare you down, wearing a bathing suit."

Well, if you've ever seen my managing editor. . .

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One of my nephews got, as a Christmas gift from a wicked uncle, a pedometer, which is a little gadget not unlike a pocket watch or about the size of a boy scout compass. It works by means of a balanced weight which causes a hand, like the hands of a watch or clock, to move with the jolt of each step taken. A series of smaller recording hands measure the thousands and tens of thousands of steps. And all you have to do is figure the length of your average pace in order to reckon the number of miles you have walked on any given occasion.

This wicked uncle borrowed the pedometer from his nephew: and I must confess I got quite a shock when I counted up the number of miles I walk around my own house and office in the course of a day. Unless the balanced weight in the pedometer cheated every time I went up and down stairs by ticking off several paces for each extra heavy jolt of the stairs, or unless it recorded every jiggle I made in moving in my chair, as I wrote at my typewriter or swivelled this way and that at my desk, it seems I walked four miles inside my house between 7 a.m. and 11:30 p.m. on one day; and seven miles the day I walked over to the corner drug store for some cigarettes, and, before bedtime, went out to the bird feeding station with a cupful of seeds.

It is astonishing the number of steps that a housewife takes in and around the kitchen in the course of preparing a dinner. One mile would be a short meal indeed. It might well be the average girl in an office walks four or five miles a day, from the time she gets off the bus in the morning until she reboards it at night.

Walking is supposed to be a lost art in this motorized age. But it is far from lost, if you count the casual, idle, aimless steps that most of us take in the course of the day around our house and places of work.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FOR LOVE OF BIRDS

Edwin May Teale is authority for the statement that "Thomas Jefferson published the first accurate and extensive list of birds in this country." In 1787 Jefferson listed some 130 species known in the area of Virginia. A few years ago, when I visited Monticello, Jefferson's home, I was intrigued by the many birds about that place. He undoubtedly loved birds, as had many another man, whose joy it had been to learn of them.

In all this world birds seem to be the happiest of creatures—and the bravest as well. In all sorts of weather they will sing and go about their work, glad to be alive, as evidenced by their calls and songs. No study gives one so much joy as that of birds. Year in and year out my friend and neighbor, John Kieran, is seen returning from or going to his favorite haunts about the district in which we both live, just to meet his friends of the feathered sort.

I have a long shelf of books devoted to birds, but two of my favorites are those by John Kieran. One is entitled "Footnotes to Nature," in which he narrates his own beginnings in the study and love of birds and flowers; the other is one that should be placed in every schoolroom in the land. It is called "John Kieran, and an Introduction to Birds." It lists some hundred varieties of birds, and is beautifully illustrated in color. A wonderful book for beginners who wish to make the study of birds a happy hobby.

Then there is that little book every lover of birds should carry about with him—Roger Tory Peterson's "Field Guide to the Birds." It's like a dictionary to the writer, and is sponsored by the National Audubon Society.

One of the lovliest books for a bird enthusiast is that one by the late Viscount Grey of Fallodon, the noted English statesman. I recall how Theodore Roosevelt once cabled Grey to make way for a visit to England that he might be alone with this man for a few days just to study the bird calls. What a treat they both must have had! No matter where we may be or go, our bird friends can be our companions. Their joy becomes our own!

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words Long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

SCIENTIFIC NEGLECT IS GOOD TREATMENT

For divers reasons the let-alone or scientific neglect of ulcers, wounds and other surface lesions or breaks of the skin is the most difficult to carry out.

I learned my first lesson about this the first month I served in the mines—in private practice. A teen age boy sustained a compound fracture of the femur, that is, a broken thigh bone with one fragment projecting through the skin.

I cleansed the wound carefully, applied a sterile (germ-free) dressing and put the limb in Hodgen's suspension. This is a hammock suspended from the ceiling, so arranged that a constant moderate pull is kept on the foot. In the course of several days this steady traction brings the fragments into as nearly perfect apposition as is surgically or mechanically possible.

Being an honest doctor I gave an honest answer when a newspaper reporter asked whether I had "reduced" the fracture. "Not yet," I replied foolishly, "complete reduction will take several days." So the newspaper revealed that I had not reduced the fracture and Dr. So-and-So, who had been called in later, said the patient was doing as well as could be expected etc. You may not believe it, but it took me more than five years to learn that you can't tell patients the truth and hold their patronage.

Under ideal conditions a wound, burn or ulcer will heal just so fast and no antiseptic can make it heal any faster. To ascribe "healing" virtues to medicaments, old or new, is childish.

On the other hand unnecessary handling, dressing or salving retards the normal healing process, and so it is that scientific neglect or let-alone, though difficult to carry out, on account of obstinate obsessions, medical and popular, is best treatment in ordinary circumstances. In exceptional or complicated cases it may be necessary in the judgment of the physician to use special medical or surgical treatment. In the judgment of the physician — however, this is still a free country and if a knucklehead prefers the judgment of some hermit, saireygamp or turbaned character, that is his privilege.

The principle of scientific neglect is most impressive in the care of the patient after skin-grafting: The protective sterile dressing applied upon completion of the operation is left undisturbed for a week or more.

In the care of any wound, burn or ulcer it is well to keep in mind the fact that even the gentlest, most skillful handling for inspection or change of dressing inevitably destroys some of the delicate new tissue cells and consequently retards or sets back the healing process.

These newly formed tissue cells are perhaps more vulnerable to "powerful" antiseptics than most germs. This explains why simple wounds, burns or other minor lesions take so long to heal when maltreated with antiseptic nostrums.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

No Oil on Pimples

Is it all right to apply olive oil on a piece of cotton to your face every night, then wash off with . . . for pimples? (Miss D. M.)

Answer— No. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope and ask in writing—do not send a clipping—for pamphlet on Acne—Blackheads and Pimples.

At Seventy

If you were seventy and had artaritis in ankles and knees what vitamins or minerals would you take to supplement your ordinary diet? (B. E. J.)

Answer—In No. 12 Little Lesson, The Ills Called Rheumatism, for which send 25 and stamped, self-addressed envelope, I tell what I'd do if I had anything that behaved like joint disability not obviously the result of injury.

Pruritus

I want to tell you, after three years delay, that your pruritus pamphlet did more good for my case than two trips to the hospital. I have no more trouble from it, and I follow carefully your personal hygiene instructions. I am certainly grateful and I'd like to send you some. . . (HGD.)

Answer—Thank you, but I don't smoke 'em. However, a 6 inch straight stem pipe would please one of the old geezers on the bowling green—the one who still has teeth. The pamphlet on Pruritus (itching without apparent cause) is available on request if you provide stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Johnny Smallman Wants Job Soon After Wedding

Toronto, Feb. 7—(CP) — The Star said Wednesday that wealthy Johnny Smallman will start looking for a job soon and that after his impending marriage "there'll be none of this playboy stuff."

In a dispatch from London, Ont., the newspaper says the youth who four years ago at the age of 14 inherited most of a $3,000,000 fortune and Mary Kathleen Connell Steers, 20, will be married quietly Feb. 16. The ceremony will take place in the rectory of St. Martin's Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Smallman is a Protestant, Miss Steers a Roman Catholic.

The young couple was interviewed yesterday in the home of the bride-to-be's grandfather, Col. W. G. Coles. The Star story says:

"Canada's richest young man, who thinks wealth is wonderful, is heading for Toronto in a few weeks to look for a job. The girl he'll wed in 10 days says there'll be none of this playboy stuff. . .

"Comfortably surrounded by $3,000,000 or so, they're going to settle down and bring up a family.

"This blueprint for the future is okay with Johnny, a handsome boy of 18. But he figures on embellishing it with a few ideas of his own. A low-slung British sports car that will touch 132 m.p.h., for example. Maybe a yacht. And certainly a snooker table."

The story says the couple will honeymoon in Mexico.

Queen, Princess Attend Service At Royal Church

Sandringham, England, Feb. 7—(Reuters) — Veiled in heavy mourning, widowed Queen Mother Elizabeth and her daughter, Princess Margaret, made their first appearance in public today since the death of the King.

Their heads bowed in grief, the two women drove through the main gates of Sandringham estate to attend a half-hour holy communion service at the royal church of St. Mary Magdalene, a few hundred yards away.

After the service, the car returned to the estate empty while the widowed Queen and Margaret walked back alone through the grounds of the estate to the sprawling brick house where the King's body lies.

Villagers of Sandringham went to work wearing black ties and arm bands, out of respect for a man that was more than a reigning monarch to them. He was the local farmer, deeply loved and respected as an understanding landlord.

The villagers hoped that they would be able to pay their last respects in the little 16th century church of St. Mary's.

When the last king, George V, died here 15 years ago villagers in the area were allowed to see his body, which rested in the church for a few days before being taken to London.

Fireside Hour

A most successful fireside hour was held by the Y.P.U. of Holloway Street United Church on Sunday at the home of the president, 186 Moire Street West.

A sing-song led by Helen Flindall, brought the young people into the proper spirit to enjoy several quiz contests conducted by Vic Haire.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Hitchon and Cam for opening their home.

Refreshments were served, closing an enjoyable evening.

William Jardine Gives Interesting Talk On Floral Arrangements

The Alpha Lambda Chapter Beta Sigma Phi met at the home of Miss Marion Brennan, on Monday evening with Mrs. John A. Watkins as co-hostess. There were 15 members present.

Business consisted in the appointment of Mrs. John Lennox as 1st vice-president, filling the office of Mrs. Stewart Wood, who resigned.

Mr. William Jardine, local florist, noted for his lovely and original arrangements, was guest speaker. Mr. Jardine outlined the fundamentals of floral arrangements and gave many helpful tips for the care of flowers, stating that the three essentials of floral arrangements were unity of the flowers; the container used and the necessary background to make a perfect picture.

Mrs. John Joblin tendered, on behalf of the listeners, appreciative thanks for a most interesting talk.

Club Activities

BRIDGE STREET Y.P.U.

On Sunday evening, an informal gathering was held at the home of Rev. Duncan McTavish and Mrs. McTavish, when a number of young people of the congregation were privileged to meet Miss Elizabeth MacViear, student of Theology at Emmanuel College, Toronto.

A happy time was spent as the group heard of her interesting experiences in the service of the church thus far. Her splendid strength of Christian purpose was keenly felt, as it was earlier in the day when she spoke at the morning and evening worship.

On Monday evening the regular meeting of the Young People's Union met in the church parlors opening with a sing-song led by Miss Loretta McDougall, with Mr. Dana Cook at the piano.

The program was conducted by Miss Betty McGowan, convener of the department of Missions and World Outreach. The mission study project for the evening consisted of the work of the church in Saskatchewan and Alberta. The group learned how the people were sent the Christian message by mail and radio in districts where there are no resident pastors. Some of these people are new Canadians from European countries.

A "buzz" session was then held during which the group discussed fundamental questions of the Christian doctrine, which arose from letters sent in by these people. The points submitted by the different members were then summed up by Miss McDougall and the meeting closed with Taps.

UNITED CHURCH Y.P.U.

Deseronto—On Monday evening the members of the United Church Young People's Union, and their friends, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Sexsmith.

Games, including checkers and various card games were enjoyed by all, after which the hostess served refreshments.

The president of the union, Donald Fingland, then thanked Mrs. Sexsmith on behalf of the group for her kind hospitality.

Dancing in the recreation room concluded the evening.

CGIT, Mothers Attend Banquet At St. Andrew's

Canadian Girls in Training of the city and their mothers were present at a banquet in St. Andrew's Church on Wednesday evening when each group sat at its own gaily decorated table in the blue and white colors that represent C.G.I.T. The ministers of the respective churches and the Sunday School superintendents were guests of the girls.

Mrs. W. Colterjohn of Trenton was the speaker for the occasion and she chose as her subject the theme of Christian Youth week, "Stand Fast in the Faith."

"We are looking to youth to make the world a better place to live in," the speaker told her audience. "You are taught in your groups to cherish health, and you are told how to care for your physical needs. You are taught to seek truth, and you have discussion groups and Sunday School classes where you are encouraged to express your thoughts and ideas. To know God with your hearts and mind you must obey the commandments and do His will, and you must attend church which is the house of God. You must keep in communication with Him by prayer. Prayer is an expression of a life directed to God, but you must bring a teachable attitude to God when you pray. You young people will have to take into your lives the new people who have come into the Dominion. It is not easy to be young at the present time. Your opportunities are great, but so are your responsibilities."

Margaret Kane Chairman

Margaret Kane was chairman for the program with Miss Loretta McDougall song leader and Mrs. T. K. Franklin as pianist.

A minutes' silence was observed in respect to the late King, and "God Save the Queen" was sung.

Patsy Luck proposed a toast to the church, and Rev. J. G. Hornsby responded with a brief review of the Christian church and its steadfastness against persecution. "Its foundation and structure are so secure," said Mr. Hornsby, "that it will withstand any persecution because it is built on the truth."

The toast to the Sunday School was given by Joan Rowland and in reply Mr. T. K. Franklin said that he had found the C.G.I.T. to be a good training for future Sunday School teachers.

Beth Davidson gave a toast to the mothers and her mother responded with the thought that mothers are God's helpers, and that the home is a kingdom. Ronna Fordyce responded to the toast to the C.G.I.T. given by Mrs. G. Fordyce.

Shirley Fox who attended the camp council in the Muskoka district gave a report on the activities there. An outline of the program included the groups which were concerned with finance, camp promotion, national issues and program promotion. Crafts were learned, Bible study was an important and interesting part of their activity, they enjoyed swimming, canoeing, games, theatrics, camp fires, and they learned many new things. It was a wonderful experience and one that could never be forgotten. It was a place where one grew close to God.

The jingle boxes were dedicated with prayer by Mrs. N. C. Cathers.

Introduction of the speaker was made by Mrs. Cathers and thanks were expressed by Sharon Thompson. The singing of Taps brought the banquet to a close.

Quinte Skating-Tennis Club Sponsors Attractive Tea

St. Valentine was again honored yesterday afternoon at the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club, Bleecker Avenue, by a most attractive tea and sale of homecooking.

Receiving the many guests at the door were Mrs. G. Brearley, president of the club, assisted by Mrs. Jack Dickens. Mrs. J. Anton acted as treasurer and Miss L. Sprackett graciously invited to the tea room with its red cupid occupying a place of honor on the mantel above which two lovely lace-frilled hearts bore out the motif of the day.

Pretty Tea Table

The prettily appointed tea table with its Irish linen, lace-edged, Madiera cutwork cloth was charmingly centred by an ivory ceramic parallelogram containing rose colored tulips, with sprays of graceful bleeding hearts, white buddlea and pale blue, grape hyacinths arranged beside a pink flamingo. Tall ivory tapers in ceramic holders, and gleaming silver services comlimented the floral centre-piece.

Those presiding included: Mesdames G. Davies, A. M. Haig, D. Countryman, R. Grant, H. Mott and W. Cooke; while those who served the dainty sandwiches and cakes were Mesdames E. Fairman, F. Martin, B. Weese, J. Davis, A. Purdy, R. Shire, G. McKintosh, R. Wrenshall, R. Brown, E. Jones, J. Shappee, L. Kells, R. Cass, Williams and T. Black, assisted by those who prepared the tea and arranged the plates, Mrs. C. Miller, Mrs. O. Hales and Mrs. E. Whitfield, and those who replenished the often emptied trays were Mrs. W. Sherry and Mrs. N. O'Neill.

Novelties

The novelty table, convened by Mrs. S. Robb, assisted by Mrs. H. Carruthers and Mrs. R. O'Connor, contained a generous assortment of oddments, costume jewellery, necklaces of beads and plastic flowers; green glass candle holders; ornamental perfume bottles; pots of purple African violets; a sapphire blue bon-bon dish; baby bootees; framed pictures, china Cinderella slippers, mitts, cups and saucers, diamond socks and many other articles, around which hovered the prospective purchasers looking for that elusive 'something.'

Another hive of activity was that of the homecooking and the candy table, convened by Mrs. H. Wakefield with the able assistance of Mrs. T. Law, Mrs. H. Brown, Mrs. H. Fox and Mrs. H. Mott.

Luscious Cakes

Here was a most lovely assortment of chocolate cakes with luscious icings; tafty and lemon tartlets, cup cakes, apple pies, white cakes generously topped with nutmeats, and heart-shaped cookies, double deckers with raspberry jam between, hermits and nut buns.

The candy section as usual was mouth-watering with its display of creams, fudges and other varities, all eagerly being sought after by those of the proverbial 'sweet tooth'.

In one corner of the tea room, guarded by Mrs. R. Miles and Mrs. J. Graham, was an over-flowing hamper of all sorts of groceries, among which a delicious looking boneless rolled ham drew longing regards. This was won by Mrs. W. Hunter, city.

Another eye-attracting draw was that of a lovely white cake covered with mounds and mounds of soft icing, and topped by a tiny cluster of pink forget-me-nots. This was also guarded by Mrs. E. Summers and won by Mrs. S. Fox, city.

The conveners of this attractive tea were Mrs. W. Fox and Mrs. R. Wilkie, to whom is tendered a vote of appreciative thanks for an enjoyable afternoon.

Parent-Teacher Assoc. Meets At Auditorium

On Monday evening last, St. Michael's and Holy Rosary Parent-Teacher Association, had their monthly meeting in the form of a social evening. A short business session was held first, and a motion carried to have the elections for a new executive held in June, instead of March. Maurice Callaghan, chairman of the Separate School Board, gave a brief talk on the make-up and functions of a school board, outlining their duties and responsibilities. J. McCarey thanked the speaker.

Parent attendance plaques were won by Sister M. Claude's class at St. Michael's and Sister M. Cyrilla's class at Holy Rosary.

Euchre was then played and the ladies' prizes went to Mrs. R. J. Henderson and Mrs. J. Lynch, and men's prizes to C. Finnegan and F. Cunningham. M. Ryan won the consolation prize. The door prize of a large hamper of groceries was won by C. W. Philbin. Class mothers of Grades 8 and 9 served refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee.

The balance of the evening was spent in dancing, music being provided by Mrs. Grant and H. Brown. An enjoyable evening was spent by all. Credit for the success of the February P.T.A. meeting is due to Mrs. A. Black, as convener, and Mrs. Bakyta, Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. J. Gallagher, her able assistants.

There will be an executive meeting in the board room on Sunday.

Missionary Film Shown At C. & M. A. Tabernacle

Last evening at the Christian and Missionary Alliance Tabernacle, an impressive colored and sound film, "The Regions Beyond", dealing with the Belgium Congo, was shown under the sponsorship of the Christian Youth Fellowship group, which brough home in a marked degree the great need of the mission field, and the dearth of funds to take the missionaries to these benighted lands, who have never, as yet, heard the Good News of the Gospel, or the name of Jesus.

Previous to the showing of the film, a short devotional service was held with Paul Delaney as song leader; assisted by Miss Margaret Benn, who read the Scripture from the Psalms, Mr. Bob Brown, who gave the announcements, and Mr. James McKay, as guest soloist.

Silent Prayer

During the playing of the National Anthem, the large audience stood in silence with bowed heads, in memory of the late King George VI, and continued so while James McKay sang, "Our Father Who Art in Heaven".

Mr. Clarence Janes, of the Salvation Army, rendered two fine cornet selections, "The Song That Reached My Heart", and "He Loves Me", accompanied at the piano by Miss Marion Sills, who also presided for the several choruses that were enjoyed.

The story of the film centred around two missionaries, Jim and Mary, their baby daughter, and their struggle to win the friendship of the Congo jungle men, which incorporated the attempt by the king's nephew to poison them by adding poison to the sugar, but which Mary detected in time; the death of their baby through jungle fever because Mary had used the last of the medicine for the jungle king's son; her burial· Mary's near death by the same fever; the waylaying by one of the blacks of Jim, who was brough home later unconscious; his subsequent recovery, and their return to the jungle to wage war on the forces of darkness, and win these people to the Lord.

Following the showing of the film, an invocation was given for deeper consecration, with several of the young people answering the call.

Mr. Albert Embury was in charge of the projector.

The meeting was closed by the pastor, the Rev. Robert Gray.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Not all widows are hunting husbands!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Recently I read in your column about the lonely widow who asked you the question "How can I find a mate?" I would like to say that I sympathize with her to a certain point, but see no reason why she should be so miserable and unhappy.

I, too, am a widow. My husband died when I was only 36 and our two children were not out of high school. Of course I was worried about their future, and I admit I was lonely, too. In fact, I still am at times.

But the first thing I did was to get a job. I owned my home and had a small amount of cash, but that does not last long when you have children to educate, so I had a goal in mind and set out to achieve it. Thank goodness, I was successful and today both of my children are happily amrried.

The widow who wrote to you speaks of not finding friendship in church. I wonder if she ever gave any to some one else? I take an active part in things in my church, do volunteer work at our local hospital, belong to two lodges, and, believe me, I have a swell time and have made lots of friends. I am still single, but who knows? Maybe "Mr. Right" will come along some day and we will be happy together. But until that time comes I am too busy with all my activities to let myself become too lonesome.—N. L.

Dear N. L.:

It's always fine to hear how someone has solved a problem similar to one discussed in my column. I certainly congratulate you on the courageous way you went about solving yours, and on your success in doing so.

You are quite right in thinking that no one needs to be miserably unhappy and lonely. What many fail to realize is that they must put into the effort to overcome a troubling situation the kind of courage and determination you put into overcoming yours.

Keep on being that kind of person, and I wouldn't be at all surprised if that "Mr. Right" did come along some day!

Don't be responsible for a piece of two-timing

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Last week I met a girl I liked very much. I had known her father and mother for a long time and they wanted me to meet her, so finally last week I did meet her and made a date with her. Then I found out that she is engaged to another boy, but she told me she doesn't love him and would like to break up with him and go out with me. She wants to give him back his ring, but hasn't got the nerve to do it. I asked her if she still wanted to see me and she said as often as possible. She kissed me when I left her and I could see it meant that she liked me, and I like her, too, but there is this other fellow.

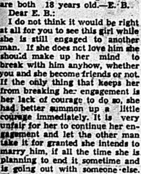
Should I go on seeing her? We are both 18 years old.—E. B.

Dear E. B.:

I do not think it would be right at all for you to see this girl while she is still engaged to another man. If she does not love him she should make up her mind to break with him anyhow, whether you and she become friends or not. If the only thing that keeps her from breaking her engagement is her lack of courage to do so, she had better summon up a little courage immediately. It is very unfair for her to continue her engagement and let the other man take it for granted she intends to marry him, if all the time she is planning to end it sometime and is going out with someone else. That's what's called two-timing remember?

I think you should tell this girl you will not have anything to do with her until she decides what she is going to do about this matter.

SECRET WAS SIMPLE



"Isn't it amazing what children notice? Last night my little girl said, 'Mommy, why is Granny's washing whiter than yours?' I swallowed my pride and found out today. The secret's a swish or two of Reckitt's Blue in the final rinse for it's Reckitt's Blue that prevents clothes turning yellow. There is no pure white without blue. Costs only a few cents a month, and means I take no chances with anything that may damage fabric. It is the safe way to keep clothes snowy white." A-1-R

Food for Thought

Valentine Day in Leap Year

Valentine Day in Leap Year—what a golden opportunity—especially if the beautiful—but lonely—little maiden can cook!

It is amazing when you consider the number of men who are shy too. By most reliable source of masculine foibles tells me that some fellows don't ask girls to go out with them because they are afraid of being turned down. Little do they know how all girls yearn for new boys to date them.

Now whether the way to a man's heart is through his stomach or not, they all want to eat, and if you can learn the foods that they like and can make the dishes that bait the trap—he's fair game.

Valentine foods pretty well boil down to red-hued desserts. Sure, you can serve ham and chipped beef and smoked tongue and red cabbage slaw and tomato jelly molds—but it's sweets that melt their hearts.

We have just made some cherry tarts from cherries canned without sugar for pies.

CHERRY TARTS

Line fancy fluted tart tins or muffin pans with your best pastry. The proportions I use are: 2 cups sifted pastry flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon baking powder, 2-3 cup best quality shortening, 4 tablespoons ice water. Sift dry ingredients together, cut in shortening with 2 knives or pastry blender. Sprinkle water over, mixing lightly with a fork, until all flour is moistened. Press dough into ball, divide in halves, and roll out. Cut into about 4-inch rounds or rounds the size to fit your tart tins. Make filling

FILLING FOR CHERRY TARTS

Open a 15-oz. can of unsweetened sour cherries (packed for pies). Tip off the juice and add water to it to make it up to 1 cup. Mix together 2 tablespoons cornstarch or better still arrowroot flour (to make the glaze crystal clear) and 2-3 to 3-4 cup sugar. When well mixed stir this into the juice and stir over heat until thickened. Cook over boiling water at least 25 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir into the drained cherries 2 or 4 tablespoons sugar. Spoon these into the baked tart shells. Pour over the hot syrup-glaze until tart is filled to brimming being sure glaze flows down between the cherries. Cool. When cold top with a little mound of whipped cream and top this with a whole maraschino cherry or pipe a rim of whipped cream around edge of tart in a heart shape if you are an artist.

STRAWBERRY GLACE PIE

(Contributed by "Homemaker" in 1951.)

Fill a baked pie shell with berries (fresh or frozen) and pour over them the following: Boil until thick and clear 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 cup white sugar, 1 cup water, a few crushed berries and some red food coloring. Remove from heat and add a little butter and lemon juice. Cool slightly and pour over the berries. Chill. Serve with whipped cream.

I am giving you the recipe for Ham Timbales because it is pretty useful—it may be used for family supper on Valentine evening or for a late snack for young or old.

HAM TIMBALES

Melt 4 tablespoons margarine and add 1 3-4 cups stale breadcrumbs, and 1 3-4 cups milk, and cook 5 minutes stirring constantly. Add 2 cups chopped cooked ham (or left over roast ham), 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon grated onion, and 4 slightly beaten eggs. Season with salt and pepper, and turn into individual molds or custard cups which have been buttered. Fill 2-3 full. Stand in pan of hot water and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. until firm—about 30 minutes. This is a delicious dish and a standby with me—especially when served with or on fluffy boiled rice.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Her mother an invalid. . .therefore a home wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Because my mother is an invalid, spending her day-times in a wheel chair, I am planning to be married at home, so that she can be present. It will be a small wedding, but I want to have most of the details on the side of formality: that is, I am to wear a formal, white satin wedding dress and with it the beautiful rosepoint veil my mother wore at her wedding. The bridegroom, his best man, and two ushers, and my father (who will give me in marriage), will wear formal day attire. My only sister is to be matron of honor. Then I would also like to have two young girls (one my sister's daughter and the other, the same age and size, the daughter of my fiance's only sister) as junior bridesmaids. Would this be proper, or "too much" for a house wedding? If you approve, what would be the order of the processional? And the recessional?—Beatrice T.

A charming idea to have these two young girls as junior bridesmaids. . .and entirely proper for a house wedding. The processional: first, the two ushers, together; next, the junior bridesmaids, together; matron of honor, alone; and last, you on your father's right arm. In a house wedding there is rarely a recessional: but of course there may be if it is more convenient to have the receiving line in another room. If there is to be a recessional: first, you and your bridegroom; matron of honor, either alone, or with the best man; junior bridesmaids, together; last, the two ushers. If no recessional, the clergyman, after the ceremony, offers his best wishes, your bridegroom kisses you, then you and he turn in your places and receive the felicitations of the guests. (What a wonderful daughter you are. . .my deep salutations to you for your thoughtful and loving adaptation of your plans so that your mother can be with you at the ceremony.)

A greeting-sentence, instead of "Sincerely"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I very much need your help as to how to "sign off" a letter to a slight acquaintance or to a pen-pal. So often "Sincerely" doesn't seem quite suitable, but it does seem difficult to find a substitute. —B. B.

Right you are about "Sincerely"! However, a good substitute is, I think, a sentence of greeting or good wishes. For example:

Every good wish to you, for your happiness and well-being!
Betty Brown,

Or

The friendliest of greetings to you, dear Janet, and best wishes
Betty Brown

Using lace table cloth on dinette table

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In the dinette part of our kitchen we have a chrome dinette set. (We do not have a dining-room—but hope to have some day!) Would it be proper to use our lace table cloth (which was a wedding present) when we have guests to dinner?—Reader.

Do have the joy of using your lace table cloth, if it is the right size, or even approximately the right size, for your dinette table. But by all means use a heavy cloth underneath the lace cloth, so that the metal table top does not show through.

Her mother and her fiance disagree about groom's expenses

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in a few months. A fairly large wedding. My mother and my fiance are in disagreement about what part of the wedding expenses the groom is expected to pay. Help me, please!—Puzzled.

Yes, ma'am! The groom pays for: the wedding ring; marriage license; wedding present to the bride; bride's bouquet and her going-away corsage; corsage for bride's mother, and for his own mother; boutonnieres for his best man, ushers, bride's father, his own father; presents to his best man and ushers, and also their ties and (if a formal wedding) gloves; fee or contribution to clergyman or church; car in which he and best man come to ceremony, and car in which he and his bride leave the reception; expenses of wedding trip.

SORROWING

Clad in mediaeval uniform, he will read it from the balcony of St. James' Palace, built by Henry VIII father of the first Queen Elizabeth.

The proclamation was published in all morning newspapers today and will be repeated simultaneously with Sir George's reading at Temple Bar, ancient Fleet Street gateway to the old city of London, from the steps of the royal exchange in the financial district, and at Shire Halls and Guildhalls throughout Britain.

It also will be read throughout at the word "God Save the Queen." They will fly for six hours in honor of the new ruler, then will be lowered again to half-staff until after her father's funeral.

The Queen, flying across Africa, the Mediterranean and Europe with her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, was due in London at 4.30 p.m. (11.30 a.m. EST).

She will be met at the airport the Commonwealth.

Hauled to Mastheads

As it is read, flags at half staff in mourning for the dead Sovereign will be hauled to their mastheads by her uncle, the Duke of Gloucester, Prime Minister Churchill, and a few other political leaders. Her father's only other living brother, the Duke of Windsor, sails tonight for England from New York aboard the Queen Mary.

Churchill appealed to the people last night to stay away from London airport and let the new Queen arrive quietly.

Will Call Meeting

"Her Majesty should be met only by those whose official positions make it appropriate for them to be present at the airport," he said.

With these appropriate officials, Queen Elizabeth will drive to Buckingham Palace, and, acting upon her prime minister's advice will call another meeting of the Privy Council.

Before the council, in her clear, high voice she will make the historic accession declaration. It includes these words:

"I do solemnly and sincerely, in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I am a faithful Protestant and that I will, according to the true intent of the enactments which secure Protestant succession to the throne of my realm, uphold and maintain said enactments to the best of my powers, according to law."

Accession to the throne must come first, before the new queen's homage to her dead father and comfort to her widowed mother.

Churchill will address the grieving country at 9 p. m. (4 p. m. EST) today.

Driven to Sandringham

From the palace, the Queen will be driven 130 miles to Sandringham.

The widowed Queen Mother Elizabeth and Princess Margaret, Elizabeth's 21-year-old sister, prayed by his bedside in the evening. Comforting them were the Bishop of Norwich and the Duke of Gloucester.

Through the night, saddened villagers and farmers and their wives and children stood silently before the great gate, peering down the gravel drive at the great house.

Royal gamekeepers, woodsmen and farmhands went quietly about their daily duties in barn and field.

Before every gate stood uniformed policemen, quietly telling those who asked that there was no more news.

The rule that none must loiter while the King is in residence was overlooked in death. Those who wished could linger and mourn.

When the plain coffin is finished, the body will be placed in it and carried a quarter-mile to the little church.

The carpenters who built it, the woodsmen and field workers and guardians of the game will make up the honor guard in the dimly lit chancel of the chapel until the body is brought to London by train, probably Sunday.

Regiment Arrives

A detachment of a Royal Guards regiment arrived from London last night to join in the ceremonial carriage of the body from Sandringham to the little Wolferton railway station.

In London, the King will lie in state in Westminster Hall, chill vaulted chamber in the Palace of Westminster.

Soon after the Queen reaches Sandringham tonight, a family service will be held by Rev. Hector Anderson, rector of the village church.

When the time comes for the King's last departure the coffin will be laid on a gun carriage escorted by the King's troop of the Royal Horse Artillery, for the three-mile journey to the railway.

Another gun carriage will bear his body through London's stilled streets to Westminster Hall.

The Royal Family and members of both Houses of parliament will attend a short funeral service. The rest of Europe's major crowned heads—the Kings of Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Belgium and Greece and Queen Juliana of The Netherlands—are expected to attend also.

Then the ancient baronial hall will be closed until the next day, when the King's subjects will be permitted to file past the coffin.

From Westminster Hall, the body will be taken to Windsor, where it will be buried beneath the limply hanging silken banners of the Knights of the Garter.

21-GUN SALUTE

Messages of sympathy were cabled from Canada to the Royal Family on the death of the King yesterday. Scores of tributes poured in from the nation's high officials to the King who led Canada and her sister Commonwealth members through 16 years of war and half-peace.

Prime Minister St. Laurent expressed profound sorrow at the death of a man greatly loved by all. He informed Queen Elizabeth of Canada's earnest desire to support her in the great responsibility she now assumes.

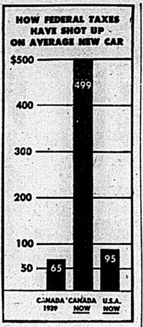
Pearson Goes to Funeral

Mr. St. Laurent told reporters that External Affairs Minister Pearson, flying to London en route to an Atlantic Pact meeting in Lisbon, will represent Canada at the King's funeral. Also attending will be Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canada's new Governor-General designate who has cancelled plans to sail home Friday.

The Prime Minister said however it is not expected the Royal death will altar plans to open the new session of parliament Feb. 28. And Mr. Massey will fly back to Canada to be sworn in as Governor-General in time to officiate at the parliamentary opening.

It is possible that Viscount Alexander, the retired Governor-General who was to sail for Britain Feb. 17 to become defence minister may fly over in time to attend the King's funeral.

The death of the King makes necessary the taking of a new oath of allegiance by thousands of Canadians holding office by the King's commission. This includes all officers of the army, judges, members of the Commons and Senate and Canadian ambassadors and ministers abroad.



The Canadian who buys an average priced new automobile today must pay nearly eight times as much in sales and excise taxes to the federal government as he had to pay on the same car in 1939. And he pays more than five times what his American cousin pays to Washington on a similar car. On a representative sedan (figures used in the above graph), the sales tax has increased from $59.70 in 1939 to $142.49 today, an increase of 138 percent. But the big hike has been in excise taxes, up from $4.81 in 1939 to $356.22 today, a boost of 7,305 percent. Federation of Automobile Dealer Associations of Canada argue that although cars are now essential (74 percent are used to get to and from work), they are taxed in the same class as slot machines and juke boxes.

GO INTO EFFECT MONDAY

Ottawa, Feb. 6. (CP)—Freight-rate increases authorized by the Board of Transport Commissioners Jan. 25 will go into effect Monday.

The railways have filed the new rates with the Board to have them become operative on that day. They provide generally for an increase of 4 1-2 per cent over existing rates, with a number of exceptions.

The major exceptions are potatoes, coal and coke. on which no increase was allowed.

BIRTH OF TV

The first demonstration of modern television was given by the Scotsman J. L. Baird at London, England, in 1926.

RAWDON

Fred Bateman Gives Address On 'Protestantism'

Rawdon—Rt. Wor. Fred Bateman, Grand Master, Loyal Orange Grand Lodge of Ontario East and Mrs. Bateman spent a few days last week in the Kingston area and were guests of Mr. H. A. Graham, Field Secretary at the LaSalle hotel.

On Thursday evening they attended the annual meeting and election of officers of the county of South Frontenac, in Kingston Orange Hall.

The Grand Master gave an address on Protestantism and outlined the history of 1860 when a Royal Prince was not allowed to land at Kingston and meet a large number of Orange followers. Brother Bateman quoted several verses that were most popular at that time.

Later a delegation from British North America visited Queen Victoria and a public apology was made as the Duke of Newcastle who was guarding the Royal Prince had made a grave error.

Four other officers spoke briefly, Col. T. A. Kidd, Kingston, Past Grand Master of British America; H. A. Graham, Grand Organizer; C. Wood, Grand Treasurer, and Thomas Rankin a member of the Legislative Committee. At midnight the ladies of Crystal Chapter served a full course banquet.

On Friday evening the annual meeting and election of officers of Centre Frontenac was held in Harrowsmith Orange Lodge.

Value of Orange Lodge

Rt. Wor. Bro. Fred Bateman, Grand Master Ontario East, gave an address on "The Value of the Orange Lodge" and told what it is doing to promote Protestantism. He quoted the poem entitled "The Bridge Builder", and pointed out that each individual member should be daily building in order to assist others along life's highday.

Other speakers were Bro. Ford Godkins, immediate Past County Master, and Bro. H. A. Graham, Grand Organizer.

The L.O.B.A. members of Harrowsmith catered for the full course midnight banquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Bateman returned to Stirling on Saturday forenoon.

AGUILAR WINS

Bellingham, Wash., Feb. 7 (AP)—Ray Aguilar, 181, Los Angeles, scored an easy 10-round decision over Billy Carter, 185-pound Vancouver boxer last night.

The fight was slow and there were no knockdowns. Aguilar was clearly Carter's master throughout.

WOOLER

Cobourg Presbyterial of W.M.S. Holds Annual Meeting In St. John's Church, Campbellford

Wooler.—The annual meeting of the Cobourg Presbyterial of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada was held in St. John's United Church, Campbellford, on Wednesday with a good attendance at both morning and afternoon sessions. Mrs. P. F. Gardiner, Canton, presided and conducted a brief worship service, stressing "Stewardship", the theme of the Presbyterial.

Delegates and visitors were cordially welcomed by Mrs. M. E. Petherick, president of the Campbellford Afternoon Auxiliary.

Allocation Exceeded

Achievements for 1951 were most gratifying, the treasurer reporting the allocation exceeded by $432. It was decided to request this sum be used for new missionaries.

Mrs. Lorne Evans, Warkworth, Christian Stewardship secretary, stated the allocation for 1952 would be $12,000, which was accepted by a standing vote. Mrs. Evans suggested in accepting this increased allocation that it be done prayerfully and to consider it an opportunity to serve God and not an added financial burden.

Mission Band awards were presented by Mrs. W. J. Underwood, Grafton, the Mission Band Secretary.

Mrs. S. W. Spafford, Belleville, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference branch, was the guest speaker at the morning session and conducted the election and installation of officers in the afternoon.

Rev. D. M. Smith, Campbellford, conducted an impressive "In Memoriam Service" at the beginning of the afternoon session. A solo "Beyond The Sunset", was sung by Mrs. Watson, of Campbellford.

Special Speaker

Miss Mary Martin on furlough from Central India, was special speaker at the afternoon session:

India, once the brightest jewel in the British Crown, is now a divided country. Central India covers an area of 55 square miles and has a population of 5,000,000, the majority being Hindus. Fifteen languages and many dialects are spoken.

Houses are constructed of mud with thatched roofs and built in long rows in the villages with a narrow street between. Growth or failure of crops depends on the monsoon. The normal rainfall is 35 inches. Last year ten inches fell making a shortage of food. Sixteen ounces is necessary to normal health but the daily ration now is nine ounces. Children are undernourished and consequently fall a prey to every disease.

Before 1947 poverty was blamed on the British government, now it is their own headache. The government is doing much to remedy the food situation by reclaiming land, digging wells and developing irrigation.

In 1947 millions fled into Central India from Pakistan and had to be sheltered and fed. There are still 8,000,000 refugees in camps. There are seven hospitals—four general and three for women and children. There is one dispensary for 40,000 people. Most of the medical work in the cities leaving the villages almost uncared for. Eighty per cent of India's nurses are Christian and the training of nurses is left to the Christian hospitals. There is a great need for public health workers.

Disease Control

Advance has been made in the control of contagious diseases. T.B. is now the number one disease in India. Five million die of it in one year. This is a most pressing health problem as so many young people contract the disease. The loss of babies in their second year of life is very great also. Education has never been compulsory so only about 40,000,000 of India's population are educated. Democracy without education cannot be a success. "Do we realize our responsibility to India?"

A play "Here Am I Lord, Take Me", was ably presented by the Campbellford Evening Auxiliary.

Mrs. Gardiner offered the closing prayer and the Presbyterial adjourned to meet in Cobourg in 1953.

Officers elected are: president, Mrs. H. Ireland, R.R. 1, Hilton; 1st vice-president, Mrs. H. I. Allan, Castleton; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Ed. Morton, Cobourg; Taylor, Brighton; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. K. Bradshaw, Cobourg; treasurer, Mrs. C. W. McMaster, Wooler.

Christian Stewardship, Mrs. Lorne Evans, Warkworth; Mission Circles, Mrs. Gerald Welton, Castleton; Affiliated C.G.I.T. groups, Mrs. G. Young, Grafton; Mission Bands, Mrs. W. J. Underwood, Grafton; Baby Bands, Mrs. J. N. Lovelace, Roseneath; Associate Members, Mrs. Chas. W. Hoard, Campbellford; Supply, Mrs. H. J. C. Beatty, Port Hope; Community Friendship, Mrs. J. R. Congregational Meetings

CHRIST CHURCH

The annual vestry meeting of Christ Church was held in the Parish Hall on January 28th with the rector, Rev. Canon J. B. Creeggan, as chairman, who opened the meeting with prayer. As this was the first official meeting, representing the parish as a whole since the renovation of the Parish Hall, Canon Creeggan dedicated the Parish Hall to the glory of God and for the furtherance of God's work in the parish.

Greetings and best wishes were sent and received from St. Thomas Church, where the vestry meeting was being held on the same evening.

Mr. R. A. Lennox, acting as vestry clerk read the minutes of the last annual vestry meeting and of the special meeting held in June, which minutes were duly approved.

Reports Presented

Financial reports from all organizations were tabled and mimeographed copies given to all present. Reports of other activities other than financial were presented by many of the organizations. These reports were encouraging and showed that there had been many and varied activities in the parish during 1951.

The rector presented his report showing that there had been 475 services conducted during the year, including services on Sundays and week days holy baptisms, marriages, burials and private communions. 61 candidates were confirmed.

Canon Creeggan thanked the organizations for their co-operation and support during the year, as well as the members of the parish, pointing out that it had been an extra busy year due to the renovation of the Parish Hall. He rejoiced that the Mission apportionment had been overpaid and complimented the congregation for their fine response to the special emergent mission appeal of the National Laymen's Council.

Ordered Deacon

He reminded the meeting of the distinct honor accorded the parish, when on St. Mark's Day, April 25th, 1951, Mr. Charles Staples, a young man of the parish, having answered the call of the sacred ministry, was ordered Deacon in Christ Church. The meeting was informed that the Rev. Charles Staples was to be ordained priest in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, on Sunday, February 24th, of this year. Canon Creeggan expressed the hope that more young men would follow the example of Charles Staples and consider the call of the sacred ministry of the church. Tribute was paid to the memory of 27 faithful parishioners who had passed away during 1951.

The church wardens, Mr. Wilfred Mills and Mr. F. Beeby, presented the general and mission accounts, showing that all obligations had been met and that the church was in a healthy financial position.

$18,000 In Contributions

Mr. M. B. Button, treasurer of the building fund committee presented that report, showing that individual and organization contributions had amounted to approximately $18,000. There was general feeling of thankfulness that the parish had so successfully accomplished the undertaking and those who had done so much for it were duly thanked. One of the highlights of the meeting was the offer made by the finance committee, that the committee continue to function until the mortgage necessitated by the renovation program, be paid off. This kind offer was gratefully received and accepted.

Officers Elected

The election of officers for 1952 resulted as follows:

Rector's warden, Mr. W. A. Mills; people's warden, Mr. F. A. Beeby.

Canon Creeggan voiced his appreciation of the assistance to him personally, and to the parish, of the Rev. E. P. Smith.

Rev. J. Cantrell moved and Mr. C. Hayes seconded a vote of thanks to Canon Creeggan as rector for his splendid leadership, assistance and work, conducted during the year.

Canon Creeggan thanked the congregation for the vote of appreciation of his work as rector. The meeting closed with the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers" and the blessing.

CANNIFTON UNITED CHURCH

Cannifton—The annual congregational meeting of Cannifton United Church was held in the Sunday School rooms preceded by a bountiful supper given by the W.A. of the church.

The meeting was then called to order by the pastor Rev. W. R. Merrick. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mr. J. H. Brenton and approved.

Reports Given

The reports were given for the different organizations of the church:

The missionary and maintenance committee composed of Mr. Earl Yateman, Mrs. J. Williams, Mrs. Gerald Brenton. Mrs. Earl Yateman was added later.

The parsonage committee is to be the same as last year as the elders of the church.

It was decided that the trustees and heads of all different organizations form a committee to see about the decorating of the church.

Ontario Makes Big Progress In Increasing Hospital Beds, But Costs Still Rise Fast

(By The Canadian Press)

Ontario has made considerable progress in alleviating the post-war hospital bed shortage by a province-wide program of hospital expansion and modernization.

The shortage has not yet been overcome but rapid progress in that direction has enabled hospital administrators to give greater attention to the basic problem of rising costs.

The average daily patient cost has risen from $5.82 in 1945 to approximately $14.30 in 1951.

Since the end of the war, some 6,000 active treatment beds or infant cubicles have been added to the province's 133 general hospitals. In 1951 alone, the 27 large and small projects of hospital expansion or construction resulted in an addition of 1,975 new beds or cubicles to the previous 16,793.

The Ontario Hospital Association estimates that in 1951 $27,700,000 was spent for hospital construction. The over-all average cost for each new bed is estimated at $12,000.

Costs Vary

The actual cost varies, however—as low as $3,500 in small hospitals and in big hospitals, such as the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, $20,000. The high cost in large hospitals is due to the greater facilities necessary, such as additional operating rooms, delivery rooms and laboratories.

The biggest project of any Ontario hospital since the war is the $14,000,000 to be spent on additions and improvements to the Toronto General Hospital. Its capacity will be increased by 400 beds. A campaign for funds ended last week with the goal almost reached. It is hoped to begin construction this spring.

Under way are many other projects, including the Toronto Western Hospital 191-bed addition and the new Mount Sinai Hospital in Toronto with 351 beds. In 1951, bed capacity of the Hamilton General Hospital was increased by 179, Hamilton St. Joseph's by 118 and Toronto St. Michael's by 154.

Work Fewer Hours

On an average, salaries, exclusive of doctors services, represent 53.1 per cent of all hospital costs in Ontario. Reduction in the working hours of hospital personnel has increased the number of workers.

Increased wages and higher costs of food, bedding, equipment, construction, the expense of laboratory and technical-diagnostic treatment equipment not previously used, are the main factors in boosting hospital costs.

A survey of a dozen average hospitals by the Ontario Hospital Association showed the following increased costs with no increase in patients treated: Salaries and wages, 1939, $375,000, 1951, $1,195,000; meats, poultry and so on, 1939, $34,000, 1951, $136,000; milk products, 1939, $18,300, 1951, $45,900; heat, light, power, 1939, $80,000, 1951, $139,000.

Average Stay Shorter

The average stay of patients has been drastically reduced. For payments patients the average stay in 1951 amounted to nine days, compared with the average of 23.4 days for indigent patients, on whom hospitals los emoney. Indigents require greater care since, by the time they come under hospital attention, their condition has become acute.

Provincial grants for hospitals are provided on the basis of $1,000 for each active treatment bed, one-third of this amount for each infant cubicle, $2,000 for each chronic or convalescent bed and $2,500 for each tuberculosis bed providing that this not exceed one-half the total cost.

In addition, federal grants of $1,000 are paid for each active treatment bed and $1,500 for each convalescent or chronic bed.

RETURN TO WORK

Detroit, Feb. 7 — (CP) Trucks rolled off assembly lines today at the Dodge truck plant of the Chrysler Corporation after a walkout Wednesday had halted production.

Five thousand, three hundred men walked out over the firings of five probationary employees and the two-day disciplinary lay-offs of two other men. The Dodge workers are members of Local 140 the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.).

Company spokesmen said most of the 4,500 - man day shift reported for work today.

Pledge Loyalty

Canberra, Feb. 7—(AP)—Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies today pledged Australia would help make Queen Elizabeth's reign "as rich and kind and good and memorable as that of her illustrious father."

Moving in the House of Representatives for a motion of condolence on the King's death, Menzies said:

"God bless the memory of a good King. We are shocked and sad at his death, but we shall all remain the better for his life.

"He was a constitutional Monarch in the grand tradition of his father. Possessed of great force of character, a most royal sense of duty and keen perception of the movements and issues of his day, our late beloved King was, in the vast and bitter crisis of war in which he served us all so well, a ruler, leader and friend."

Queen Elizabeth Now is Third Living Queen

London, Feb. 7—(AP)—Queen Elizabeth's accession to the throne gives Britain its third living Queen and the seventh woman to rule England in the country's history.

Under two previous queens—Elizabeth I and Victoria — the country achieved its greatest glories. Both lived to a ripe old age. Elizabeth I was 69 when she died in 1603 after a 45-year reign. Victoria died at 81 after the longest Royal life of all British rulers. She was queen for 63 years—from 1837 to 1901.

The new Queen's grandmother Mary, who shared the reign of King George V, is alert and active at 84. The Queen Mother Elizabeth will be 52 this summer. Neither has shown signs of failing health.

But the durability of the distaff side of Britain's rulers is not unblemished. The first British queen after William the Conqueror was Lady Jane Grey, who occupied the throne only nine days in 1553 before she was beheaded for treason. Mary I was 43 when she died, Mary II only 33 and Anne 49.

Victoria at 18 was the youngest queen to ascend the throne. Elizabeth I was 25 as is her namesake, the new Queen.

Far-Reaching Judgment Given By Supreme Court

Calgary, Feb. 7 — A far-reaching judgment of petroleum rights was handed down yesterday by the Supreme Court of Alberta, appellate division, with one of the five judges dissenting.

The court decided the word "petroleum" includes oil and other hydro-carbons and natural gas existing in its natural condition in strata.

The Canadian Pacific Railway and Imperial Oil Co. Ltd. won an appeal against Michael Borys of the Leduc district. At a previous hearing the trial judge ruled that natural gas and petroleum were two different substances.

Heart of this case revolved around the meaning and effect that should be given the word petroleum.

Borys claimed that petroleum is a liquid as it exists in the earth and does not include gaseous hydrocarbons. If this were the case oil rights and natural gas rights would have to be purchased separately.

The appellants said that petroleum embraces not only crude oil but includes all gaseous hydrocarbons whether liquid, solid or gaseous.

CHANGE IN MANAGEMENT

Hanover, Feb. 7—(CP)—Austin E. Ball, president of Ball Furniture Company, today announced a change in management of the company.

The new management will be known as Leight of Sweden (Canada) Ltd., and the plant will be managed by George Besterman, member of the new executive.

The plant will continue to manufacture chairs, dinette suites and coat hangers.

Prime Minister Sends Messages To Queen, Princess

Ottawa, Feb. 7—(CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent yesterday expressed profound sorrow at the death of King George VI and informed Queen Elizabeth II of Canada's earnest desire to support and uphold her "in the great responsibilities you now have assumed."

Deep sympathy for the loss of the King was expressed in two separate messages sent by the prime minister to the new queen and to the King's widow.

To Queen Elizabeth, he wrote: "I respectfully extend to Your Majesty in your bereavement and to all the members of the royal family, the deepest sympathy of the government and the people of Canada."

"His late Majesty King George VI was greatly loved by all of his subjects in Canada who remember vividly his happy visit to this country and his personal associations with our armed forces during the war.

"We share with the other peoples of the commonwealth profound sorrow at his passing Your own recent visit here has increased our sense of your nearness to us and to our loyalty and affection there will be added an earnest desire to support and uphold Your Majesty in the great responsibilities you now have assumed."

To the King's widow, he wrote: "On behalf of the government and the people of Canada, I extend deepest sympathy to Your Majesty and the members of Your Majesty's family in your bereavement.

"As Your Majesty has seen yourself in your visit to this country, Canadians had the strongest feelings of devotion and affection for King George VI for whose high courage and exemplary family life there was universal admiration.

"They share with the other peoples of the commonwealth and indeed the world a sense of personal loss for a most distinguished sovereign."

Queen Mary Mourns Loss Of Third Son

London, Feb. 7 — (AP) Queen Mary, mourned in seclusion today the death of a third son, King George VI.

From the top of Marlborough House, her official London residence, her flag still flew at full-staff.

A police sergeant on duty near her home explained, "It is the personal flag of Queen Mary. It always has flown as now when she is in residence — and is not lowered to half-staff." All other flags throughout the country were.

It was just before 9:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m. EST) yesterday when Queen Mary was preparing to go through the day's letters with her private secretary that she was told her son had died.

At once the 84-year-old Queen withdrew to a first-floor lounge and stayed there throughout the day, refusing to see anyone.

But last night her daughter, Princess Mary, was with her for an hour.

Queen Mary has lived to see the close of five reigns, the death of three of her five sons and her only daughter widowed.

Her youngest son, Prince John, died in 1919, and the Duke of Kent was killed in an airplane crash in 1942.

Mourning Period Ordered

Ottawa, Feb. 7—(CP)—A period of mourning for Canada's armed forces, symbolized by black armbands on officers' sleeves, was ordered Wednesday by Defence Minister Claxton.

There are roughly 10,000 officers in the regular and reserve forces. All of them will swear new oaths of allegiance to Queen Elizabeth.

No definite period for the services' mourning was set by Mr. Claxton.

He issued orders for the artillery to fire 56 rounds, one a minute—one for each year of the King's life—in all provincial capitals, in Ottawa and at other "saluting stations" across Canada on the day of the funeral.

King Sidelights

London, Feb. 7—(AP)—At noon today British warships and army posts throughout the world start firing at minute intervals 56 round one for each year of the life of the King.

Mourning commands to the three British services order hald-staffed ensigns, draped trumpets, drums and colors, and black arm bands for all officers.

Canterbury, England, Feb. 7—(AP)—Prayers were read at Canterbury Cathedral evensong last night for "Our Gracious Elizabeth, Elizabeth the Queen Mother and Mary, the Queen grandmother."

London, Feb. 7—(AP)—One of the two thrones which have remained side by side in the House of Lords throughout the reign of King George VI will be removed today. A single throne will symbolize the reign of Queen Elizabeth II.

The Duke of Edinburgh, who is expected to be created Prince Consort by the Queen, will occupy asmall gilt chair on one of the lower steps at the opening of parliament.

London, Feb. 7—AP—Queen Mother Elizabeth, who under an act of parliament will receive a life pension of £70,000 yearly, is expected to move into Clarence House when Queen Elizabeth and her husband move out to take up residence at Buckingham Palace.

Devonport, England, Feb. 7—(AP)—Dockyard officials ordered a stop to the refitting of the battleship Vanguard yesterday. The ship was being pepared to take the King on a spring cruise to South Africa.

London, Feb. 7—(AP)—The will of King George VI will stay secret for all time. Royal wills are outside the jurisdiction of all British courts and legal authorities. The King's last testament will not be published.

Bequests will be made to the King's ministers, staff and servants. But they will be told to keep silent about them. Distribution of the remainder of his estate will remain a family secret.

Vatican City, Feb. 7—(AP) — The Pope yesterday sent the following telegram to Queen Elizabeth in London:

"We hasten to extend to Your Majesty to the members of the Royal Family and to the entire nation our profound sympathy on the death of His Majesty King George VI. We shall keep him in prayerful remembrance while invoking as solace in your bereavement divine comfort and strength in fullsome measure."

Hong Kong, Feb. 7—(AP)—Royal navy and Commonwealth ships in Hong Kong harbor fired a 56-gun salute marking the death of the King as this British colony went into official mourning today.

Washington, Feb. 7—(AP)—The Russian Embassy didn't get around to flying its flag at half-staff in mourning for King George VI until hours after the other diplomatic missions here had lowered theirs.

The other embassies put their flags at half-staff along Embassy Row during the morning hours yesterday, shortly after the Monarch's death was announced.

As late as 4:45 p.m. EST the Russians had taken no action. In fact no flag at all was flying over the Embassy.

After several inquiries from reporters, the Russians reported at 5:15 p.m. that the hammer and sickle flag was at half-staff.

London, Feb. 7—(AP)—Stores reported a rush of men to buy black ties today. One big west end department store said "Men started buying their black ties yesterday and there has been a steady sale ever since."

London, Feb. 7— (AP) — Sir William Slim, chief of the Imperial General staff, received a message of condolence today on the death of the King from Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs-of-Staff.

Kuala Lumpur, Malaya, Feb. 7—(AP)—Malay rulers of the nine princely states in the Malayan federation ordered prayers said in all mosques for the King and young Queen Elizabeth II.

The rulers designated the Sultan of Johore, senior Malay prince, to send condolences to Queen Elizabeth.

"We have lost a personal friend and the world a great man," the Sultan messages.

Moslems do not mourn the dead and there will be little observance of mourning dress.

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 7—(AP)—The Hungarian foreign ministry has sent a note to the British legation here expressing sympathy over the death of the King, a spokesman of the ministry said today.

Budapest newspapers published the news of the death in one sentence this morning.

Ottawa, Feb. 7—(CP)—Black and purple drapes were hung about the main doors of the parliament buildings today in mourning for the King. They will remain until the day after the funeral.

Montreal, Feb. 7—(CP)—W. A. Mather, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, on behalf of directors and personnel of the company, has telegraphed the federal government a message of sympathy in the death of the King.

"I would ask you to convey to Her Majesty the Queen and members of the Royal Family our deepest sympathy in their bereavement," Mr. Mather wired.

Becomes Titular Head of Two Separate Churches

London, Feb. 7—(AP)—Queen Elizabeth II became titular head of two separate churches the moment her father died yesterday.

She is head of the Church of England and head of the Church of Scotland, which is Presbyterian in organization. Both are Protestant bodies but there is no common communion between them. Some basic differences date back to the Protestant Reformation before England and Scotland were united.

Elizabeth, as head of each church, takes the sacrament and worships in the buildings of each church. Thus she is an Anglican while in England and a Presbyterian while in Scotland.

Personally, Elizabeth is known to be sincerely religious, but being head of two churches does not make her a prelate. Nor is she a laywoman. She is a queen, spiritual and temporal head of the state.

She does not meddle in church affairs. That is just as taboo as interference in temporal politics.

As queen, Elizabeth personally appoints the two archbishops and the bishops of the Church of England when those offices fall vacant. But she does not select the persons to fill the posts—they are nominated by the government.

There are no bishops in the Church of Scotland. Its head is an elected moderator. But the general assembly derives its authority from the Queen, its temporal head.

Day of Funeral To be Proclaimed Day of Mourning

Ottawa, Feb. 7 (CP) —The day of the King's funeral will be proclaimed a day of national mourning for Canada, Prime Minister St. Laurent announced tonight in a statement.

(The date of the funeral has not yet been announced from London.)

Mr. St. Laurent said that a national ceremony will be held at 3 p.m. at the National War Memorial on Ottawa's Confederation Square and that he will place a wreath at the cenotaph.

"It is expected," he added, "the ceremony will be attended by members of the diplomatic corps and other dignitaries, including representatives from various national organizations."

There will be two minutes of silence, the beginning of which will be indicated by the firing of a gun and the ending of which will be indicated by the start of a 56-gun salute, one each minute for each year of the King's life.

"It is expected," Mr. St. Laurent said, "that the churches will hold memorial services and that members of the government will wish to attend the churches to which they belong."

New Queen Has Close Personal Ties With Canada

Ottawa, Feb. 7 — (CP) — No Monarch ever mounted the British throne with closer personal ties to Canada than Elizabeth II brought today to her royal office.

As Elizabeth comes to her regal destiny on the death of George VI, Canada's memory of its new Queen is sharp with the freshness of less than three months. It remembers her on last fall's visit as a gay young princess, but serious with a quest for understanding of this big and complex country.

It remembers her consort, Philip, as prince whose gaiety was threaded with a zest for knowledge of Canada, its accomplishments and its potential.

Besides visiting with uncounted millions in every province, through public appearance, the royal couple got an insight into what makes Canada tick — its industries, its educational institutions, its sports.

On the 36-day trip in October and November, Elizabeth and Philip were acclaimed with a warmth far surpassing anything except the enthusiasm for Elizabeth's royal parents in 1939.

And even the 1939 reception, on the estimate of observers on both tours, had to take second place in the numbers of those who poured out welcome.

The mutual association, on the long coast-to-coast journey, unquestionably gave Canada and Elizabeth a tigher claim upon each other's affections.

Too, it gave Elizabeth a plainer understanding of Canada's loyalty to the Monarch.

All that, observers agree, enhanced her regal make-up; fitted one more element into the personality that is a queen.

'Death of Monarch' Salute Of 101 Rounds Fired by British Division Stationed in Korea

With the British Commonwealth Division, Korea, Feb. 7 (AP) —Artillery guns of the First British Commonwealth Division fired 101 rounds across the snow covered Korean battlefront today in the "death of the Monarch" salute to the King.

The first shot was fired on the extreme right flank of the division's line. Then the firing moved across the front from gun to gun at one-minute intervals.

The 10-gun salute was followed 15 minutes later by a 21-gun salute in honor of Britain's new Queen.

Word of the King's death reached division headquarters last night. It was relayed by field telephone to all units, but it was this morning before the saddening news reached many of the men in their snow-rimmed foxholes.

In front of the division command post, the flag of the United Nations, the Union Jack and the divisional standard hung side by side at half-staff. They will remain lowered until further notice, probably after the King's funeral.

The news cast a shadow across the division's front, where loyal subjects from many parts of the Commonwealth are engaged in a war against both the reds and the cold.

The division's mimeographed newspaper "The Crown News" carried a black bordered headline across the top of the front page which reads:

"The King is dead."

At the bottom of the page in large letters were the words:

"Long live Queen Elizabeth II."

Chaplains of all units of the division planned memorial church services Sunday at 11 a.m. Most of the services will be held outdoors.

From headquarters this message was sent to London:

"Please convey the following message to Her Majesty the Queen. The United Kingdom, Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and Indian contingents of the 1st Commonwealth Division present their humble duty to Her Majesty the Queen and wish to convey their deepest sympathy on Your Majesty's and our great loss."

Coronary Thrombosis Given as Cause Of King's Death

Sandringham, England, Feb. 7—(CP) — Coronary thrombosis was the cause of the King's death, it was learned today.

Court officials announced that a thrombosis—a blood clot that reached the heart—was the immediate cause of death.

The King's doctors announced that in his operation last Sept. 23, a cancerous lung was entirely removed. Three years earlier, he was operated on to relieve a vein disease that could have led to the formation of blood clots.

In London The Daily Express said today that the doctors who removed the King's lung "knew that he had only a short time to live. . . and it is almost certain the King also knew."

His Valedictory

London, Feb. 7 (AP) —Britain's Poet Laureate, John Masefield, yesterday published his valedictory for the late King George VI:

"O wisdom, who, with power infinite,
Utterest death to every creature born,
Grant to us now the mercy of thy light,
With comfort to beloved Queens who mourn."

Long-Familiar Markings Will Be Changed

Ottawa, Feb. 7 (CP) —A change in the monarchy brings change to Canada's social and economic fabric, too. Long-familiar markings, insignia and pictures will slowly disappear and give way to new ones.

With the proclamation of Queen Elizabeth II as head of the British Commonwealth, documents, coins, stamps, legal descriptions, toasts and even highway markings will undergo revision.

The most immediate noticeable social change will likely be the matter of toasts. It will be "to the Queen" and not "to the King." The national anthem will be "God Save the Queen."

The familiar initials "G.R." on postal trucks, which stand for George Rex," wi vlligeETAOIN George Rex," will give way to "E. R."—Elizabeth Regina.

Court cases fought for or against the Crown will be marked for or against Regina—and not Rex. lawyers appointed King's counsel — KC.—will be shown as Queen's Counsel—Q.C.

The provincial courts known as the Court of King's Bench, will become the Court of the Queen's Bench. Even highway signs will undergo change. The "King's Highways" running throughout Ontario likely will be called the "Queen's Highways."

And the famed King's Plate racing event in Toronto likely will be known in the future as the Queen's Plate, as it was when Queen Victoria reigned more than 50 years ago.

Cats Are Tougher

Carlin, Nev., Feb. 7 — (AP) — Cats are tougher than cars in these parts.

When school superintendent Herbert Chiara stepped on the starter of his car, the resulting fuss startled the neighborhood.

Chiara peered cautiously under the hood.

As he did, a black cat — noisy, battered and angry — zipped out and fled at top speed.

The car had to be towed to a garage for repairs to its fan.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

A TOUGH ROAD!

Injury and sickness riding herd on both junior and senior Hawks have exacted their toll of effectiveness from both squads. Last Monday's senior game between the Hawks and Kingston saw a skeleton squad carry the Belleville colors into action, and although it was bolstered by four junior players the old zip and zingo was missing. Red Doran, Vern Goyer, Keith MacDonald, Peter Jones, Moher, Day, Wardhaugh et al carried the brunt of the "going" and were tired but plenty when the whistle sounded "Cease Fire".

Coach Doran is hopeful that some of the injured and sick will be back in action for tomorrow night's turnout down Kingston way with Sacs. And at the same time he is keeping his fingers crossed to ward off any sudden attacks injury and sickness might launch at other members of the team. Gerry Desjardins had an X-ray of his fractured leg the other day and the reports were good. It is hoped the "speedy winger will see action before too many days have fled. Peter Jones who suffered a four-stitch gash on Monday night will be back in action tomorrow as will "Junior" Barrett. And the Hawks are going to need all the strength they can garner for they have a tough grind ahead in what is left of the schedule.

They have six games to play, three of them with Kingston including tomorrow night's joust. Two of them are played away. They play two games with the Petes, one here and the other with the Eagles in Peterborough.

* * *

KEEP 'EM BUSY!

The junior Hawklets likewise have a man's job on their hands, albeit a lot depends on the results of games between Lindsay and Peterborough in the mad dash down the stretch. They tucked one welcome win under their collective belts Tuesday night over the Kingston Vics but they had to go all out in a listless tussle to grab the laurel wreath. Neither team came up with any spectacular display of hockey and it seems the Hawks need plenty of work between now and the playoffs to get them back into stride. The return of Strahan and Jacklin has put the team back into its original set - up with the exception of Harry Brown, but the youngsters have not been playing the style and brand of hockey they dished up earlier in the season.

Work and plenty of it should turn the trick if they are to be the force they are capable of being. They're back in action tomorrow night against the Kingston Vics and although the Max Jackson squad has no hopes of getting out of the cellar slot they can make things mighty nasty for the rest of the field. They have beaten the Hawks, Links and Kinsmen in their stride and they're liable to come up with a monkey-wrench performance that will raise hob with the playoff spot aspirations of somebody. They should not be sold short. The Hawks - Vics game is the main attraction at Oldtimers' Night at Memorial Arena tomorrow, and it is expected the largest crowd of the season will see them in action. They will not get a better chance to sell themselves to the public since with the Oldtimers in action a lot of people will be on hand who have yet to see the juniors play. It's their big night; let's hope it will be "their finest hour".

RABBIT PIE!

Some of the boys are having a spot of luck shooting the bunnies. Some of 'em eat 'em — others don't. We're told by one rabbit pie enthusiast, "Close your eyes and you can't tell it from chicken". You take it. We prefer the bunny with the pinfeathers. However we're told that rabbit pie is tasty, and for lovers of this dish we're passing on a recipe given to us. Here tis:—

Cut the rabbit into frying pieces. Brown in frying pan on top of stove. Remove meat and cool. Cut meat into small pieces. To the liquid in the frying pan, add one cup of port. Put rabbit and juices in deep baking dish. Cut up and add one onion. Bake at 350 degrees until tender. Add one can of condensed mushroom soup. Cover with biscuit dough and bake until done.

Yank Ski-ers Need Training In Europe

St. Anton, Austria, Feb. 7 (AP) —The United States will never become a power in world and Olympic ski championships until it starts sending its young stars to Europe for experience, two-well known instructors said today.

The opinion was expressed by Emile Allais, France's former champion who now is coaching the American men's ski team for next week's winter Olympics, and Herbert Jochum, Austrian ski master who is coaching American women.

Except for Andrea Mean Lawrence, and possibly Jannette Burr, the Americans do not figure to win any championships in the winter Olympics, beginning Feb. 14 in Oslo.

Mrs. Lawrence and Miss Burr are the prize examples cited by Allais and Jochum as proof of their argument. Both were sent on a racing tour of Europe last year by the U.S. National Ski Association.

FOUND BLOSSOMS

Guelph, Ont., Feb. 7 — (CP) — The first sign of spring has appeared here. Mrs. W. M. Drummond the other day found blossoms on two pussy willow bushes on which catkins seldom appear until late March.

Canadiens Clash With Wings With Second Place at Stake

(By The Canadian Press)

Montreal Canadiens meet Detroit Red Wings tonight with second place at stake. The Montrealers, with a win can move one point in front of Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Leafs game against New York Rangers was postponed Wednesday night to a later date because of the death of the King. The Toronto team is idle tonight, with New York at Chicago in the only other scheduled National Hocky League game.

While the Canadiens have one of the best opportunities they have had in weeks to overtake Toronto the Montrealers' board of strategy isn't as optimistic as it might be.

Attempting to move up in the standing at the expense of Detroit is a tough enough proposition when a team is at its best.

The Canadiens won't be at their best tonight.

Richard Out

Maurice (Rocket) Richard won't make the trip. The groin injury forced him to return to Montreal and he will be examined by a number of specialists.

In addition, rookie Dickie Moore is an uncertain starter. Moore is still suffering from a knee injury.

The lowly Chicago Black Hawks and the New York Rangers tussle will have little affect on the standing. The New Yorkers are six points behind fourth-place Boston Bruins, and Chicago is in the cellar with 33 points.

Richard's forced retirement practically eliminates any chance he had of catching Gordie Howe for the scoring championship of the league. The Rocket is 10 points behind the ace Detroit winger, and with the games he will be missing during his lay-off, the difference in total will mount higher.

Jap Ski Team May Prove Olympic Threat

Oslo, Feb. 7—(AP)—Long time isolated Japan expects to come back this winter in the Olympic market.

Scandinavian and international experts agreed only a few days ago that the Olympic slalom and downhill events would be settled in the traditional way between Switerland, Italy and France with some Scandinavians next in the prize list.

Today they were scratching their heads, reconsidering their speculations.

"Yes, we agree. Our boys look fine, Katsuji Ogawa, vice-president of the Japanese Skiing Association commented on the spectacular performances in the Roedkleiva Slalom slope by the Japenese champion, 20-year-old high school student Chiharu Igaya, and No. 2 man Hishashi Mizugami.

"We had our skiing boys sent to St. Anton, Austria, for one month of expert training and they were in good shape when they came up from there two days ago" Ogawa said.

There are three first-class jumpers on the Japanese team including Hiroji Yoshizawa, the 20-year-old student champion of Japan in 1951 with a record jump of 77 metres. Other members are Tatsuo Watanabe, 23, capable of 76 metres, and Kozo Kawashima, 25, with a top jump of 71.5 metres.

The Oslo Olympic games will bring Japan back into international skiing competition for the first time in 16 years. There is little doubt that Japan will become one of the big dark horses during these games.

Believe Canadian Girl Will Bring Home First Olympic Ski Points

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Oslo, Norway, Feb. 7—(CP)—Mrs. Rhoda Wurtele Eaves confidently expects to bring Canada its first points in Olympic skiing history.

The 25-year-old veteran of the Canadian women's team has shown top form since her arrival in Norway in mid-January and the experts from other competing countries have kept a sharp eye on the Montrealer while she practises.

She worked out with the Canadian Alpine team yesterday and by far showed the best form among the Canadian women.

Topflight Form

Rhoda injured an ankle while training for the 1948 Olympics and failed to place in the games. This time the Canadian team officials and Norwegian experts figure she has an excellent chance of taking one of the women's events in the slalom, downhill or giant slalom.

The Canadian team went through a stiff 90-minute workout at Rodkieval Olympic slalom course and Rhoda was the only one on the women's team to show top-flight form.

Observers say that with any luck she is a cinch to place in the first six of the women's events and they are not overlooking the possibility she'll return to Canada with an Olympic gold medal.

Canada has never placed first in skiing—men or women—since the winter games started in Chamonix, France in 1924.

The Canadian Alpine team leaves today for the Norefjell downhill and giant slalom courses for a week's hard training. Norefjell is about 13 miles northwest of Oslo. The jumpers and cross-country men will complete their training around Oslo.

The jumpers were out yesterday but heavy fog prevented practice.

The figure-skaters also were out despite rainfall in the city that covered the ice with almost an inch of water.

Spitfires Upset Galt Hawks 6-4; Dukes Nip Bilts

(By The Canadian Press)

The third-place Galt Black Hawks bumped into a red-hot Windsor Spirtfires club last night and ended up as the victims of the Spits' biggest upset in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series this season.

With only 800 fans on hand, the Spitfires cut down the Hawks 6-4 in Windsor to gain their eighth win against 33 losses and four ties and move out of the cellar by one point. Oshawa Generals, idle last night, dropped down to the last rung.

In only other junior A action, Toronto Marlboros boosted their first-place lead over Guelph Biltmores by blanking the eighth-place Waterloo Hurricanes 8-0 in Waterloo. A four-goal effort by Danny Poland highlighted the game.

Meanwhile in the senior A games the league-leading Stratford Indians knocked off the third-place Brantford Redmen with a 9-4 triumph in Stratford and Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen edged Owen Sound Mercurys 4-3 before a home crowd of 1,807 fans.

Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds clinched first place in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior A league with a 5-1 win over Sudbury Wolves at Sault Ste. Marie. It was the Greyhounds' 24th victory and shoved them 17 points out in front of the Wolves with eight games left to play for each club.

Windsor was outshot by Galt in every period but, in spite of this, managed to take a 3-2 lead in the first period and a 5-3 margin in the second.

Kingston Wins Zone Curling

Kingston, Feb. 7 (CP) —A Kingston rink skipped by J. G. W. Sands yesterday won the right to compete for the provincial curling championship in Toronto by defeating a Renfrew rink 16-5 in zone playoffs here.

Three members of the Kingston team—Sands, Bernie Tetro and Howard Reid—were skips in the Kingston double win last week of the Ontario Tankard and Governor-General's Trophy

Sands' rink had little trouble with the Renfrew rink skipped by Tom L. Cuthbertson. In the 12 end game, Sands gave up points in only three ends.

(By The Canadian Press)

New Westminster Royals' 13-game record smashing unbeaten streak in the Pacific Coast League has been brought to an abrupt halt Edmonton Flyers did the trick last night with a 3-1 win over the Royals at New Westminster.

In the only other league game, Tacoma Rockets scored four goals in less than two minutes in the third period to trounce Seattle Ironmen 7-3.

Frank Kubasek, Jim Uniac and Sid McNabney scored Edmonton's goals. The lone New Westminster counter was fired by Gordie Fashoway.

The Tacoma marksmen were Clem MacDonald, Mark Marquess, Ted O'Connor, Moe Young, Wingy Johnson, Barton Bradley and Len Halderson. The Seattle scorers were Rudy Fillon, Stan Maxwell and Walt Samanski.

HELPS TO LIVE LONG

Toronto, Feb. 7 — (CP) — The board of management of the Toronto Aged Men's and Women's Homes said yesterday at its annual meeting that it believes kindly care, good food, warmth and freedom from worry help persons to live long. For proof it cited the average age of the 241 residents in the homes: 82 years.

Glen Roys Win Over Trenton 8-6 In Rousing Valley League Tussle

Earl Cousins' goal in the first two minutes of play in the third period proved the winner in a fast Trent Valley Hockey League game here last night as the Glen Roys finally defeated the Trenton Jewellers 8-6. Leo Goyer fired home the clincher after six minutes of play.

The Glens finally shook the Trenton "jinx" having lost all their starts to date with the town crew.

The game was see-saw battle for two periods with Trenton grabbing a two-goal lead in the first to have Glens tie it up. Johnson put the Jewellers one up in the last five minutes and Schmidt added another as the bell rang to make it 4-2.

Tied in Second

The score juggled in the second as the Gle - outscored the opposition 4-2 to tie the count at six-all going into the third. The Glens tied it up early in the period only to have the visitors go out in front twice. The teams scored three goals in 59 seconds at one stage of this heat. Two down with four minutes to go Hurst and Goyer scored for the Glens to create the stalemate.

Cousins slung home Brian Mulvihill's pass after 1.44 in the proved the winner. Leo Goyer backhanded a low drive four minutes later for the insurance and the Glens held off the battling Jewellers over the rest of the route to win.

Leo Goyer paced the Glen's attack with three goals and an assist with Brian Mulvihill scoring on a neat solo effort and being given credit for four assists. Earl Cousins drove home a pair and got a helper while Tim Williams and Bill Hurst each scored. Loveless was given two assists.

Watson was the trigger man for the Jewellers firing home two goals. Jones, Scott, Johnson, Schmidt and Filion got the remainder.

Eight penalties were handed out, seven going to the Glens.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Dr. J. B. Kirkpatrick, president of the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union, announced today that all CIAU activities have been cancelled until after the funeral of the King.

The board of referance, acting unanimously on the decision, said respect for the late King should be shown in athletics as in other spheres.

The organizing committee of the Oslo Winter Olympic Games yesterday ordered all national flags at the Olympic villages to be flown at halfstaff in mourning for the late King George VI.

The flags include those of Poland, Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia from communist-dominated eastern Europe.

New York Giants landed the signature of one of their "big three" hurlers yesterday when righthander Jim Hearn came to terms. Hearn had a 17-9 record last season and earned a $2,500 raise to $21,000. The Giants still have a little dickering to do with Sal Maglie and Larry Jansen, the other key members of the hurling staff.

Pete Reiser, National League batting champion in 1941 and a pinch-hitter for Pittsburgh Pirates last season, was signed as a free agent by Cleveland Indians yesterday. "I don't see how Reiser can help but prove valuable," Tribe general manager Hank Greenberg said. "Last season he got 11 hits in 33 times as a pinch-hitter, and that's pretty good clutch batting in any company."

Edmonton Mercurys, Canada's hockey entry in the winter Olympics at Oslo, defeated a Swedish team 8-1 last night at Soedertaelje, near Stockholm.

At Providence, R.I., jockey Carroll Haire, 20, of Lincoln, R.I., pleaded no contest yesterday to two indictments returned in the recent Grand Jury investigation of race fixing at Rhode Island tracks. At the request of John Dilibero, handling his defence as public defender, the cases were continued three weeks for sentence.

Haire was accused of accepting $700 from T. Paul Kanall of Winthrop, Mass., to pull a horse named Flyaround at Lincoln Downs racetrack on Nov. 6, 1950, and of corrupting Charley Mullins, another jockey by paying him $700 to pull a horse named Transegret the same day. Both horses were favorites. Flyaround finished next to last and Transegret was second.

'Baseball' Goal Wins Game For Syracuse

(By The Canadian Press)

Syracuse Warriors proved the giant killers last night when they downed King Clancy's Pittsburgh Hornets 4-3 in an American Hockey League game.

It had little effect on the standings with the Hornets leading both sections of the loop, with 73 points 11 ahead of their nearest rivals.

Jim Morrison scored Pittsburgh's first goal midway in the third period a fluke goal by Bob Hassard cut the Warriors' margin to 3-2 with eight minutes left. But Syracuse team got one of its luckiest goals of the season to seal the verdict late in the struggle.

Kelly Burnett made a baseball swing at a high-flying puck and knocked it 18 feet, still in the air, past goalie Gil Mayer.

Armand Lemieux and Keith Allen tallied for Syracuse in the first period and Bill Gooden got the third goal early in the second session.

At Buffalo, George Pargeter scored his first goal of the season as the Bisons downed the crippled St. Louis Flyers 8-5.

The Bisons wrapped up the game with four goals in the middle period. Calum Mackay and Eddie Mazur sparked the attack with two goals each while Harry Dick, Eldy Kobussen and Ab Demarco scored one each.

At Cincinnati, the Mohawks moved a bit closer toward playoffs edging Indianapolis 2-1.

Paul Masnik got the first Cincinnati goal in the second period only to have Jim McKay tie the count. Gus Schwartz racked up the winning marker at 10:25 with a 15-foot shot from a difficult angle.

At Hershey, Cleveland Barons continued their climb toward first place in the western division of the league by defeating Hershey Bears 3-1.

The Bears took the lead in the second period on a goal by Gerry Toppazzini. Steve Wochy sparked the Barons to victory. Twice within five minutes in the final period he scored.

Water Streeters Lose to Office

A four-goal splurge in the third period gave Office a 6-3 win over Water Street in a Northern Electric Hockey League game played at the Memorial Arena last night.

Each team tallied once in the opening frame and again in the second, Water Street grabbing the lead both times only to have Office tie it up. Water Street scored the initial goal of the third period to regain the lead but Office tied it up again at the six minute mark and went on to fire three more markers before the final bell to wrap up the verdict.

Lund led the winners with three goals, all scored in the third period. Lynch banged home a pair and Philp picked up the other goal and one assist. Assists were credited to Woodley, James and Thrasher.

Graham, Barrett and Hurst tallied single goals for Water Street, Barrett also assisting on one. Creeggan and O'Brien also assisted for one marker.

Lindsay Trims Petes Links 9-6

Lindsay Kinsmen defeated th Peterborough Triple Links 9-6 in scheduled Junior 'B' game in Peterborough last night.

The win gives the Links top spc in the group standing, one poir ahead of the Belleville Hawklets.

Jockeys, 21 May be Made Court Wards

Miami, Fla., Feb. 7 (AP) — American jockeys under 21 years of age would be made wards of the juvenile court under a plan proposed by Judge A. A. Scott of Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles jurist, for seven years judge of the juvenile court in that county, outlined his plan in conferences yesterday with officials of the Jockey Guild and Hialeah race course.

Under the plan, boys under 21 would be made wards of the court for supervision of their contracts and protection of their interests until they become of age.

"Our plan, in effect only in Los Angeles county at present, has worked to the tremendous advantage of young jockeys ever since it started several years ago," Judge Scott reported.

He said 70 per cent of the boys' net earnings is placed in a trust fund and held under the court's jurisdiction until the boy becomes of age, at 21, he is on his own.

From this point on, B.C.I. held the Albert squad fairly even but were unable to overcome the great lead which the winners had built up.

Albert led 18-3 at the end of the first quarter, 25-13 at half, and by the time that the end of the third quarter rolled around the score was Albert College 33, B.C.I. 26.

Hollywood, Feb. 7—(AP)—Annette Kellerman, the woman who revolutionized beach styles, today predicted the decline of the Bikini bathing suit.

This is hardly the time to be talking about bathing suits. But it won't be long before North American women will be shopping for beach wear. Miss Kellerman, who popularized the one-piece suit, declared the girls will be hitting the beaches with more cover-up than the French-style suits afford.

"I don't think women like the Bikini suit," she declared. "The women who have worn them have told me they feel uncomfortable and conspicuous in them. Besides, they expose some of the less graceful parts of the anatomy."

Mack Sennett, who also helped revolutionize beach apparel with his bathing beauties, has predicted that the trend in swim styles will reach the point where suits will be dispensed with. Miss Kellerman doesn't agree with that.

"I don't think women will ever appear on the beaches in the nude," she commented. "It isn't a matter of modesty, because that can change with the times. The reason is that only one woman in 100,000 has the right kind of physique to appear in the nude. Most women prefer to wear suits, which can cover up whatever physical inadequacies they might have."

Miss Kellerman, who swam in starring movies before Esther Williams was born, has opposed the scanty suits since they were imported from the Riviera.

"If I had known that women were going to wear those flimsy pieces of cloth, I don't think I would have started it all by introducing the one-piece suit," she sighed.

"But on the whole, I'm glad I did. I think modern bathing suits have a very good effect on women. In the old-fashioned suits, every woman looked the same, no matter what kind of figure she had. But now they have to pay attention to their figures, especially in the summertime."

AT THE CAPITOL — Frankie Laine (top), Toni Arden, Jerome Courtland, Billy Daniels and Terry Moore are in "Sunny Side of the Street," Columbia's Supercinecolor musical at the Capitol Theatre, Friday and Saturday. On the same program, Johnny Weismuller in "Jungle Manhunt". Both hits are first showings.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Friday, February 8

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Though day may not be all favorable you should find much inner verve and turn the tide of a fortune your way. Make mediocre leads into good returns by keen judging and acting.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Curb impulse to express opinions freely where it means little but personal satisfaction. Be patient with irritable persons, situations; things run more smoothly when we help harmony

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—More generous day than you suppose. Dig deep into facts, ask questions, improvement is always possible. P.M. may have some unfriendly leanings: mark time, rather than fight it.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Day offers much and in varied ways. You can improve your position, enhance your personality, increase assets. Don't rush things; study, and be alert to use best course available.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo) — While enjoying your good fortune, lend a helping hand to the less fortunate and receive God's blessings. Day sponsors co-operation, good neighbor policy for benefit of mankind.

August 23 to September 23 — (Virgo)—Quietly view things before deciding on any changes or moves that might be costly. Errors occur with haste, overanxiety More headway if you proceed in sensible manner.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Heed advice to Virgo today. Benefits in proven projects, familiar work, helpful organizations. Remember new, unfamiliar matters have new hazards. Think twice before acting.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Sort of day that can be called very practical. Be alert to fine advantages. Forget the little unessentials and annoyances; point for big things in a really big way.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius) — Executive, employee, home body, student will do well to work in harmony for joint success. Amenable attitude advocated all-round, and less self-centreness. Show your bright nature.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Can be one of your fine days; aspects indicate opportunity. Are you going to use it? Forget the past, how well you did or didn't, set up a new front with revitalized ambition.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius) — Opportune time to seek new advantages, good openings now evident. Avoid any display of temper or unruly emotions and you can sail through to a happy and satisfying ending.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)— During a.m., exercise extra caution in money and business dealings. Afternoon; better propsects for your imaginative, intuitive mind. Romance, domesticity stress delicacy, consideration.

YOU BORN TODAY: Good outlook, much for which to be thankful. Follow through and really make your fine self felt. Seek higher education, and sturdily heed religious inclinations. To get to the top, ask daily, "Am I doing the right thing?" You often disclose facts which explode others' theories; you can cut corners in problems. Have a logical mind, use it. Are inventive, constructive when alert. Look around, pep yourself up daily and advance.

Birthdate: Jules Verne, famed writer; John Ruskin, author, critic; Wm. Tecumseh Sherman, American general; Lana Turner, actres..

WHY WE SAY

PIN-UP GIRL

. . . A war idea

The pin-up girl started during World War II. At that time, Walter Thornton offered General Powell, who was in command of Fort Dix, N. J., a batch of 5,000 photos which the boys could pin up on their walls to keep up morale. The phrase first appeared in Yank, April 30, 1943.

Kids May Soon Be Asked For Penny for Puppet

Florence, Italy, Feb. 7 — (Reuters) — The children of the world may soon be asked to "give a penny for Pinocchio."

But before that can happen a committee of adults will have to settle a 25-year-old argument over what they want to do with the money once they get it.

What they can't decide is whether to erect a statue of the puppet, known to youngsetrs the world over, or one to the forgotten man who thought him up.

Lorenzini, creator of Pinocchio, was brought up in the village of Collodi near here, and wrote under the pen-name Carlo Collodi. He died in 1890.

Literary and historical purists would like to raise a monument in the main square to the man — Lorenzini of Carlo Collodi.

Other villagers with an eye for the tourist trade would like a statue of Pinocchio.

"If no one remembers the name of Lorenzini, then they ought to be reminded of it," say the purists. "Who ever, heard of a statue of a puppet?"

"If Pinocchio stands on the monument, everyone will stop to look at it," say their opponents. "Who can deny that Pinocchio is more famous than his creator?"

A compromise proposal is to build a statue to Lorenzini and to Pinocchio at the same time.

Extremist scruples would be nicely satisfied, argue supporters of the compromise, if the monument portrayed the man Lorenzini holding the puppet Pinocchio in his arms.

Pinocchio, they add, might perhaps be a bit jealous of Peter Pan, who has a fine statue of himself in London's Kensington Gardens while there are no really well-known monuments to his father, James Barrie.

The debate continues sporadically in a committee headed by Professor Rolando Anzilotti.

Anzilotti, a lecturer at Florence University, is confident that concrete steps will be taken in the not too distant future.

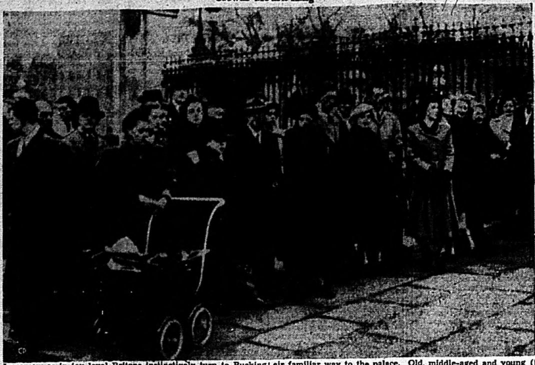
Crowds Mourn King



In sorrow as in joy loyal Britons instinctively turn to Buckingham Palace. Early Wednesday morning, when news came of the death of the King, shocked, almost unbelieving Londoners made their familiar way to the palace. Old, middle-aged and young (there is a baby in the perambulator at left) early arrivals are shown gathering outside the palace gates. — (CP Photo.)

FRANKFORD

Frankford—The ladies of the Women's Association of the Frankford United Church, will be presenting a three-act play in the Rose-Lowery Hall on Wednesday evening, February 27. The play, "Simple Simon Simple" comes highly recommended and should provide an excellent evening of entertainment, especially since it is the first play of the season in Frankford. Bills will be posted shortly with further details.

Mrs. William Rankin attended the funeral of her brother-in-law in Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. John Brownlie of Marmora was a Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes.

Christian Youth Week

Special Sunday School and church services were held in the Frankford United Church Sunday, in recognition of Christian Youth Week. In the morning, Mr. John Brownlie, three-time member for South Hastings in the Boys Parliament, spoke to over 180 members of the Sunday school, outlining the aims, progress, and benefits of Boys Parliament. John Brownlie is the son of Canon J. M. Brownlie of Marmora Anglican Church, and his splendid personality won him many friends in Frankford.

In the evening the Canadian Girls in Training, and the Boy Scouts took part in the service of worship, the girls acting as choir, and the boys assisting with the worship and ushering.

Rev. MacEachern's sermon was of special interest to the youth. It was a most fitting and appropriate tribute to the future leaders of the church and society in this, "Christian Youth Week."

3M Club

The regular monthly meeting of the 3M Club of the Frankford United Church was held in the Rose-Lowery Hall on Monday evening, with better than 20 members present. Presidents Claude and Marjorie Moran took charge of the opening with a call to worship.

In the business session it was planned to have an installation service for the officers of the club on the Sunday service, March 9th.

The club unanimously agreed that they would take on as a project the provision of certain items of equipment to the Junior Sunday School. A committee consisting of Sid Martin, Ruth Beach, Eileen Conley and Arnold Stickle was appointed to supervise the operation of this project.

To Return Invitation

It is hoped in a not-too-distant meeting, the Friday Nighters' Club of King Street United Church in Trenton will be invited back, in return for the splendid evening they provided for the Frankford folk a few months ago.

The possibility of obtaining pins or crests for the club is being investigated and a full report will be given at a later date.

The meeting was then turned over to Delbert Badgley and Vera Montgomery for the worship service. They led in an impressive worship period, based on the theme of "Fellowship."

Sid and Evelyn Martin took charge of recreation. The club was divided into four groups and each group had to put on ladies' hats which had been brought by each member and scrambled on a table at the back. Actually, it is amazing what a lady's hat can do for some men! Some of the creations were simply out of this world!

Song-Writing Contest

A song writing contest was conducted among the groups, and although all four groups ranked with Irving Berlin, Bill Bleecker's group had a slight edge in the field of composition.

Musical charades featured the acting out of "Baby, It's Cold Outside," "Shrimp Boats," "God Save the King" and "Peter Cottontail."

Refreshments were served to conclude a most enjoyable evening. Rev. MacEachern pronounced the benediction.

Variety Concert

The Frankford Lions Club presented a variety concert in the Community Memorial Hall Friday night and the citizens of the village are unanimously agreed that it was one of the finest programs seen in this part of the country in years.

Pres. Preston Chase of the Lions Club introduced the master of ceremonies, Lion Bert Carter, welcoming all to the program. Lion Bert introduced Band Manager Wilmott Rose, who in turn presented Bandmaster Charles Butcher. The band gave a creditable performance, with a half hour program. Wilmott led in a community sing-song which was also greatly enjoyed.

The Rondeaunettes, who are no strangers to Frankford, presented several numbers, and received a tumultous ovation for their offerings. This group of young people is winning the heart of every music lover in the Bay of Quinte district.

Barbership Quartet

Frankford had its first introduction to real old fashioned barbershop quartet music as the Quintones of Belleville presented several numbers. The Quintones are well-known throughout the district, and were heartily received by the large audience.

Local talent included Mr. Bill Gill, baritone of Batawa and Miss Wiley of Murray Township with her "musical tumblers" accompanied by Mrs. Dorland on the piano. They, also, gave fine performances.

On completion of the program, refreshments were served by the Lions Ladies to the artists.

To the artists, who gave their time and talent voluntarily, a hearty vote of thanks is due for an excellent performance. The Lions Club also is to be congratulated for its direction and arrangement for this evening of entertainment.

Now I enjoy my meals again, am rid of that awful gas, sour stomach and indigestion that used to distress me so. I am also free of headaches and the other aches and pains; backache is gone away and actually I feel like a different person."

We banish fear

Pardon us, but we think we help make this town and this world a better place for a lot of people, because we drive out fears.

The insurance policies we write enable people to forget fear of losses by fire, windstorm, burglary, theft, hold-up, personal accidents, and damage suits for accidental injuries to people or property.

We bring a definite factor of safety and security to life in this community. A lot of folks here will tell you we've added to the serenity of their lives.

We're fear fighters.

Dr. Logan's Wife

By Diana Gaines

Through the black wash of silence broken by the sparkle of passing street lamps and the swish of passing cars, Walter Pelletier piloted the car as though it were a leaking ship on a rough sea, shifting and braking and steering with care and penance. Gus Logan beside him, was still, closed up and still with the pent stillness of a mortally wounded animal who knows there is more battle to come. Pelletier was suffering for the man's suffering.

But one cannot on a sudden empty mind. Over and over again, his dull mind sorted the blocks of image and speech and tone and circumstance that had built the evening's catastrophe. If only it were just a catastrophe of an evening and not of a life, and if only it were only one life and not two, not three. Why did meanings and implications have to linger after the death of the spoken word to infect the listener with death? Over and over again Pelletier found himself into the bloodletting of the last irrevocable hour, trying by empirical insistence—"this I saw" "this I heard," to understand or at least to believe the blow had fallen on Gus Logan's head. Not the swift terrible blow of an act of God from which one reels and then in convalescence touches with wonder and religion, but the poisoned swipe of man against man from which there is no recovery nor even the will to recover.

Pelletier made the turn on Whiteoaks with great care, swinging wide from the boulevard. He slowed without a jerk to the Logan curb.

Gus turned to him. "Thanks Walt you've been very kind. I'm all right now. I won't ask you in. You understand. I want to see Jennet."

Pelletier nodded dumbly. He reached across Gus and pulled down the door level. "Call me at home if you need me Gus."

"I will. But I'm all right."

Pelletier watched his friend walk to the house with the round-shouldered self-protective shuffle of the cardiac. He saw him let himself in with his key, watched the lights snap on in three different windows like eyes opening. And then because he was too dull to know what else to do he drove home. He had said he would be at home.

Who could have foreseen that neither he nor Gus would be present at the voting so that Cota and his stooges would win?

Jennet, who had seen Pelletier's car drive up, heard the front door open and close, called "Gus?" out of habit, and bounced down the stairs. Her hair was down and she liked to feel it fly up from her neck with each step, so she bounced harder and higher the way a child does. She held her left hand, on which the painted nails were not quite dry, high and spread. The taffeta skirt of her housecoat made rich balletic noises.

"Hi, darling. Home early!" she called, trying to sound glad, as if she had not painted Peter's face on every glossed fingertip.

Gus stood, waiting for her, in the middle of the room. She ran to him, her arms up. He pushed her away and she started at his strange stern expression.

"Why Gus! What's the matter?"

Into the moment of silence between them, Gus dropped his question. "Did you or did you not give a $1,200 check to Peter Surinov?"

The indignation melted and ran down her face.

"Yes, I did," she said. "But I can explain, Gus. It's a long story. I didn't. . ."

"Just how long a story is it?" Gus inquired. "I thought you met him for the first time at the Pelletiers."

"I did Gus. I did. I haven't been—how can you imply such a thing to me?"

"For what other reason does a woman who is not rich give a man such a sum of money—secretly, so that her husband will not know?"

"Gus, if you'd just sit down. I can explain. . ."

"I can hear perfectly well standing up."

"But it's not good for you—this anger—please."

"Your concern for my welfare is a little late."

She walked over to him then. "Oh Gus, stop it. You sound like the father in a Victorian novel. Look, I really haven't done anything wrong. I haven't been unfaithful to you, I swear it. Please let me tell you. . ."

He pushed her hand off his arm. "You really mean he is a Communist—and so are you?"

Jennet stamped her foot. Her voice crescendoed. "Stop it, I say. If you won't sit down and listen to me like a civilized human being, I won't say another word. Not another word, do you hear?"

She flounced out of the room in jeering taffeta and started up the stairs.

Gus Logan ran to the stairs his hands on the spokes of the balustrade, his knees bent, his face between the bars. "Jenny, oh, Jenny, don't do this to me. I will listen. Come back and tell me it's not true—tell me I'm crazy, dreaming. I love you, Jenny. I love you so much I'm dying of it." His voice was so broken she thought he was crying. She came flying back down and she caught his sobbed words to her breast. They clung to each other for a moment, and then she led him to the couch and sat at his feet. With one hand Gus covered his eyes, and Jennet swung up to snap off the lamp. She sat down on the floor again and stroked the palm that lay open on his knee, and then she closed her hand around it.

"My poor darling, listen to me. I did meet Peter for the first time at the Pelletiers'. I've only seen him four times in my life altogether. The morning after the party, you remember, I brought that medical paper down to Walter Pelletier and Peter was there and he offered to show me his lab. I told you that. Then last Monday night, you had a meeting. I was on my way home and I bumped into him and went to that cursed lecture with him—that's when it all started."

"So it did all start."

"Not what you mean, Gus, listen—you promised."

"Go ahead. I'm listening."

"I tried to tell you how upset I was after that lecture. I felt—oh I know it doesn't make sense—but I felt sort of personally responsible for those wretched people he talked about who live in rat-ridden, smelly houses. Nothing was going to go right in my lovely home, I was going to be punished and punished until I made up in some way for my sin."

"What sin?"

"What sin?" Jennet echoed. "I don't know. The sin of selfishness, I guess. The sin of having a nice home while others live like pigs."

"Tell me honestly, Jenny, this is not time for tact. Maybe the love that I thought there was between us—maybe it's all in my own head. Don't you love me, Jennet?"

"Of course," she said. "Of course, I love you, darling. And you've always been kind and good and marvelously understanding and I am lucky to have your love. But just this one thing—well, I thought you'd tell me I was silly. And I was silly, but that was neither here nor there because I was also desperate. I thought if I gave a lot of money—not just five or 10 dollars like you said because I wouldn't miss that—but a big amount." She paused, chewed her thumbnail pensively. "But of course I really didn't miss this because it was something I never used, but it worked, so it must have been the right amount."

"What are you talking about, Jennet? What do you mean— you don't use it? Where did you get the money? Do you have a saving account some place that you never told me about."

"Gus, you must believe me. Remember that old lavaliere I had in the vault? That diamond thing I always meant to have reset? I took it to Chagiantz. He gave me $1,200 for it."

"Now it is not only the medical executive committee, but the tradesmen too. The circle widens. Chagiantz is a gossip in this town. He thinks my wife had to sell a piece of jewelry to raise money."

"Please, Gus. He won't say anything. He promised he wouldn't."

"Promised!" Gus exploded.

"He says this sort of thing happens every day in his shop. Movie stars, celebrities—the richest people sell their jewelry. What's there to be ashamed of?"

"This whole thing is clear as mud so far maybe if you go on. . ."

"Well, I—I did't want to write a check because—forgive me for this—I didn't want to have to explain. So I had a certified check made out to me."

"Say what you mean, Jennet," Gus rebuked her. "You didn't want me to find out. This way if I happened on it you could make up something. Are you good at making things up, Jennet?"

"I have never lied to you Gus, and there's no need for lies now. But oh, Gus, haven't you ever since we've been married done something or felt something or thought something that you knew I wouldn't understand?"

"No," Gus said. "Never."

She knew he spoke the truth.

"Anyway," she went on hopelessly, "I phoned Peter the next morning from my office and I told him I had something to give him. We had lunch—nowhere near the hospital dear, on some hill—and he thought I was crazy too, for giving so much, I mean, but he also said it was needed and that he would give it to a his friend at the housing association. That's the last I've seen of him. In fact, the last I'll ever see of him. I told him so yesterday at lunch. He's nothing to me Gus, nothing. A nice bright boy, a total stranger."

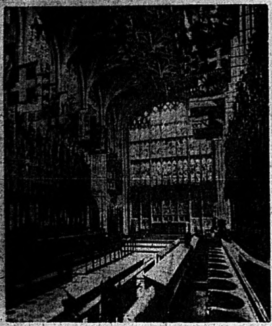
ELIZABETH PROCLAIMED QUEEN IN LONDON



Funeral services for the late King will be held in St. George's chapel, Windsor Castle, on Friday, February 15th. — Central Press Canadian.

THOUSANDS MEET TO HEAR READING OF PROCLAMATION

Sombre Throng Dressed In Colors of Mourning

London, Feb. 8. (AP)—Bannered trumpets sounded and field pieces boomed today as Britain drew forth centuries-old pageantry to proclaim the second "Good Queen Bess" in history.

Thousands gathered to hear the solemn reading of the proclamation from a high balcony of St. James's Palace.

They were a sombre throng, dressed in the dull colors of mourning for their King.

At precisely 11 a.m. (6 a.m. E.S.T.) a tiny bell tinkled behind the high walls of the palace yard.

Officers of the Coldstream Guards, wearing black armbands, barked sharp orders.

The Guardsmen snapped to attention, standing stiffly in their long gray coats and tall, black bearskin hats.

From the balcony, heralds with the Royal Coat of Arms blazoned of banners fluttering from their trumpets, blew three flourishes.

The Garter King-of-Arms, Sir George Bellew, stepped forward, wearing a richly-embroidered tabard, a short, loose-sleeved jacket of 15th century style.

His voice—deadened by traffic sounds—came over a specially installed public address system almost inaudibly. Only an occasional word reached the multitude looking up at him.

Reds Could Mount Jet Drive In 30 Days if Allies Stopped Bombing Fields General Warns

Tokyo, Feb. 8 (AP) —Lt.-Gen. Otto P. Weyland says if Allied air strikes are halted the reds could mount a tremendous jet armada from North Korean airfields within 30 days.

The Far East air forces commander said in an interview yesterday the communists have 15 good airfields which could be put into shape without much engineering effort. es All are located near supply points, such as railroads or seaports.

The reds have insisted on the right to rebuild airfields during an armistice.

Weyland and his air force generals opposed this—until Allied negotiators offered to compromise and let the reds rebuild some airfields for civilian use only.

But the general said today that commercial airfields could be converted to military airbases simply by supplying them with gas, oil and bombs.

Then—if the reds broke the truce —United Nations ground forces in Korea would be faced with a real threat from the air for the first time.

Repeated Allied bombings have destroyed the usefulness of such fields as Namsi, Saamchon, Taechon and Uiju—all in northwest Korea and all with 6,000 foot runways suited to communist jet operations.

But during a truce the Allied bombers would stay at home and the fields could be repaired.

Weyland said the reds worked frantically for a time to get jet fields into operation.

However, repair work virtually has stopped, Weyland said, "presumably they weren't getting anywhere because of our B-29s."

Two Bombs Found On Window Sill Of School Room

Philadelphia, Feb. 8—(AP) — Two "Molotov Cocktail" bombs were found with smouldering fuses last night on a window sill of a high school in North Philadelphia where authorities have been investigating reports of a "Hitler Youth Movement."

Firemen and police quenched the make-shift bombs before they could go off. The disovery was made less than a half-hour after the end of a regular meeting of an association of students' fathers.

Police reported each of the bombs was a gasoline-filled milk bottle with a rag which, similar to one which damaged a Jewish synagogue in the same neighborhood Jan. 18.

Fire battalion chief Edward Lutz said the smouldering fuses had scorched the sill but caused no other damage.

CROWNED HEADS OF SIX NATIONS TO PAY HOMAGE

Many Other Notables To Attend State Funeral

London, Feb. 8 —(AP) — The crowned heads of at least six countries are expected to attend the state funeral of King George VI next Friday.

France will be represented by President Vincent Auriol, Prime Minister Edgar Faure and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

President Truman is sending State Secretary Dean Acheson as his representative.

Ambassador Georgi Zarubin is considered the probable choice to take part in the rites for Russia.

Other countries will be represented by relatives of reigning royalty or senior diplomats in the British capital.

Royal heads of state expected to pay their last homage in person include:

King Gustav VI and Queen Louise of Sweden.
King Paul of Greece.
King Haakon VII of Norway.
King Frederik IX of Denmark.
Queen Juliana of The Netherlands, and her husband, Prince Bernhard.
King Feisal of Iraq.

Will Send Cousin

King Farouk of Egypt, who as crown prince attended the funeral of King George V in 1936, is sending his cousin, Prince Abdul Moneim.

Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia will delegate one of his sons to make the trip from his desert kingdom.

It is considered certain that the day of the funeral will be proclaimed a day of public mourning throughout the British Isles. All shops and stores except restaurants will be closed and only essential public services will be operated. Even grocers and butchers will close.

Officials who will take part in the ceremony of placing the body in state held a dress rehearsal at Westminster today to time the processions of peers from the House of Lords and of members of parliament from the House of Commons to the great hall.

The King's body will rest permanently in the royal family vault in St. George Chapel at Windsor, one of the family castles. It was here that the King, Queen Elizabeth, and Princess Elizabeth and Margaret spent much of their time during World War II.

Glittering Pageant Dating Back 1,000 Years Enacted

Queen Leaves With Philip For Sandringham by Car

London, Feb. 8 — (CP) — With a trumpet fanfare, a roll of drums and a 62-gun salute, Britain's young Queen today was proclaimed "Elizabeth II, by the Grace of God" in a glittering pageant dating back 1,000 years.

Bright wintry sunshine lit this city, heart of the British commonwealth, as the proclamation was read at historic St. James's Palace and all cities and towns in the land.

An hour earlier the 25-year-old Elizabeth, pale and wan at the death of her father, had told 200 of her Privy Councillors: "I pray that God will help me to discharge worthily this heavy task that has been laid upon me so early in my life."

Before the Privy Council, the royal body of advisers — she stood in black mourning clothes to read the solemn declaration of accession to the throne.

After today's swearing-in ceremony, Elizabeth and Prince Philip left by car for Sandringham. There she will join with her mother and sister in private mourning before the coffin is removed to London.

Earlier, thousands of the Queen's subjects waited in a chill wind to hear the proclamation read.

She had made her way to an ante-room of the white and gold throne room of St. James through a private passage from her home, Clarence House, unseen by the crowds.

Philip Accompanies Queen

With her went her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh. As she read the declaration in clear, ringing voice, she was watched by the Duke of Gloucester, her father's brother, Lord Woolton, Lord President of the Council, and Prime Minister Churchill.

She resolved to follow her father's "shining example of service and devotion," to work as he did "to uphold constitutional government and to advance the happiness and prosperity of my peoples."

Guardsmen in grey topcoats and black bearskins, their flags draped in black and drums covered, guarded the approaches to the palace.

In spite of her tiring 19-hour flight from Kenya she was up early and attended to state and domestic affairs before going to the ceremony.

More crowds surged against police barriers guarding the car as it pulled out of the Clarence House driveway.

She waved slightly with a faint smile on her face. Philip looked gravely straight ahead.

Meanwhile the age-old machinery of the royal proclamation went into motion, sweeping aside for a brief time the mourning for the King.

Every British Monarch for Past 192 Years Except Victoria Has Been Buried at Windsor

Windsor, England, Feb. 8 — (Reuters) — Every British monarch for the last 192 years has been buried at Windsor, where the late King George VI will be laid to rest in a solemn traditional ceremony Feb. 15.

All except Queen Victoria lie in the royal vault beneath St. George's Chapel in the precincts of Windsor Castle. Queen Victoria is buried a short distance away at Frogmore, where a royal mausoleum was built for her husband, the prince consort.

Windsor Castle stands atop a hill on the banks of the Thames River in the county of Berkshire, 21 miles west of London. It is a small parish of less than 9,000 inhabitants dominated by the castle, which stands on a lofty chalk hill overhanging a bend in the river.

The old walls of the castle enshrine the story of England from the days of the Saxon kings. Nearly 2,000 years ago Roman legionaries were garrisoned at Windsor.

The castle has been for 850 years one of the chief residences of the sovereigns of Britain.

In 1928 King George V had a new royal burial ground consecrated behind the royal mausoleum at Frogmore and gave orders that in future only sovereigns and those in direct line of succession should be interred in the royal vault below St. George's chapel, which was becoming overcrowded.

At the funeral of King George V seats were provided for 1,100 persons and more than 30,000 later visited the castle to see the wreaths.

To this chapel of "becoming splendor" the King's body will be brought.

Will be "Piped Ashore"

If tradition is followed, his body will be "piped ashore" by sailors of the Royal Navy — Britain's senior service — as it is carried from the gun-carriage to the chapel entrance.

Ratings will sound "Admiral Alongside" on their shrill whistles bosun's pipes or calls — as the coffin is placed on the gun-carriage from the special train which will carry it from London.

The funeral service will follow the simple rite of the Church of England and the new Queen may scatter ashes on her father's grave as the Archbishop of Canterbury pronounces the words of the committal: "- - - Earth to earth; ashes to ashes; dust to dust."

The coffin will be lowered to a depth of about four feet below the floor of the chapel and remain there until all the members of the congregation have gazed upon it for the last time.

When the chapel is deserted, the coffin will be removed to a trolley and conveyed to the royal vault.

In the past, mourners could visit the vault after the ceremony but the Duke of Windsor — then King Edward VIII — ended the custom at the funeral of his father, King George V.

Man Pleads Innocent To Assault Charge

Ottawa, Feb. 8 — (CP)—Ronan Morel, 57, today pleaded innocent to assaulting S. Rupert Broadfoot, county clerk and surrogate registrar, slugged on Ottawa's main street yesterday.

Morel, arrested after the assault, pleaded guilty to a liquor-act violation in carrying a partly-full bottle of wine in his pocket. Magistrate Joachim Sauve fined him $15 on the liquor charge and remanded him for trial on the assault count.

So the cops set out to catch the lady and take the smile off her face.

Canberra, Feb. 8—(AP)—Governor-General Sir William McKell proclaimed Elizabeth II Queen of Australia today.

War Correspondents Deny Charge Of Fraternization with Red Reporters

Tokyo, Feb. 8—(CP)—Correspondents reporting Korean armistice talks have defended their action in carrying on regular discussions with communist reporters at Panmunjom.

They took exception to a statement by Col. George Patrick Welch, General Matthew Ridgway's public information officer, who said some reporters from U. N. countries engaged in "fraternization and trafficking with the enemy" by associating with reporters from the communist side.

A memorandum issued by Welch said some correspondents engaged in "excessive social consorting including the drinking of alcoholic beverages, with communist journalists."

Welch also criticized action which led to the delivery of camera equipment to Frank Noel, Associated Press photographer held prisoner by the communists.

Robert Eunson, AP bureau chief for Japan and Korea, telling how the AP received pictures made by Noel, said:

"I personally gave Welch my word that the Associated Press made no bargain with the communist reporters who passed the camera along to Noel."

(The correspondent is Wilfred Burchett of Paris Ce Soir, a communist newspaper.)

Eunson said that in deciding to arrange for Noel to take photographs inside the prison camp, "we foresaw the heartwarming response with which the families of these unfortunate United Nations soldiers would receive the photos."

Welch's memorandum said "unguarded conversations during such unnecessary social sessions might well jeopardize the security of military forces."

A correspondent who covered the negotiations for a month said he knew of no instance where an Allied newspaper man had divulged—inadvertently or otherwise—any information to the communist correspondents.

Declaration of Queen

London, Feb. 8 (Reuters)—Queen Elizabeth II today told the Privy Council—supreme body of state advisers—that "I shall always work as my father did throughout his reign to uphold constitutional government and to advance the happiness and prosperity of my peoples."

The 25-year-old Queen, who attended a Privy Council meeting at St. James's Palace to make her declaration of accession to the throne, asked God's help in discharging this heavy task that has been laid upon me so early in life."

She said: Your Royal Highnesses, my Lords, Ladies and gentlemen. By the sudden death of my dear father I am called to assume the duties and responsibilities of sovereignty.

"At this time of deep sorrow, it is of profound consolation to me to be assured of the sympathy which you and all my peoples feel towards me, to my mother, and my sister and to the other members of my family.

"My father was a revered and beloved head, as he was of the wider family of his subjects; the grief which his loss brings is shared among us all. My heart is too full for me to say more to you today than that I shall always work as my father did throughout his reign to uphold constitutional government and to advance the happiness and prosperity of my peoples, spread as they are all the world over.

"I know that in my resolve to follow his shining example of service and devotion, I shall be inspired by the loyalty and affection of those whose Queen I have been called to be, and by the counsel of their elected parliament.

"I pray that God will help me to discharge worthily this heavy task that has been laid upon me so early in my life."

Research Council Finds Wet Snow Cuts Down Effectiveness of Radar

Ottawa, Feb. 7—(CP)—The National Research Council, in a finding of importance for defence and civilian purposes, reports it has been surprised how wet snow cuts down the effectiveness of radar.

The cut, under some circumstances, is "much greater than expected," the council said.

One significant result would be that an enemy bomber obviously would have a better chance of getting through a radar screen on a day or night when there is wet snow on the ground or falling, than on cold, clear days or nights.

The finding, therefore, is a factor of some interest in plans for Canada's radar network.

An N.R.C. monthly newsletter said long-term experiments show that one of the main lessons is "that a few inches of wet snow, such as is often encountered when temperatures are around the freezing point, may be enough to mask out many types of radar targets."

"It is important in navigation," the newsletter added "that this limiting factor in the use of radar should be recognized."

Since Russian bombers are the "radar targets" of potentially the greatest interest to Canadians, a reporter asked an official to elaborate on the newsletter. Wouldn't it indicate, he asked, that enemy planes would be wise to pick the night when there is wet snow around to make big attacks?

The answer was that the studies that have been going on are fundamental studies which could apply just as much to the use of radar for civilian purposes, say a ship approaching a snow-covered shore or a plane approaching an area of snow-covered mountains.

It had been known that snow could cut down radar to some degree but, the official said, it was a surprise to find just how much the reduction of effectiveness can be.

It would be true to say that a given radar station seeking out an enemy plane would be less effective if a wet snow were falling than if it weren't falling, less effective if the ground were thick with wet snow than if the snow were hard and crisp.

But this didn't mean that steps couldn't be taken to avoid this pitfall either by boosting the power of the radar station or by building more of them. The loss of effectiveness simply was a factor that should be taken into consideration by those who use radar.

The experiments were made by N.R.C.'s radio and electrical engineering division and were termed "a long-term investigation of the absorption of microwave radiation by snow."

Hungarian Partridge Recently Seen Near Pakenham

More reports that Hungarian partridge are spreading up the Ottawa River valley and have been seen recently in the vicinity of Pakenha mand Arnprior were welcomed by Department of Lands and Forests wildlife officials at Tweed.

For many years. Hungarian partridge have been established in the Nation River valley. Preferring a habitat on rich soils, which are dairy farmed, the clay plain lands of the Rideau district seem to suit them admirably. Of all upland game birds, these partridge require the least cover, the usual habitat being open hay fields and stubble.

Three specimens turned over to conservation officer Sam Shields near Pakenham were found to be in excellent condition and further investigations by wildlife biologist, H. G. Lumsden, on the third of February disclosed three coveys in the vicinity of Arnprior and Pakenham, averaging six to eight birds in number.

Tweed Teams Drop Hockey Tilts

Outscored by a margin of 10 to one in the second period, Tweed lost a Hastings and Addington Hockey League game on Wednesday night to the visiting Bancroft team by a score of 14-11. The loss left the homesters firmly entrenched in the league cellar.

Play was fast and hard although quite cleanly played and very few penalties were handed out.

The teams were deadlocked 3-3, at the end of the first frame but Bancroft routed the homesters, outscoring them 10-1 in the second frame. Tweed roared back to tally seven goals with only one reply in the third chukker but the Bancroft lead was too great an obstacle to overcome.

Delyea and E. Brough paced the visitors' attack with four goals each while N. Brough notched three markers.

McLoughlin and Robson each turned the hat-trick for Tweed while Sherry added a pair and singletons were scored by Mitchell, Rivers and Rupert.

The Campbellford bantams were led by Hendricks with a pair of goals, singletons being notched by Cochrane, Blaind, Ellis and Dunk.

Delegation Asks For Interim Grant To Municipalities

Toronto, Feb. 8—(CP)—A delegation from the Ontario Municipal Association met with Premier Frost yesterday and asked for an interim grant to municipalities of $5 per capita of population.

The delegation, headed by reeve Anne Shipley of Teck township, termed the need immediate. It said there would be delay before the report of a committee studying the provincial - municipal tax structure could be brought down.

The association asked that municipalities be give the right to tax publicly-owned utilities and crown properties on the same basis as privately-owned utilities.

Other points requested in the brief: School debenture issues to be bought by the province; maintenance of prisoners' dependents; municipal exemption from gasoline tax for vehicles; municipal underwriting of municipal fire losses.

In an attempt to control board of education expenditures, the association urged that power be granted municipal councils to appoint two members of council to sit as members of the board of education.

Delegates Take Long, Critical Look at Fairs

Toronto, Feb. 8—(CP)—Delegates to the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies took a long and critical look at Ontario's fall fairs yesterday during a debate on the resolution that fairs are contributing to improve agricultural and rural life.

Lloyd Jasper of Mildmay said many fairs devote most of their time and space to midways, games of chance and horse shows. "Does this improve agriculture?" he asked.

Commercial exhibitors who move from show to show usually pick up most of the prize money, he said.

Mrs. S. W. Rathwell of Navan said quality and efficiency are encouraged by fall fairs. The younger generation was educated by fair demonstrations.

R. H. Graham, associate livestock commissioner for Ontario, said that directors for fall fair boards should be men who would direct, "rather than just wear the ribbon."

Tobacco Growers Reducing Base Acreage One Third

Simcoe, Feb. 8—(CP)—Ontario tobacco growers will reduce their base acreage by one-third this year, the marketing board of the Ontario flue-cured Tobacco Marketing Association decided yesterday.

It said later in a statement its decision was due to a decline in sales to the United Kingdom and to decreasing domestic sales as a result of what it termed "exessive taxation."

Board chairman Francis R. Gregory of Leamington, said after the meeting:

"Our backs are to the wall. The only solution to the serious situation facing Ontario's most valuable agricultural crop is immediate tax reduction."

First Thought Was to Send Cables Home

London, Feb. 8 — (AP) — Britain's new Queen dispatched her first messages as sovereign soon after she received the news of her father's death Wednesday.

A BBC correspondent in Kenya Colony, East Africa, reported:

"She sat down calmly and thought of everything that had to be done. Her first thought was to send cables to her mother and to Queen Mary (her grandmother).

"Then she arranged for Australia, New Zealand and Ceylon to be told that her visit was not now possible.

"As she left the royal lodge (where she had been staying with her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, in the Kenya highlands) she told the staff that she would be coming again one day."

She took time out to say goodbye personally to all the staff and to arrange for gifts to be sent to many of them.

One of the messages she wrote in Kenya was received yesterday by Sir Leslie Boyce, Lord Mayor of London. It said:

"I am deeply touched by the kind message of sympathy you have sent me on behalf of the citizens of London. I have long known that I can count on their devotion and sympathy and I am deeply touched. (Signed) Elizabeth R."

The "R" stands for Regina.

In Canberra, Australia, Governor-General Sir William McKell received the word that Elizabeth was putting off the two-month visit she was to have begun at Freemantle March 1.

"Owing to the sudden death of my father," this message said, "I have to return home immediately. I regret that, for the present, my visit to Australia will have to be postponed."

The reference to postponement caused speculation in Australia that Elizabeth may become the first reigning sovereign to visit that Commonwealth. But Australians do not expect to see her for many months. The elaborate royal tour arrangements will be abandoned.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL TWICE

Toronto, Feb. 8 — (CP) — Sir Allen Aylesworth of Toronto is probably the only Canadian to become a Queen's counsel twice. Now at 97 in frail health, Sir Allen was first created a Queen's counsel in 1889 under Queen Victoria. He served through the reigns of Victoria, King Edward VII, King George V, King Edward VIII, King George VI and now Queen Elizabeth II.

Tokyo, Feb. 8 — (AP)—Transportation Minister Ciichi Murakami said yesterday Japan is negotiating with the United States for the lease of war vessels. He told the transportation committee of the diet (parliament) that any ships obtained would be used only in the service of the Maritime Safety Board, the Japanese counterpart of the U. S. Coast Guard.

Expect Million Mourners Will File Past Bier

London, Feb. 8 — (Reuters) — Starting Tuesday at 8 a. m. the first of perhaps 1,000,000 mourners will shuffle past a [illegible]ring dais in Westminster Hall here on which will lie in state the body of King George VI.

The royal coffin will be brought to London Monday from Sandringham, where the King died. It will be taken to Westminster Hall, part of Westminster Palace which contains the House of Commons, where it will lie in state until the funeral Friday.

Westminster Hall will be open to the public between 8 a.m. and 10 p. m. until Thursday night and. If the death of King George V is anything to go by, more than 1,000,000 Britons will pay their respects during these times.

They will file slowly past a dais rising in five stages from a low platform 42 feet long by 17 wide. The last step will bear the late monarch's coffin which, draped with the Union Jack, will bear his crown.

Made of pine from British Columbia, the dais will be covered with black and mauve velvet. Four eight-foot candles will burn, one at each corner and by the King's head, a cross of burnished gold will stand.

Guardsmen in full-dress uniform will mount guard at each corner of the dais, their heads bowed over reversed arms. Yeomen of the Guard from the Tower of London will have their parts in the solemn day and night vigil.

May be Crowned Between August And Spring of '53

London, Feb. 8 (AP) —Queen Elizabeth probably will be crowned some time between next August and the spring of 1953. But court officials do not start thinking about the coronation until well after the late King's funeral.

Nor does British history help. There is no set interval, some British Kings have waited several years, others only a few months, before going down to Westminster Abbey to have the crown placed on their heads.

There is only one fixed rule— it cannot take place until court mourning for the dead monarch is over.

There is a second principle — not laid down in any rules of etiquette, but usually observed by practical courtiers— that the coronation should not take place in winter. It often is raining in Britain then, and bad weather spoils colorful uniforms and keeps the crowds away.

Nine months' court mourning was decreed by King Edward VIII when King George V died 16 years ago.

If Queen Elizabeth chooses the same period in memory of her father, no coronation ceremony could be held before the winter chill descends on London.

So citizens are guessing, the coronation ceremony and the long parade which accompanies it most likely would be put off until the following spring. But if the mourning is only six months it still would be possible to stage the lavish display by August.

TANKS READY TO SHIP

London, Feb. 8—(CP)— Three centurion tanks, first of an unspecified number ordered by Canada from the British government, will leave Liverpool for Saint John, N.B., tomorrow on the cargo liner Fanad Head.

The 51-ton British-built tanks, battle-tested in Korea, will be shipped from Saint John to an ordnance depot in Montreal.

WILLYS INTRODUCES NEW CARS

Although conforming closely to accepted modern design trends the new Aero Willys model shown above introduces many unusual features. For example, body and chassis members are welded by revolutionary aero-dynamic construction into one rigid unit. While only 5 feet high, this automobile is 6 feet wide. Both front and rear seats are 61 inches wide. All fenders are visible from the driver's seat.

The "Hurricane" 90-horsepower, 6 cylinder engine is capable of sustained high speeds at which the car cruises easily thanks to a low centre of gravity. Road shocks, noises and vibration are damped out by new springing and rubber "cushions" at strategic points. In overdrive, 35 miles to a gallon of gasoline have been recorded. The F-head engine design makes it unnecessary to use premium gasoline.

Other advancements include centre-fill gas tank outlet at the rear; 24 cubic feet of luggage space; harmonized interior styling; fresh air intakes that scoop in screened fresh air and pour it evenly into the car; self energizing brakes; and independently sprung front wheels.

The Aero Willys is currently being introduced at the showrooms of Willys distributors and dealers across Canada.

Queen Arrives At Country House To Join Family

Sandringham, England, Feb. 8. (Reuters)—Queen Elizabeth arrived at her country house here today to mourn at the coffin of her father, the late King.

She and the Duke of Edinburgh sped in a big black limousine which had brought them from London.

The car turned into a side gate of Sandringham House grounds to avoid a crowd at the main gate.

At Sandringham she joins her mother and sister, Princess Margaret, who have kept a lone vigil by the coffin since the King's death.

Elizabeth, clad in black, sat erect and sober as the car crunched up the driveway past a battery of news cameramen.

She will likely remain here until the coffin is moved to London for the start of the official lying-in-state Monday.

A crowd of about 200 had been waited in bitterly cold wind outside the main gate for about two hours. Shortly before her arrival a thunder and hail storm swept over the countryside.

The crowd caught only a glimpse of the royal car as it swept into the side entrance.

Inside the estate the body of her father lay in a plain oak coffin in a dimly lighted downstairs bedroom where he died quietly early Wednesday. He was dressed in his well-loved uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet.

Later today after the young Queen pays her respects, the body will be carried 200 yards to the little 16th century chapel of St. Mary Magdalene.

ELIZABETH'S REIGN BEGINS

Queen Elizabeth II, who was proclaimed queen in ondon today, twenty-four hours after a similar ceremony ad been performed in Ottawa, begins her reign with one reat advantage which her father, the late King George I, did not possess — she was trained for her present position from early childhood.

By a coincidence, Elizabeth II ascends the throne at he age of 25, as did her illustrious namesake and preecessor, Elizabeth I. Although there are doubts as to xactly how many queens the British have had, since long go there were often disputes as to who was king or queen nd who was not, it is believed that Elizabeth II will be the ighth woman who has ruled in Britain as a sovereign in er own right. The reason there have been so few queens relation to the long list of kings is that, in days long go, a woman's right to the throne by inheritance was kely to be brushed aside by a brother, a cousin or a ephew who was considered a competent military leader.

Although Britain is suffering severely economically at resent, and although threats of a military nature are by o means non-existent, Elizabeth II begins her reign at a me when British royalty's prestige is as high as ever it as. This is due partly to the manner in which Elizaeth's father and grandfather conducted themselves, and artly due to the fact that the British people have seen hat has happened in some other European countries hose peoples decided to expel their royalty and establish ome other form of government. Germany might be entioned as a prime example of a country which has nown nothing but trouble since it abandoned the monrchical principle.

While it is true that the British empire is weaker than was ten or twenty years ago, it is also true that the ritish commonwealth, which includes the self-governing ominions, is much stronger. Four or five decades ago, one of the self-governing dominions amounted to much, a military or economic sense. Now, even the smaller nes are much nearer adulthood; the major one, Canada, as important in the scheme of things as some older ountries with three or four times the population.

Another advantage which the British possess today nd which they never possessed before to the same extent the almost unqualified friendship and support of the nited States. The troubles which the British are experencing in Iran, Egypt, Malaya and other such places ould be probably a great deal worse if the natives of these laces were not well aware that the giant republic will not ermit anyone to twist the British lion's tail too frequently r too severely.

The reign of Elizabeth II, because of her youth, is kely to be a long one. Because of the extremely disurbed conditions of the times in which it begins, it is kely to witness further upheavals the very nature of hich we would hesitate to speculate upon. But on balnce, the chances of Elizabeth II's reign seeing a big mprovement in Britain's status appear to be much better han the chances that the country's condition will deterorate further.

The British have been down before, but they possess n ability that has probably been unequalled in history to ecover from their wounds, to correct their mistakes and egain lost power.

ARE LABELS NEEDED?

Members of the Windsor police force on traffic duty t busy intersections will henceforth wear white slickers. his is a commendable move on the part of Police Chief arl W. Farrow. It should help make the traffic policean's duties less hazardous. (Windsor motorists are otoriously reckless and are said to be required to pay the ighest automobile insurance rates in the province.)

But that is not all. On the back of each of these white lickers, in large white lettering, appears the inscription Windsor Police." It is well known that Windsor's police orce has been subjected to probes and criticisms, but urely the citizenry of Windsor can recognize a policeman s such without the necessity of labelling him.

UNEMPLOYMENT WORSE

There were 93,900 unemployed in Ontario in January, ccording to the Ontario Bureau of Statistics and esearch, as compared with 55,750 in January, 1951. The reatest number of unemployed in this province during 951 was registered in February, when the figure was 2,400.

Thus, there are more unemployed in Ontario today han at any time during the last year.

BRUCE LEADS IN BUTTER

In second place was Grey county, with a production or the year of 5,061,107 pounds. Perth, with an output f 4,910,555 pounds, was in third place.

PITY

He spoke his pity. Told it well.
Used gentle words his thoughts to tell,
And ending what he'd called to say,
Picked up his hat and went away.

A woman wise in grief, and gray,
Had just these few sad words to say:

"All you are suffering I've been through,
But what I can I've come to do."

She washed the dishes, swept the floor;
Answered each summons to the door,
And that she pities known might be
She baked a cake and brewed the tea.

Letters to The Editor

Advises Buying More Made-in-Britain Goods

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Please accept one reader's thanks for your editorial comments upon "That Street Car Strike" in Toronto. I concur in the idea that, as in the neighboring province (Quebec) workers in "public utilities, as well as those employed in certain designated fields of essential public services" should be forbidden by law to strike. It may well be that special provisions would be needed in such legislation, to protect the inherent bargaining rights of labor in these well-defined work areas; but this should not be beyond the wit of men of good-will on both sides of the management-labor table? At any rate I find my thoughts aptly expressed by the forthright assertion credited to Calvin Coolidge (as governor of Massachussetts) in reference to the threat of a police strike in the city of Boston: "No one, anywhere has the right to strike against the public welfare!"

And while I've my pen in hand, may I comment briefly upon the following statements by a Belleville correspondent in this morning's Toronto Globe and Mail?: "Our Canadian consumers have been planned out of fresh whole milk into milk powder; planned out of butter into margarine; planned out of beef into horsemeat; planned almost out of reach of most of their essential foods, and our farmers have been planned out of their essential markets." (I.G.S.).

That is a decidedly clever picture but I am not quite sure just how close it is to the fact-beam? I would like to see some of the experts—including those representing 'Laissez Faire'—deal with it objectively and, therefore, constructively. It would be certainly highly desirable to retrace our steps from scarcity to plenty (wherever that would lead?) and especially from margarine into butter and from milk-powder into whole milk?

There is at least one historic and "essential market" out of which (excepting wheat and two or three basic commodities) our farmers have been moving steadily— i.e. Great Britain. But the above "planners" didn't do it? Not at all. It seems to me that we should be buying 'Made in Britain goods, and accord them tariff preference, where necessary. To the open charge of "planned scarcity," the farmers would, and have a right to plead "Not Guilty."

One of Them.

Govt. Annuities

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

Your recent editorial in the Ontario Intelligencer entitled "A Costly Experiment" gives a very sound and unbiased story of the current move by the Annuity Branch of the Department of Labor to further extend their operations. You are to be commended in bringing to the attention of the public the fact that over $30,000,000 of the taxpayers' funds have gone to support the operations of this group of 190 civil servants in Ottawa. There are also 55 salesmen stationed across Canada whose commissions are directly charged to the operations of this branch.

As a matter of general interest to your readers, there has been a total of $27,521,563 transferred from the Consolidated Revenue Fund to maintain the reserve of the Annuity Fund. Direct administration costs of operating the annuities branch since its inception in 1908 to the present date totals $6,912,719. We must also keep in mind the fact that as more annuities come due, increased amounts will have to be transferred to maintain the reserve as for years these annuities have been marketed using an obsolete actuarial table and unrealistic interest tables.

Those of us who represent the some 60 competitive life insurance companies operating in Canada have protested this unfair competition for years to no avail. When the Old Age Security Act was introduced in January 1952 it appeared that this legislation was enacted to provide assistance for aged folk, and there would be no further need for the government Annuity Branch. However, we now find a group of civil servants determined to propagate their existence at the expense of the long suffering taxpayer even to the extent of further increasing the limits of the annuities and broadening their sphere of operations.

The unfortunate part of the whole story is the undeniable fact that government annuities never did assist the middle and lower wage group in their plans for security. It has only been the better than average wage earner who could afford to purchase these contracts.

As a result, we find the average wage earner subsidizing, through his taxes, the operation of an institution which can of necessity only be of assistance to those with high incomes.

We cannot see that this is a desirable condition and agree with you that the government should withdraw from the annuity business altogether or at the very least, put the branch on a sound actuarial and expense basis so that John Doe Taxpayer does not have to support the unwarranted costs of this department.

Charles D. Lundy, C.L.U.

CRADLE WILL FALL

God bless the Times of London, that's what I say. In these days of uncertain values and many confusions the clear, honest voice of the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street (or am I thinking of the Bank of England?) is a boon and a blessing.

The Times has just come out in favor of over-sleeping, probably its most courageous stand since its last editorial on the Balkans in which, as I understand it, they suggested moving the Dardanelles over back of Turkey. (It seemed pretty clear to me at the time, but you know the Balkans and don't come running to me with your troubles.)

The Times doesn't exactly approve of over-sleeping, but they don't look upon it as a vice, either, and that's progress. At last I have an unimpeachable authority to support my claim that sleeping late, as the Times puts it, "is not particularly wicked."

"Physically," the Times says, "it is more often beneficial than not, bringing extra rest to mind and body. Yet oversleeping induces a feeling of guilt and, with it, a vague conviction that we have been tricked or swindled, that we are being punished for a crime to which we were only an unconscious accessory."

I just wish I'd said that. Oh, well, couple of years from now I probably will.

* * *

Basically, my trouble isn't over-sleeping. If I were a bachelor and lived in a cave (Dreams! Dreams!) I would sleep about 20 out of 24 hours and love every darling minute of it. There would be no feeling of guilt whatever or, at the most, four hours of it, not counting naps.

But Fate's fickle finger decreed otherwise. I have spent my entire life in unarmed combat with people who wake up clear-eyed and daisy-fresh, who leap from the bed with glad cries to meet the bright new day.

Don't bandy this around, but I have a wife who does toe-touching exercises before an open window at a time when even the tawny-breasted tippet isn't up.

Even this would be all right, except that such people can never bear the thought of anybody else having a good time. If they're going to be up, everybody else is dam' well going to be up, too. That's ipso facto.

In one form or another, then, all my loved ones are images of a bestial sergeant I recall whose habit was to grasp me by one ankle, call out happily, "Hit the deck!" and haul me bodily from my palliasse.

Thus, it has been years and years since I looked upon a human face before noon with anything but deep loathing.

* * *

From that moment at sun-up when the first of my brood springs nimbly from her downy I am fighting a losing battle. I am wide awake. I know it and they know it. My eyes are closed, but my ears are wide open.

It is my practice to burrow down into the bed, warm in that lovely cocoon, and hope that they will all go away. Maybe the neighbor's house will burn down and they will go and watch it. Maybe they will forget that Daddy is still hiding in there. But no. They will ignore me the rest of the day, but in the dawn's early light they just can't do without me.

Harangued from all sides, I begin to play little games, a form of self-torture. If the radio is on I say to myself, "All right! I'll get up right after the next piece." Sometimes I rehearse little speeches that I hope will reach my wife's finer nature.

Logic is all on my side. After years of early rising from necessity I have now reached a point in my career where I have no set hours. I don't have to get up and, indeed, I've never been able to do my peculiar kind of work except at night. The late Clarence Darrow himself could not present a clearer case for me staying in bed.

But now I hear them in the kitchen. They are filling a glass with cold water. I hear their low laughter. I know what it means. I've had the treatment before. Now they are coming stealthily down the hall. . . I'm up! And I'm mean, mean, mean!

* * *

The reason I'm happy about the Times' old tentative support of over-sleeping is that it represents a complete break with the old tradition. Hands up those of you who have been brought up to believe that all brilliant men sleep only in cat-naps?

There was Edison, for example. Five minutes on a couch and he was ready for another 14 hours' work. Or Henry Ford who apparently never slept at all. Or Alexander Graham Bell, who could curl up for eight minutes and awake refreshed and ready to invent the telephone.

All this weighs heavily against the man who not only wants 18 straight hours of slumber, but has convinced himself he needs it. If a few of us slugs can now find a brilliant man or two who sleeps almost all the time we may well start a whole new trend to give sleep the dignity it deserves.

Who knows? It might lead to winter hibernation and the happiest years of our lives.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Proverbs and wise sayings are not as commonly used as they formerly were. Even fellows like postmen, policemen, bus drivers and drug clerks, who have to keep a fair supply of small talk always ready for the customers, do not use proverbs any more.

In fact, it was a bus driver who brought the matter to my attention today, when he slipped on the ice while stepping off his bus to get his wind-shield wiper working again by freeing it from some slush.

"Ah, well," I consoled him, as I helped him to his feet and brushed him off, "a bad beginning makes a good end, as the old saying is. You'll probably have no more trouble today."

"That's a fool saying," replied the bus driver, "if ever there was one. For example, I once bought a new motor car that was a lemon. Everybody said a bad beginning meant a good end. But that car got worse and worse, until I could no longer afford it. Now, you take my brother and his wife: they started off their courting by fighting all the time, and we all hoped they would break it off before it was too late. But, no; they married. And I wish you could hear them fighting now, after ten years ..."

We got back in the bus.

"No, siree!" said the bus driver, easing himself delicately into the driver's seat. "A bad beginning usually means: look out for trouble! Because troubles always come in threes."

Sure enough, when I got on the bus to come home for supper, there was my friend the bus driver at the wheel. He looked peaked.

"Well?" I checked.

"I ran over a valuable dog," he said, hollowly. "At least, the lady said it was valuable. And right after lunch, I rammed a car ahead of me. Guess whose car it was?"

I shook my head.

"The bus superintendent's" announced the bus driver, bitterly.

PNEUMOCOCCUS IS A VERSATILE GERM

Having given the matter a good deal of thought I am constrained to advise medical students, interns and young doctors to ignore this column except perhaps for amusement when there is nothing worth while at hand to read. Most of the ideas, conclusions or teachings set forth here are of the sort calculated to scare away patients and win for the young doctor the antipathy of his or her colleagues.

It is a matter of no concern to me what any other doctors may think or say about the information or advice I give the public in this column. I can say things in print with comparative impunity, things that a doctor just can't say in practice, not if he or she depends on practice for a living. I know. I tried it for years —and sometimes I wake up — well, not screaming, but wondering how the deuce we managed to live—I should say remain alive these years without seeking public relief.

Through this column I get a good many letters from people who pat me on the back as though they really mean it and express the wish that there were more doctors like me — you know, doctors who (1) are not afraid to tell the truth and (2) use language folks can understand. But I remember....

The Pneumococcus is ubiquitous. It is present in the saliva of sputum of most healthy persons.

The Pneumococcus is versatile. It causes not only pneumonia but also simple acute coryza, acute sinusitis, acute follicular tonsillitis, quinsy, pleurisy, sometimes acute meningitis, acute multiple arthritis (inflammatory rheumatism), acute endocarditis and valvular damage, acute appendicitis and other serious illnesses.

The Penumococcus is omnigenous (no kidding, I just came across this one in Roget — Webster says it means "of all types").

Ten, twenty years ago the dilettantes, moms' boys, born specialists had the question reduced to a simple technical detail—determining which of the two or three types the Pneumococci in the sputum might be and giving the patient the serum adapted for the particular type. But after some ten or fifteen years of it the profession generally lost interest in the typing procedure—realized it was a lotta of pseudo-scientific hooey and of no value in the treatment of pneumonia. Instead of just four types of Pneumococcus as the dils had it, there were 32 types of Pneumococcus identified by various authorities at last count. It looked as though the born specialists were trying to make it too difficult for piker practitioners to deal with pneummonia without their supervision.

Whether the Pneumococcus commonly found in the saliva or sputum of healthy persons may under any circumstance cause any illness or indisposition is a moot question. There is no scientific or clinical evidence that an individual can become susceptible to infection by his or her own Pneumococci.

Dr. E. C. Rosenow, who, with Dr. Frank Billings, established the principle of focal infection, which is still sound medicine despite abuse by tonsil snatchers and tooth carpenters, showed most convincingly that Pneumococci may be converted into Streptococci and vice versa under certain transfer (inoculation) and culture conditions.

And that's the best and the worst I can say about the Pneumococcus—but not the last, I hope. In the next talk on this subject I'd like to give young folks reassurance — you old geezers had better skip it for the sake of your blood pressure.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

The Pyorrhea Obsession

Have had nearly perfect teeth up to 36. Recently two lower teeth became loose. Dentist took X-rays and said I have a bad case of pyorrhea. Four dentists have advised extraction of all my teeth in order to save my health. (H. D. C.)

Answer—It sounds insane. I believe dentists are obsessed about "pyorrhea." Unfortunately your letter does not show where you live. Even if you have to lose the two teeth, don't give up any others. Reasonable treatment by any good dentist will probably correct whatever trouble may be present—from what you tell me only two teeth are affected. It may be a little late, but even now some corrections in your diet may do much good. Send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope for booklet Save Your Teeth.

Wheat to Eat

I am unable to get wheat or cracked wheat at chain stores but I find Armenian and Greek stores carry it. Would it be all right...? (B. B. W.)

Answer — Yes, even if the storekeeper is Hibernian or Scandinavian. Ways to use wheat in the everyday diet are described in pamphlet Wheat to Eat, for which send stamped, self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FRAGMENTS

We get the completion of so very few things in life. We have to be satisfied with the mere fragments. A single day comes to us in fragments, for we let drop, or pass by unnoticed, many a joy or thrill — keeping only the fragments to piece in some sort of an arrangement to give us partial satisfaction.

The very Seasons are fragments as we pass through each year. Each Season, noiselessly, passes into the other, so that we have our Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter.

Even our friendships come to us in fragments. Our most beloved ones are only understood by us in a fragmentary manner. We often learn more about them after they are gone than when they were alive and near us. We have our anthologies, with bits of people's thinking and expression, for our lives are not long lived enough to read of everything that wise people have written.

The rich earth gives up its treasures and substances largely in fragments — and men have to dig long and deep to get them. The most precious thing in this world — love — comes to us at intervals, in fragments, here and there. And we often have to piece it together to make something enduring out of it!

The wisest writers of the world have left to us only fragments of their life thinking. This is especially true of our poets. How many a one has left to posterity hardly enough to bind between the covers of a small book. I bought a book recently which was the author's last one, which he left unfinished, but a near friend took the many fragments that he had left in his notebooks and pieced out the book so as to give some completeness to it.

Our vacations, our recreations, our adventures are all enjoyed in fragments. It's only as we piece them together and live them over in our memories that we treasure their substance. Each one of us only gives ourself out in fragments, so we should be complimented when love or appreciation comes our way!

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

GROWTH IN GRACE

There is a passage from the Book of Ezekiel which few Bible readers encounter. The prophet tells of a vision he had in which he beheld waters issuing eastward from under the threshold of the House of God. When a heavenly figure measured a thousand cubits and caused Ezekiel to pass through the waters, the waters were to his ankles. Again the heavenly figure measured a thousand cubits, and the waters were then to his knees. Again he measured a thousand and Ezekiel passed through water that reached to his loins. "Afterwards," continues the prophet, "he measured a thousand; and it was revealed that I could not pass through; for the waters were risen, waters to swim in. . ."

The vision probably teaches many lessons, but chief among them is the way the gifts and graces of God increase in our lives with the passing years. At first we are only a little conscious of God's favor to us—the waters reach our ankles. Then, as we pass through tribulations from which we are delivered, we become more conscious of God's goodness—the waters reach our knees. Later the water reaches the loins. And at last the gracious goodness of God is at a level which we cannot pass through; for the waters are risen, water to swim in.

And along the banks of the river "grow every tree for food, whose leaves shall not wither, neither shall the fruit thereof fail."

Y.P. Groups Conduct Youth Services

A large congregation at the Foxboro United Church enjoyed a special "Youth Service" last Sunday evening.

It was an impressive sight to see the various youth groups with their leaders parade into the church. The Explorers led with their leaders, Mrs. Jack Stewart and Mrs. Harold Giffin; next came the C.G.I.T. group with leaders, Mrs. Gordon Gay and Mrs. Cecil Arthurs, and following were, the Cub Scouts with Cubmaster, James Churchill, and then the Young People's group whose president is Miss Kay Homan.

Young People Conduct

The major portion of the service was conducted by the Young People with a special message for youth given by the minister, Rev. H. W. Giffin. An anthem of beauty was sung by the entire Y.P. group, assisted by Mr. Ernest Tummon and Mr. Stillman Gay. The organist was Miss Eva Giffin. A further musical contribution was a trio composed of Miss Joan McCurdy and Misses Pat and Eva Giffin singing in harmony, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross".

The Y.P. president, Miss Kay Homan, conducted the worship service and Don McCurdy read the scripture lesson. Harvey Homan led in the responsive reading and Joan McCurdy gave the Y.P. story. James Reid led in prayer. The offering was taken by two Cub Scouts, Ronny Bamber and Ian Cooper.

Following the message, an impressive Y.P. installation service was conducted by the minister.

Rev. Keith Daniel Addresses Jubilee Evening Auxiliary

About 75 members and guests of the Jubilee Evening Auxilary met in Bridge Street Sunday School on Tuesday evening, at which Mrs. Charles Scott and her committee served a bountiful supper.

After supper, Miss Pearl Campbell conducted routine business.

Mrs. Marshall brought two little representatives of the Explorers' Group, who gave a short explanation of their aims and presented $10 for missionary work.

An interesting thank-you letter from Miss Christene MacDougall, social worker in Winnipeg, was read. Miss Clazie brought a box of Japanese biscuits and also a letter of thanks from a friend in Japan to whom used clothing had been sent.

Mrs. McCabe's group was in charge of the program.

After a beautiful solo by Miss Loretta MacDougall, the Rev. Keith Daniel, guest speaker, was introduced.

Woman's Part

Mr. Daniel spoke of the important part women played during the earthly ministry of Jesus. They gave Him understanding and support and were even with Him at the Cross. They fed Him and financed His work.

In the early church Priscilla soon took precedence over Aquila in Paul's writings There was even a deaconess named Phoebe.

The missionaries always establish a Christian home as the first step in their work as Christianity is the only religion where women and children are honored.

It was to the woman at the well, in Samaria, that Jesus spoke some of His greatest truths.

He struck hard at the dual standard of morals, and swept aside all the cruelty of men.

An interest in the missionary cause is just a small part of the debt women owe to Christ for all He has done for them.

Parsonage committee gave report on parsonage repairs and alterations which are to be dealt with later. Readings of interest were given by Mrs. W. Frink and Mrs. G. Shea.

Date was set for annual St. Patrick's tea on March 19.

Social hour was enjoyed by all. The hostess being assisted by Mrs. Frank Covert and Mrs. William Crothers.

STONE CHURCH M.B.

Stone Church Mission Band meeting was held at Maple View School on Friday afternoon, with the president, Ivan Phillips, presiding. The call to worship, "Thou Shalt Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart", was read. Sandra Read read the scripture from Isaiah. 41:6-7.

A short business period was conducted. It was decided to send a parcel of household articles to Korea; Jeanette Twiddy and Ann Gray to purchase same. Plans were started for the combined meeting of the W.M.S., the Baby Band and Mission Band to be held in April. The next regular meeting will be held on March 7.

Sight-Saving Class Is Organized

By ERNEST FEDORUK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto. (CP)—To most persons, it's just another classroom where children are taught their A B Cs.

But Room 14, Jesse Ketchum public school, is a little different than most. It's a special sight-saving class, one of eight in Ontario. There are three other classes in Toronto and one each in London, Windsor, Hamilton and Ottawa.

The class is happier and more informal than most school rooms. The pupils, about 15 ranging in ages from six to 12, are normal and friendly.

Miss Edna Bogart is more like a mother than teacher of the children.

The difference between Room 14 and, say, the room across the hall, is the teaching method. All the children have poor vision. Only children with eye defects which prevent progress in regular grades are admitted. They have less than 30/100 vision.

The class receives many visitors and the children assist Miss Bogart in explaining the special sight-saving course. One day visitors were treated to a skit by all members of the class, a song by the "Sunshine Service Club's" barbershop quartet and a solo by an eight-year-old boy.

The aim of the special classes is to teach the visually-handicapped child to realize that his handicap does not need to isolate him.

Pupil Encouraged

"The pupil is guided and encouraged to build up his belief in his own powers," says Miss Bogart. "He learns to do, construct, listen and discuss with little reading."

A phonograph donated by a Toronto Service Club helps the children to learn some subjects, such as history, without reading.

Equipment includes special lighting (glare is eliminated), cream-colored "sight-saving" paper on which work is done in large handwriting and special desks.

At the start of each term, Miss Bogart faces the problem of "welding" the children into a group. She succeeds.

She says the children feel closer to each other than they would in a regular grade, though their ages may vary as much as six or seven years.

A song by the Juniors was enjoyed.

Mrs. Frank Tucker gave a talk on "Home Mission Hospitals in Canada". Francis Tucker read a story "Off for a Boat-ride", a story of Mission Band hospitals in British Columbia.

Mrs. G. Evans gave a chapter from the study book, "The Twins Make Friends".

Royal Designer's Evening Dresses Short, Glamorous

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, (CP)—Evening dresses by Norman Hartnell are short but still carry all the romantic glamor of court ball gowns.

Women who recall with horror the skimpy short dresses of the early 1920s can relax. Hartnell's new styles show little sign of the jazz age influences. Instead there are glorious semi-crinolines of embroidered tulle, showing entrancing glimpses of silk or nylon-clad ankles and delicately-styled shoes.

Length is four inches from the ground at back, six in front. Voluminous skirts fan out from tiny waists over several layers of petticoat. One example is a semi-crinoline in white tulle with narrow shoulder straps, its full skirt and tight bodice embroidered in iridescent scallops of emerald sequins.

Hartnell, dressmaker to the royal family, has long kept royal favor with his exquisitely-embroidered crinoline gowns, and despite the new trend towards shorter styles his designs contrive to retain their intricate charm.

A daring short number with sophisticated appeal is a navy faille dress called "La Ronde". This is slim and clinging with a straight, ballet-length skirt which gets merry-go-round fullness from a spiral pouf frill. The dress takes its name from a French film which has proved a hit in London.

"Zombi" Dress

Among other styles by Hartnell is a black dress called "Zombi". Although this year's fashions generally avoid the nude neckline, this has a strapless top covered by a short bolero. Fashioned from inch-wide ciri braid hand-sewn in a circular movement, the dress flounces outwards from a smooth hipline to a Mae West hemline and has something of the dark drama of a gypsy costume.

Return of the fichu neckline is seen in "Star of Eve", a crinoline of midnight blue over white tulle scattered with blue and white stars. The draped organza fichu stands high on the shoulders and is pleated tightly across the bra to from part of the bodice.

Most useful of this year's more elaborate styles are the stiff silk coats with tiny waists and full, roundabout hemlines. Designed for garden-party and race-course wear they are equally suitable with short evening dresses.

LAMP-LIGHTING TIME

As I sit alone in the twilight
At the close of a winter day,
The lights in the village windows
Gleam with a gladdening ray;
And how the lights glow and beckon—
From every window in bloom!
Symbols of homely firesides
Dispelling winter's gloom.

How often the homesick wanderer,
Who in distant lands may roam,
Dreams of the lighted windows
In his distant childhood home!
And these same lighted windows
In the home where the mother prays,
Keep his steps from the paths of evil
And sin's alluring ways.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Turn on your eye-lights.

There are young eyes in old faces and old eyes in young faces. You have seen pretty lassies, no doubt, who put on the bored look; whose eyes are dull Fed up with parties and keeping late hours, they feel that they have been everywhere, know everything, and that life is a bit bleak, if not bitter. Too bad. Young girls should have star-shine in their eyes. What with school work and too many social activities, some of Uncle Sam's young ladies are going a rapid pace. They seem to think they are made of wire and fiddle strings. They can't expect to have radiant loveliness unless they have their lives organized. So much work, so much play, and nine hours sleep every night! That's the ticket!

Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

The time has come to put on specs.

Make-up cannot conceal or camouflage fatigue. The rosy blush and the crimson lipstick give accent to weariness. All girls desire above everything else to be pretty and attractive. They can't do it without perfect health and proper rest.

Eyes tell the story. When the body is weary or the mind is troubled, they are dull and listless. It is the expression—the changing lights and shadows—that impart beauty to the optic motors. If you feel just a little under par, their glamor departs.

Just what puts on the highlights? Vitality and animation. That means physical and mental health. You get thta by right living and right thinking. The older a young woman gets the more she is likely to realize that a sense of zest and well-being, which comes only through obedience to the laws of health, makes not only for loveliness of appearance, but for contentment and happiness.

The eyes should be bathed twice a day, first with hot water, then with cold. As they have a perfect washing and oiling system, no magic drops should be put in them unless a physician so orders. The present notion that eye exercises are helpful is much too prevalent; they should be done only under the supervision of a specialist. Eyes are more likely to need rest than more work, since they are on the job every waking moment. If there are signs of inflammation or infection, don't monkey with home remedies. See a doctor.

Fresh air and restful sleep are helpful to eyes that tire easily. If you belong to the class of women who read their mystery stories in bed until the type goes dim, you are doing yourself an injustice.

If you have trouble threading a needle or reading names in the telephone book, you can know that the time has come to put on specs. Don't delay. And, after you get them, wear them.

BILATERAL BASIS PREFERRED

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe, Feb. 8—(AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower believes any military deal with Spain should be on a bilateral basis between the U.S. and the Madrid government, an officer of his staff said yesterday. Such an arrangement should be made between the two governments and not through the intermediary of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the statement added.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A good hint for good friendships.

Don't use your friends as a dumping-ground for your grievances. . . your grievances about your family, about your relatives, about a friend, about your job or your employer, or about the world in general. Remember that your friends have their troubles too. If perchance they don't talk about them as you do, it's doubtless because they carry their troubles with a better grace, with poise, and, most, most wisely, in silence. "Packup your troubles in your own kit bag."

A "house-cooling" is the opposite to a "house-warming"!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have lived for quite a few years in a most pleasant and most comfortable house owned by a company which —alas, alas—is going to tear it down, to use the location for an office building. Until we find another house or apartment, we are going to live in a hotel. But before we move we would like to give a large party in the house, inviting our relatives and friends, to say "farewell" to the house. In other words, a party that would, in a way, be the opposite of a "housewarming" party. Could you suggest a name we could call this party?—Margaret.

Yes. . . .there is a game already invented for this kind of party. . .it's called a "house-cooling," the opposite of a "housewarming"! These are days, unfortunately, when so many families have to move from a house, that apparently a name had to be "made up" for the party given to say a fond farewell to the house. So here's the name!

Featuring the birthday cake as a surprise. . .not as centrepiece

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have never given a birthday party, but next month I would like to give a party to celebrate my husband's birthday—and his return to civilian life after a long service in the regular army. I would like to order a really "wonderful" birthday cake. Should this birthday cake be the centrepiece of the dinner table?—E. L.

No. Feature that dramatic moment when the birthday cake is festively brought in just before the dessert is served (usually ice cream, the traditional companion to a birthday cake.) Place this gala cake, the candles gaily lighted, on the table in front of your husband. As the guests join in singing, "Happy Birthday to you!" your husband blows out the candles (after "making a wish") . . . and then cuts and serves the cake.

Table-sharing in a restaurant

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In a crowded restaurant (particularly at lunch time) when the headwaiter or hostess seats you at a table with a stranger, are you obliged to talk with them? I feel so out-of-place sitting with strangers and not talking, but sometimes one doesn't know whether or not they want to carry on a conversation What is the proper thing to do?—Vera T.

Experience and sensitiveness-to-other-people are your best guides here. As an always-safe rule, it is best not to try to start a conversation with the other person. . . she may wish to relax while lunching, or she may be too hurried to wish to make any effort to talk, or she may just not be a "sociable" person. But since apparently you're a sociable person who likes people and likes to chat with them, you may, if you wish, put out a "conversation feeler" about the weather or something equally conversationally-safe. . . see what the reaction is, if any. . . and abide by this lead.

Readers' Friday Column

QUESTION:

I read your column every day and find it very helpful. Would you kindly tell me how to make fruit punch and please tell me how much to use of everything. I would like to serve at least 100 people.—Mrs. J. W. G.

ANSWER:

FRUIT PUNCH FOR 100

Two dozen lemons, 2 dozen large oranges, 2 20-oz. tins crushed pineapple, 1 1-lb. bottle of maraschino cherries, 1 quart very strong cold tea, 2 quarts water. Boil together the sugar, water and grated rind from 6 lemons and 6 oranges, for 5 minutes. Chill. Squeeze the juice from the lemons and oranges, and add it to the syrup and all remaining ingredients, slicing the cherries if you have the time. Add enough ice to make this up to 5 gallons, and let most of it melt before serving. (A punch that does not have the fresh taste that this one has may be made with canned lemon juice and frozen orange juice. You need some fresh lemons and oranges to give you the grated rind though)

QUESTION:

I feel ashamed that I did not acknowledge receipt of your two very wonderful letters, but as I made my last batch of Christmas peanut brittle I had the misfortune to spill it on my left hand . . so am writing today with my "good fingers". My holidays, in spite of the burn, were perfect . . .I called them Mary Moore-holidays having used about every one of your recipes. . . I had the Newburg, served it on wedges of crisp waffles and the dinner was voted delicious . . .the shortbread cookies reached Florida in perfect condition. . my friends think I should go into the cookie business. So many thanks.. . .I spent most of the day listening to the radio and filing your recipes . . . after hesitating as to the best way to file them I cut them out of the paper, pasted them on index cards and used a whole metal box for them and pasted your picture on the outside. The picture besides adorning the box saved me writing the name "Mary Moore" umpteen dozen times after each recipe. . .

. . . would you please print some recipes for frozen desserts . . . also good recipe for custard pie—mine "humped" in the centre.—Helen P.

ANSWER:

I had to leave out whole paragraphs of your letter for even here alone at my own desk I was blushing at your praise.

I know it is sincere and I thank you—I'm glad I don't have to look at that picture or myself every time I open a recipe box though—I guess it is a good idea though if you can stand it.

The frozen dessert recipe I am giving you is an Emem recipe—I suppose I should blush again when I tell you it won a rather nice prize in my younger days.

VELVET CHOCOLATE PARFAIT

Two-thirds cup corn syrup, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, 2 well-beaten egg yolks, 1-2 pint whipping cream (oops—there goes the waist-line), few grains salt, 1 1-2 teaspoons vanilla. Heat together the unsweetened chocolate, the syrup and butter until blended, over low heat or boiling water. Pour slowly over yolks, then stir over hot water until a little thick —not more than 2 minutes. Cool. Beat cream until stiff, then fold into the cold egg mixture. Add salt and vanilla. Freeze in tray of mechanical refrigerator without stirring. If the chocolate and egg mixture get too thick—which they will if they cook overlong over the hot water—add 2 tablespoons boiling water and stir well before folding in cream. See more frozen desserts and the custard pie sometime next week.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She's only 13, but "can recognize trouble"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a problem which maybe most children have and that is, there is jealousy between my parents.

My father re-enlisted in the Navy after having served for seven years and been out for about a year. My mother works in a cafe. It was the only job she could get that paid well enough so she could keep us all eating, as there are three of us children, for she did not even have a high school education. Now when daddy comes home he gets jealous of the men who come in the cafe. He won't understand that my mother has to be friendly with the customers. I am only 13 but I can recognize trouble between my parents, and since I am the oldest of us three girls I am writing this letter to you. Do you have any advice that might help?—J. B.

Dear J.B.: You are taking a heavy responsibility on your young shoulders, and I think you must be a very thoughtful and fine girl to understand this situation and want to try to do what you can to help.

Unhappily, thought, I'm afraid this problem is a little beyond a 13-year-old. About all you can do by yourself, I think, is to keep telling your father when he is home, and get the other girls to tell him, how good your mother is to you and how careful she is to see that you are all well taken care of. I don't mean that you should take sides in any arguments between your mother and father, but everytime you get a chance, tell him something that your mother has done for you, and how busy she keeps around the house when she is home from work so that everything will be nice for you and your sisters. Perhaps this will help him to see that all she is really interested in is doing her best for her family, and he may grow more understanding.

It might be a good idea, too, for you to explain this problem of yours to some older person you know and can trust—perhaps a teacher in your school whom you like very much, or the minister or priest of your church, for instance. I'm sure any of these would understand, and do their very best to help you.

If you like the country, why not go there?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young business man 26 years old, the manager of a paint store.

I would like to write to some girl who lives out in the country because the country is where I would really like to be. My hobbies are riding horseback and swimming.

Can you give me the name of some girl with whom I might correspond?—J. V.

Dear J.V.: I'm sorry, but I never feel it is wise to introduce people by mail. There are far better ways of making friends than this.

If you are a city boy who would rather be in the country, why don't you set about trying to get a job in the section where you'd most like to live? There are so many more young men who want to leave the country and go to cities that I'm sure you'd have no difficulty finding something to do in the smaller towns where you could get out into the country easily. Once you had located yourself, you could look for opportunities to make friends through whom you could meet nice girls.

I suggest you look in out-of-town daily newspapers and country weeklies where there might be "Help Wanted" advertisements, or write letters to the editors of some of these papers and ask if you could be put in touch with someone who might have an opportunity to offer a young man in his part of the country.

This is the best way to begin to carry out your ambition of meeting a country girl.

GLITTERING

Union Jacks, lowered to half-staff since the death of King George VI two days ago, waved at their accustomed height throughout the realm as the royal proclamation was read to the people. After six hours they were to be lowered again, to remain at half-staff until the King's funeral Feb. 15.

In London, a fanfare of trumpets sounded from the balcony of St. James's Palace, where the new Queen had made her declaration of accession an hour earlier in a simple 15-minute ceremony.

In bright sunshine, the liveried Garter King-of-Arms, Sir George Bellew, read the statement by the Accession Council declaring the 25-year-old Sovereign "Queen of this realm and of her other realms and territories, head of the Commonwealth, defender of the faith."

Other heralds, in picturesque 15th century dress then read the proclamation at Charing Cross, from the steps of the Royal Exchange and from just inside the Temple Bar. A fifth reading was given by Col. James Carkeet, governor of the Tower of London, as he stood in the courtyard surrounded by a square of yeomen of the guard, clad in the uniforms of the age of the first Elizabeth.

62-Gun Salute

A 62-gun accession salute boomed across the Thames from the tower guns as he finished.

Meanwhile at Sandringham, where Queen Elizabeth will pay homage to her father later today, the King's body, clad in the uniform of an admiral of the fleet, lay in state in a plain oak coffin. Later today, it will be carried 200 yards to the little 16th-century royal chapel of St. Mary Magdalene.

At the chapel the King's people—his farmers, gamekeepers, woodsmen and villagers from West Newton, Derinsgham, Shernborne, Flitcham, Wolferton, Castle Rising and Hillington, which nestle under the royal walls—will take their last leave of the man they called their squire.

There will be a short service in the chapel Monday. Then the coffin will be placed on a gun carriage and a guard of honor of 20 Grenadiers will draw the cortege slowly down the two-mile-long rhodendron-banked drive to the railway station.

By train the coffin will travel to London to lie in state at Westminster Hall, in the palace of Westminster.

Prime Minister Churchill in a broadcast last night pledged loyalty to the new Queen and praised as a model monarch the late George VI.

Most of the broadcast, heard over much of the world was eulogy to the dead ruler, his close friend, who he said had walked fearlessly with death. But the veteran statesman whose career began in the reign of Victoria said in closing that he felt a thrill "in evoking once more the prayer and anthem, 'God Save The Queen'."

Churchill linked the coming reign with the greatness of the first Elizabethan era of four centuries ago and said the sovereignty of the new Queen Bess "will command the loyalty of her native land and of all other parts of the British Commonwealth and Empire,'

Sign Visitors' Book

Throughout yesterday a string of motorcars drew up at the East Lodge by the Jubilee Gates of Sandringham House. One by one, the King's neighbors and friends came to pay their respects in the traditional manner by signing the visitors' book.

A few wore mourning clothes. Others had mourning bands on their sleeves. Those who signed had been presented at court or were known personally to the royal family.

Queen Mother Elizabeth and Princess Margaret remained in seclusion throughout the day. At dusk last night, as rain began to fall, lights burned in only one room of the house.

The Queen's 130-mile trip to Sandringham will be the last stage of a sorrowing 4,000-mile journey from the animal ranges in East Africa where Wednesday the tidings of the King's sudden passing and her own accession to the throne came to her.

Elizabeth displayed her queenly qualities when she returned, pale but composed, in yesterday's gathering dusk to the homeland she left just one week and four hours earlier on a holiday and state tour with her husband. It was to have taken them around the world, through Ceylon, Australia, and New Zealand.

There was a heavy sadness to her eyes, but she showed no other outward effect of her grief nor of the burdening weight of new responsibilities.

Approves Arrangements

She at once approved the arrangements for her father's funeral which were made by her councillors. The last service and burial will take place at St. George's Chapel at Windsor a week from today.

The King will be buried within the royal castle's St. George's Chapel, resting place for the bones of many another sovereign.

There are buried the late King's father and every other British monarch from the days of George III, except for the last reigning Queen, Victoria.

As the arrangements were announced, the busy mills of Manchester sped bolts of black and purple cloth throughout the kingdom to drape in mourning the entrances of public buildings, stores and theatres, and the quiet suburban homes.

Every store in London will close on the day of the funeral.

The BBC cancelled all comedy shows, dance music and other light entertainment, both on the radio and on television, until after the King's funeral.

Churchill Pays Eulogy

In his broadcast Churchill said Elizabeth's gifts have "stirred the only part of our Commonwealth she has yet been able to visit," and he raised hopes for the future under a Queen with a reminder that "some of the greatest periods in our history have unfolded under their sceptre."

Terming the constitutional monarchy the "most deeply founded and dearly cherished" of British institutions, Churchill said the late King's "conduct on the throne may well be a model and a guide to constitutional sovereigns throughout the world today and also in future generations."

The last few months of the King's life, Churchill said, "made a profound and an enduring impression and should be a help to all."

"During these last months the King walked with death as if death were a companion, an acquaintance whom he recognized and did not fear. In the end death came as a friend and after a happy day of sunshine and sport. . .

"In this period of mourning and meditation, amid our cares and toils, every home in all the realms joined together under the Crown may draw comfort for tonight, and strength for the future, from his bearing and fortitude."

THOUSANDS

But at the end one phrase came through clear and distinct: "God Save The Queen".

Sunlight Dazzles Crowd

When Bellew had nearly finished, a burst of sunlight dazzled the crowd in the square and the shivering dignitaries standing on the roofs of nearby buildings.

The trumpeters sounded another flourish after he completed the proclamation.

The band of the Coldstream Guards, their drums draped and unused, played the anthem "God Save The Queen".

As its last notes sounded, the saluting guns began to boom.

Those on Tower Hill, three miles down the Thames from Buckingham Palace, fired a salute of 62 guns. In Hyde Park, a short distance away from St. James's, another battery boomed out a salute of 41 guns. The garrison in Woolwich fired 21 guns.

The new Queen, who still lives in Clarence House just behind St. James's Palace, did not witness the proclamation.

Most of the members of the cabinet attended.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill stood alone at an open window on the north side of the court. He was bare-headed and wore a black overcoat.

Short Ceremony

The ceremony at St. James's Palace took only three minutes.

A procession of five carriages then wheeled out from the palace, at the trot. The gold, silver and scarlet of the uniformed household Cavalry led the way, clattering down the broad mall and through Admiralty Arch into Trafalgar Square.

In the crush of the crowd several persons fainted.

In Trafalgar Square other thousands packed themselves around the base of Nelson's column.

In front of the statue of Charles I, on the Charing Cross side of the Square, the band of the Grenadier Guards was drawn up, their drums draped in crepe.

The state procession drew up beneath the statue. The Lancaster Herald, A. G. B. Russell, in colorful robes and cockaded hat, rose in his carriage.

He unrolled his manuscript and again read the proclamation.

In a load voice he ended with "God save the Queen." He raised his hat and again the trumpeters blasted a fanfare. Solemnly the Guards' band played the anthem.

The procession moved off down The Strand toward the Old City of London.

A pale sun shone on the neo-gothic law court buildings as scarlet-robed city sheriffs lined up in the middle of the street at Temple Bar for the ceremonial challenging of the Queen's men at the boundary to the Old City of London.

Royal trumpeters sounded a fanfare. A scarlet barrier was stretched across the street as the procession neared.

"Who goes there?" rang out the challenge from the Lord Mayor's men.

In scarlet, blue and gold, portcullis pursuivant, a page, replied:

"Her Majesty's men at arms who demand entrance to the city to proclaim Her Royal Majesty Queen Elizabeth."

Messengers carried the proclamation to the Lord Mayor. He ordered admission granted to the procession so that "this order of council may be read out."

Sheriffs Give Way

Slowly and solemnly, the scarlet-clad sheriffs, preceded by the golden city mace and the splendidly-encrusted sword, gave way.

They formed up at the end of Chancery Lane. The escort of Household Cavalry clattered down Fleet Street with breastplates shining and plumes flying.

Once more the solemn proclamation rang out. It was read by the Ulster King of Arms, Sir Gerald W. Wollaston.

It finished "God Save the Queen" in which the crowd and the city officials joined in. A military band played the National Anthem.

Roar Three Cheers

"God Save the Queen," rang out once more, and with a great shout the multitude of citizens, troops and gorgeously clad officials in medieval and modern uniforms roared three cheers for Britain's new sovereign.

The procession, accompanied by the Lord Mayor, sheriffs and aldermen, then set off for the Royal Palace.

There the proclamation was read a fourth time, by Clarence King of Arms, 80-year-old Sir Arthur Cochrane. He stood on the steps of the building, in the heart of London's financial district.

The proclamation also was read at the Tower of London, while the guns atop that ancient old pile of stone measured out a salute of 62 rounds.

The governor of the tower, Col. James Carkeet, first read it on the green in the heart of the tower. He stood in the middle of a square formed by yeomen of the guard—the famous old Beefeaters

From the green, the yeomen and the tower governor marched up to Tower Hill. The governor again read the proclamation. Then they returned to the tower for three more readings, each ending with the word "amen."

The booming guns and the ceremony failed to disturb the ravens of the tower.

Duke of Windsor Starts for Home To Attend Funeral

New York, Feb. 8 (AP) —The Duke of Windsor started a "sad" journey homeward last night to attend funeral services for his "dear brother," England's late King, George VI.

The man who himself once ruled the British Empire before he abdicated his throne for the love of an American woman wore a black band of mourning about his arm as he boarded the liner Queen Mary.

"This voyage," he said, "is indeed sad—and it is all the sadder for me because I am undertaking it alone.

"The Duchess is remaining here to await my return."

As the former monarch talked, she stood by his side, hugged against him by his left arm. It was for her that he gave up his throne to his brother.

"This will be the fourth time that I have participated in the obsequies of a British monarch," he said.

"Fifty-one years ago it was my great grandmother, Queen Victoria; then nine years later my grandfather, Edward VII; and in 1936 my father, George V. Now, by God's will, it is my brother's turn to lie in state in the great hall at Westminster and eventually to join his forebears at Windsor."

Then the Duke took note of his own abdication, saying:

"The late King and I were very close, and the outstanding qualities of kingship he possessed made easier for me the passing on of the uninterrupted succession to the throne of the United Kingdom.

"These same attributes," he added, "will, I am sure, descend to his daughter, the new Queen. I was 41 when I succeeded my father and many considered that 'young.'

"But Queen Elizabeth is only 25—how young to assume the responsibilities of a great throne in these precarious times—but she has the good wishes and support of us all."

Soberly and wearily, the Duke stirred as photographers finished their pictures.

Then he said: "Good night, gentlemen."

Globemaster Crashes

McChord Air Force Base, Wash., Feb. 8—(AP)—A C-124 Globemaster, the biggest operational troop carrier used by the United States Air Force, crashed and burned here late last night, but the 16 men aboard escaped.

The giant aircraft was en route home from Hawaii with a crew of 13 and three passengers. Air base officials said the plane crashed short of a runway.

Only two crew members were injured, receiving minor cuts and bruises.

The globemaster can accommodate 200 passengers.

ETERNAL YOUTH

Winnipeg (CP)—A person 80 years old can do anything that can be done at 18, said Dr. A. R. Cragg of the United College here. He told a luncheon meeting: "If you can keep the part above your eyes alive, the rest of you won't go dead either."

OLDTIMERS NIGHT!

It only happens once in a lifetime so tonight being Oldtimers' Night in Memorial Arena, the puckchasers of the long long ago get top billing.

There's a sparkle in their eyes and a lilt to their gait as once more these gladiators of the old arenas anticipate long-forgotten thrills of the crowds roar, the excitement and action of hockey. Tonight is their night, and they are going to enjoy it to the full.

Some of them are going to play the game under strange rules for in the days when these grey-thatches were cavorting up and down the ice-lanes there did not exist the rules and regulations that have almost converted hockey into basketball on skates. In those days a man had to use his head, as well as his feet and stickhandling was an art. You'll probably see them pass the puck on a straight line for forward passing was tabu when these more or less ancient buckaroos played hockey for cakes and peanuts.

You won't see any Richards or Morenz' out there for time has taken its toll of aging underpinning. But you will be surprised at the speed and agility shown by these old - time greats, for like dancing and fiddle-playing, skating is something you never forget even if you are out of practice.

There'll be Cap'n Bennie Bowen of Trenton, whose sea-legs stood him in good stead guarding the pipes and heaving out hot shots. Then there's Hank Fenn, the only goalie extant who hanged himself and lives to tell the tale. Derby Jeffery, he of the size 16 feet whom accident fitted for a "Dick Tracy" but was passed up. The Canning brothers, Johnny, Hank and Bill. Bob Scott, Bill Cook, Gilly Goyer, the two Jims, Ethier and McGuire, the well-known Holways, "Toots" and "Bouncer", Alex. Wardhaugh, Stan. Hagerman and Vern Weir, Pete Morgan, one of the cleverest stickhandlers to wear a Belleville livery who hasn't forgotten how, Johnny Hibbard and others.

And on the sidelines looking perhaps wistfully at the scene through misty nostalgia will be "Soup" Goyer, perhaps the famous "Gunner" Arnott, one of the best centres Belleville ever produced, and others of the ancient and honorable hockey clan.

Bill Green, former defence stalwart has decided his condition will not permit him to play so he has taken over the coaching job of the "Wrinkles". Ed. Thomas, who perhaps did more for hockey in this city than any other will coach the "Whiskers." "Butch" Britton, will act as trainer for both squads while "Speedy" St. Louis will forget his favorite Bronx Bombers long enough to do the whistle tooting.

Chief of Police Jack Trualsch of Kingston a former Belleville boy and hockey player will be here. Chief Trualsch will join with Chief of Police Walter Probert (a stranger, he said) in facing off the puck.

The players and officials will be formally introduced over the arena public address system prior to the game.

The Red Wings and Maple Leafs of the Belleville Hockey Association Peewee League will stage an exhibition game starting at eight o'clock. The Oldtimers game is scheduled for between the first and second periods of the Kingston Vics-Belleville Hawks junior "B" game and will start at approximately nine o'clock.

A GRAND TEAM!

Speaking of oldtimers for those of you who are interested in what hockey players wore and did at the turn of the century, there's a picture in the Footbridge Delicatessen window that should be of more than passing interest.

The photo is that of the Belleville juniors who won the Ontario championship in the winter of 1900-1 from St. Andrew's College, Toronto.

Only two of that gallant little team are living today. They are S. R. "Sandy" Burrows and Hugh Galway. "Them were the days" when substitutes were an unknown quantity. The team carried "one spare." The rest of the seven-man squad were out there for sixty minutes.

They wore "turtle-neck" sweaters of black with a white "B" on the breasts. Their hockey pants were of the bloomer type with elastic at the knees. Pads? Shucks, only sissies wore such things in those days. Even department store catalogues were disdained. Some of the boys wore short socks with legs bare to the knees. None of that heavy leather and wool upholstery that your present-day player must wear, lest he bruise a shin. The goalie wore pads that covered his shins and knees only, and were very light in weight.

They were a handsome bunch of devils, these 1900 juniors. They wore their hair parted in the centre without benefit of vaseline. But they packed hard fists and harder body checks.

Seen in the picture are goalie Charlie Dolan, defencemen Gay Pitney and George Adams; rover "Sandy" Burrows; centre, Bert "Peewee" Allen; wings, Billy Huff and Hugh Galway and spare A. Teeny. The manager was Bill Hitchon, trainer Jack "Romeo" Gordinier; treasurer Jack Hanley and president Billy Chisholm.

Rangers Pluck Black Hawks In Rough, Boisterous Battle; Close in On Boston Bruins

(By The Canadian Press)

New York's hot and cold Rangers shouldered their way out of a three-game losing streak at Chicago last night when they downed the tail-end Black Hawks 3-1. At Detroit the league-leading Red Wings moved ahead with a 5-3 win over Montreal Canadiens.

The Blueshirts' victory failed to hoist them out of fifth place in the National Hockey League, but moved them to within four points of the fourth-place Boston Bruins. Detroit's win gave them a 12-point lead over the runner-up Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Rangers took a first-period lead at Chicago on Gaye Stewart's goal at 9:39, and went in front 2-0 when Herb Dickenson came through at 6.30 of the middle session.

Steve Sitiuk spoiled Chuck Rayner's shutout with the Hawks' lone tally at 11:46 of the final stanza and Edgar Laprade pushed in New York's insurance marker at 18:35.

Four Majors

The action was rough at stages. Four major penalties were handed out by referee Bill Chadwick Two went to Hy Buller and Fred Hucul for a first-period boxing match while the others were given to Al Dewsbury and Ed Slowinski for staging a second donnybrook midway through the second session.

At Detroit, the Red Wings made their scoring early by taking a 2-0 first-period lead, extending it to 5-1 by the end of the middle session before going on to their 5-3 final.

Montreal's loss kept them from climbing into second place in the standings.

Red Kelly's first-period screened shot started the Wings on their way with Gordie Howe making it 2-0 before the stanza ended.

Metro Prystai hit for his 14th of the year on a breakaway and then Bud McPherson came through with the Canadiens' first tally. Ted Lindsay and Benny Woit added the others before the period was over.

Paul Meger and Floyd Curry finished off the Montreal scoring with the third period's only goals.

Marcel Pronovost, Detroit defenceman, was injured in the first period. A cut on his left instep will keep him out of action for at least a week.

With Maurice Richard sidelined, the Canadiens used Lorne Davis, just up from Buffalo of the American Hockey League. He flew in just in time for the game.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Feb. 8 (AP) — The Giants are going to have enough trouble signing Sal Maglie without having third parties inject themselves into the debate, but this is fair warning to the National League champions that they may expect to find the Buffalo righthander even a little tougher the next time they see him

Sal was down last week for his first talk with vice-president Chub Feeney and was reported scarcely to have bothered to take off his coat. The "Barber" is known to have set $40,000 as his rock-bottom figure for the coming term. His bosses regard $32,500 as a more than reasonable reward for Sal's great 23-6 performance last season.

Nice Boost

This would seem, indeed, to represent a nice boost from the $18,000 paid the former Mexican leaguer in '51, but Maglie doesn't look at it that way. He's 35 and he can't definitely count on more than another year or two of top efficiency. He wants the big money right now, and he doesn't intend to report to the Phoenix, Ariz., training camp until, and unless, he gets same.

An important item in all such salary debates nowadays incidentally, is the rule which forbids a club to cut a player's pay more than 25 percent. Say the Giants, in a burst of generosity and because they couldn't get out of it, broke down and give Sal the $40,000, they would obligate themselves to pay him at least $30,000 in 1953 or turn him loose, no matter how he fares in the coming season.

What brought on the original observation that Maglie may become even more obdurate is a set of statistics in the March number of Baseball Digest magazine. These figures, prepared by someone with time to burn, show that Sal was, if possible, even more brilliant than he, himself, had realized.

The Giants great curver gave up only 254 hits in 1,106 opponents' times at bat for a collective batting average against him of .2297. This was tops in the National League and a noble supplement to Sal's earned run mark of innings he did —298.

'Big Train' Heads Oldtimers

Toronto, Feb. 8 (CP) —Lionel Conacher, former hockey star and Liberal member of parliament for Toronto Trinity, yesterday was elected president of the National Hockey League Old Timers Association.

Surprised by the success of their recent benefit game at Bracebridge the ex-stars, deluged with requests from 25 other centres for repeat performances, will probably play three more games this season. The first is scheduled for Peterborough Feb. 16.

Stamps, Quakers Play to Draw

Saskatoon, Feb. 8 (CP)—Calgary Stampeders and Saskatoon Quakers last night played to a 5-5 tie in a wide open Pacific Coast Hockey League game here.

Veteran Norm Larson led the Calgary attack with three goals. Ernie Dickens and Cy Thomas were the other Stampeder marksmen.

George Senick, Chuck McCullough, Cy Rouse, Alex Kaleta and Neil Strain did the Saskatoon scoring in the only PCHL fixture last night.

Speed Skating Races Scheduled For Weekend

Alpena, Mich., Feb. 8 (AP) — Veteran Ray Blum of Nutley, N.J., will defend his senior men's title at the North American outdoor speed skating championships here this weekend. But the women's crown will be up for grabs.

When Betty Mitchell of Edmonton reported she would not defend her senior women's title, hospital receptionist Barbara Marchetti of Detroit flashed into the favorite role.

A victory for Miss Marchetti would give her a clean sweep of the major titles. She already has won the national indoor and outdoor crowns and the North American indoor title.

At least 10 states and three provinces will send entrants to the Saturday and Sunday meet at Alpena's Winter Sports Park. The entry list was expected to range from 160 to 200.

But missing will be some leading men's stars—such as Ken Henry and Pat McNamara of the United States. They are in Norway for the Winter Olympic games.

Leading threats to Blum's championship were three Detroiters — Mario Trafeli, Terry Browne, and Omer de Schepper.

Besides Miss Marchetti, the top women's contenders are Doreen McCloud of Edmonton and Betty McCormick of Toronto.

CROWDED CROSSINGS

Vancouver (CP) — The City Parks Board is investigating ways of eliminating Sunday afternoon motor traffic jams in the Sylvan Reaches of Stanley Park. Pedestrian crossings are the main reason for the jams and both overhead and underground passageways are being considered.

Mohawks Appear Headed For Playoff Berth

(By The Canadian Press)

Cincinnati Mohawks, after two years of trying, appear a cinch to land an American Hockey League playoff berth.

Cincinnati missed the boat, finished fifth in each of its first two seasons in the league and for awhile it appeared they would miss out again this year. However, the Mohawks suddenly picked up steam and still are going strong.

The third-place Mohawks turned back Indianapolis Caps 3 to 2 in overtime last night to pull 10 points ahead of St. Louis in the western division scramble.

Veteran centre Buddy O'Connor scored the winning goal while the Caps were shorthanded. Ian MacIntosh sent the game into overtime for Cincinnati with a goal during the last two minutes of play in the third period. Centre Nick Mickoski scored a first-period tally. Earl Reibel scored both Indianapolis goals.

First Six Teams in Junior Playoffs; Move Afoot to Set Age Limit at 21

Kitchener, Feb. 8—(CP)—Club executives of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A series yesterday decided that six teams will take part in the playoffs. There are 10 teams in the league.

Playoff rounds begin March 5, teams must declare a champion by April 1 in time to compete in Canadian Amateur Hockey Association playoffs.

Executives voted to ask the O. H. A. to recommend that teams be allowed to list and play 18 players a game in C. A. H. A. contests instead of the present 14.

Delegates expressed their support for any move that would set the junior age limit for players at 21 on Aug. 1 of the playing year. It was suggested that the measure would probably find support at the coming annual meeting of the C. A. H. A.

The playoffs will match the first and second-place teams in a best-of-seven semi-final. The third and fourth, and fifth and sixth teams are paired in best-of-three matches. Quarter-finals will meet in a best-of-five semi-final series. The final will be a best-of-seven game afair.

In the five-game series, in the event of the fifth game being the deciding one, the teams will play overtime to a finish. In all other playoffs, if the final game deadlocks the series, an extra game will be played.

The league unanimously extended financial support to the Waterloo Hurricanes by voting them an advance payment of $1,800 from the league pool. The $1,800 will come out of the split of the pool among all teams at the end of the season.

The pool was built up by a five-per-cent levy on each game and so far has collected $16,000. Last year the levy was 7½ per cent a game and each team received $3,200.

The meeting also approved a resolution which restricts playoff hockey in Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, to single games. Outside teams objected to doubleheader attractions with their straight time periods in playoffs.

Disapproval was voiced of a C. A. H. A. move to require juvenile players to remain the property of their original teams even if they stay out of hockey for a year.

Next meeting of the council will be held in Toronto March 6.

Peterborough Nips Glen Roys 50-42 In Rugged Basketball Loop Playoff

It seems the keen rivalry that exists between Belleville and Peterborough hockey teams has extended into the basketball sphere of activities.

Last night in the collegiate gymnasium before a goodly crowd of fans, the Glen Roys went down to defeat before the Peterborough Marines by a 50-42 score in the first game of the Bay of Quinte Basketball League playoff series. The second game is scheduled for Peterborough tomorrow night and the third, if necessary will be played in the Liftlock city.

Last night's tilt was anything but a pink tea affair. It was a rugged battle with plenty of penalties handed out by Referee Fred Walford of Peterborough who climaxed his efforts with tossing out Ketcheson of Belleville and Grafstein of Peterborough for alleged fighting.

Anybody's Game

The game was anybody's battle until the closing minutes of the game when the Marines staged a late-period rally to grab the lead and victory. Up to this point the score see-sawed with advantage going to first one team then the other. The Marines led by a 20-19 count at the end of the first half.

The lead switched back and forth in the second period until the dying minutes when the Glens minus Ketcheson were unable to stave off the last-minute drive of the Marines.

Dibben, a long lanky centre, was the hero of the piece from a Peterborough standpoint, racking up 15 points to lead the pack. Thompson got nine with Payne and J. Stewart turning in good performances with eight each.

Bill Muirhead paced the Glens offensive with 13 points while Batchelor came through with ten. Kip Summers was used last night and while he scored five points he was not up to his usual form due to his recent injury.

Belleville— Page, Summers 5, Muirhead 13, Watson, Dudley 2, Hayman 4, Batchelor 10, Kane, Ketcheson 4, Garrow, Soules 4—42.

Marines—Trim, McPherson 1, Dibben 15, Payne 8, Grafstein 1, J. Stewart 8, A. Stewart 6, Thompson 9, Gillespie 2—50.

Referees—Fred Walford, Peterborough; Sailor Watson, Belleville.

Mixed - Commercial Bowling League

With the two-third mark reached in the Mixed Commercial Bowling League, Art Whalen is pacing the loop with a 222 average, according to figures released by Marg Fairbairn, league secretary, this morning.

He is followed by Ken Peoples with 217, after which George Bell and Maurice Reid are deadlocked with 216. Others are Russ Jones 214, Vince Sagriff and Carmen Dafoe 212, Fred Clarke 211, and Barney Sheffield and Jack Fitzgerald 210.

Miss Fairbairn heads the fair sex with 212, pressed closely by Barbara Young with 211 and Ann Pullman with 207. Other good ladies' averages include Pearl Empey 204, Dorothy Bone 193, Dorothy Mansfield 197, Nora MacDonald 194, June Mathews 192, and Georgina Bell 190.

Team high single game and high triple are held by Symons, league leaders, with 1349 and 3684 respectively.

Andy Hersehock May Manage St. Thomas Club

St. Thomas, Feb. 8 (CP) —The St. Thomas Baseball Association is negotiating with two managerial prospects for its 1952 entry in the Senior Intercounty Baseball League.

Tommy Irwin of Erie, Pa., a former Cleveland Indian and manager of the St. Thomas team in 1950, is reported interested in taking over the club for the coming season. However, he would have to get leave of absence from his job as a railroad conductor.

The other prospect is said to be Andy Hershock of Philadelphia, a former House of David manager and now a member of the St. Louis Cardinals scouting organization. He managed Brockville Memos last season when they won the Central Ontario Baseball League crown.

Four Teams' Bid Turned Down By Intercounty

Galt, Feb. 8 (CP)—An Intercounty baseball league meeting which ended early today decided to reject applications for senior membership by Port Huron, Mich., Windsor, Niagara Falls and Oshawa.

The league will operate again on a 48-game schedule, starting May 17 and ending Aug. 16, with four teams to enter the playoffs.

Some clubs wanted a 60-game schedule, but were voted down.

Members of the Stratford team, which will not compete this year, were put up for disposal on the open market with the $200 claiming price to go to the Intercounty treasury. St. Thomas, the last-place team, claimed Irish Miskimmons; Kitchener took George Boniface and Waterloo Billy Flick. The other clubs passed up their chances and the remaining Stratford players were declared free agents.

Prior to the general meeting, the executive met and ratified 19 of of the 20 resolutions passed at the annual meeting in St. Thomas. The transfer of the Kitchener Legionnaires to Don Gallinger, former pro hockey player, and the St. Thomas Legion franchise to the St. Thomas Baseball Association were confirmed.

Charlie Wagar of Brantford and Harry Cline of Kitchener were appointed to the executive.

The spring meeting will be held in Guelph April 5.

Walter Moore's Chisellers won the third-quarter round of the Major "A" Bowling League at the Bowl-O-Drome last night, but they won it by a whisker after a game recount. First figures had the Lawn Bowlers on top but a check revealed the Chisellers out in front by a single point.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Jim Thorpe, the great Indian athlete, learned in Cambridge, Mass., yesterday he can't kick 'em as he used to do.

He went to Harvard Stadium in a snow storm, donned football shoes, a sweatshirt and an old-fashioned headgear to find out (for the benefit of news photographers) whether he could still boot a 48-yard field goal.

He couldn't. Not one of the twenty or so kicks he tried carried as far as the goal line, but witnesses agreed he's still a good kicker.

Harvard Stadium was the scene of a big afternoon for Thorpe on Nov. 11, 1911. Playing with the Carlisle Indians, he kicked four goals to beat the crimson, 18 to 15. One in each period, they measured 15, 22, 34 and 48 yards.

George C. Hendrie of Toronto was appointed managing director and secretary of the Ontario Jockey Club yesterday. He succeeds the late Major Palmer Wright.

Jack McMullen's Victoria County rink yesterday won the second annual Ontario Junior Farmers' bonspiel. There were 22 rinks from Bruce to Carleton County competing in Peterborough.

ED. THOMAS

A Hamilton Thistles rink skipped by A. R. Tarlton yesterday won the right to represent zone seven of the Ontario Curling Association in provincial championships play at Toronto. Tarlton's rink defeated Dr. A. E. Walkey of Hamilton Victorias 12-8 in the finals in Hamilton.

The three-day, annual 100-mile International Dog Derby — with more than $5,000 in prizes and a gold challenge cup at stake— will get under way in Ottawa next Monday. Scheduled for Feb. 7, 8 and 9, the race was postponed out of respect for the death of the King.

Canada's Olympic wrestling team will be chosen at Winnipeg May 5 and 6, James Trifunov, Canadian Olympic wrestling coach, announced yesterday in Toronto.

The International Tennis Federation is investigating the amateur status of Australia's Davis Cup ace Frank Sedgman. David Croll, president of the I.T.F., said yesterday in Rotterdam that he had written the Australian Federation asking detailed information on the $12,260 raised by the public as a wedding gift to Sedgman.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Redoubles have two missions in a bridge game. One of its roles is well known to most bridge players. They know it as a signal that you can make the contract your opponents have doubled.

Its other purpose in life is more subtle. It is a sort of hot tip to partner about something special. The exact stuff it promises may depend on the spot in which it is used.

North held the hand shown here:

♠A 10 9 3
♥J 9 8 5 2
♦None
♣K Q 9 2

South opened with a heart bid. West doubled for takeout. North redoubled. Ordinarily, this would mean that south need not fear the double. But it is more inclusive than this in its information.

You see, north has enough for game in something with what south already told him. He could have made a jump response to give south this advice. But he has more to say right here.

The west double gives north a chance to give multiple advice at one time. Not only that they have a game. But also that the bid of one heart is safe if east does not disturb the redouble.

Fortified with this information, south is sitting pretty. He knows his one heart bid is safe. He knows they have a game if east disturbs the redouble. And they have opponents in a nutcracker.

East and west may start trying to crawl out of the redouble. If so, it may be in some suit that south or north could double for a big penalty. A very desirable position to be in.

That is why such a redouble is known as an obligatory pass convention; where either partner is obliged to pass (1) if he is unable to double opponent for penalty (2) as long as partner has another chance to bid.

This sounds a bit complicated, I know. Too much for so few words. Come again and let me spread it out for you.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 8 — (AP) — Dennis Day, whose television show makes its debut tonight, predicts home viewers will be getting less plunging necklines and racy stories in the future.

"Sex has got to go, as far as TV is concerned," he said. "Sex was exploited during the early days, when TV was trying to gain attention. You still see quite a bit of it; I hear some comedians telling stories that make me blush.

"But I think the industry is growing up. It doesn't need sex any more. Furthermore, if the shows aren't cleaned up, TV will be inviting censorship from outside sources, which would be bad.

"So far, the only censoring has been done by the individual performers and packagers of shows. I think they and the networks now realize they will have to avoid any criticism about program material."

Day has stuck by these theories in his selection of a co-star for his show. He considered a couple of dozen singers, including many glamorous types. He passed them up for a demure unknown, Kathy Phillips.

"I picked her for two reasons," Day explained. "First of all, she fits the story. The part calls for a girl who lives next door, and I'd look pretty silly playing my kind of character opposite some sexy glamor girl.

"Also, I wanted the kind of a girl who would appeal to a family audience. I realize from watching my kids that a large part of the TV audience consists of children."

As for radio, he expressed the exact sentiments of Bob Hope and Marie Wilson: "Compared to TV, radio is like stealing money."

Timbermen Win Over Tweed

Bancroft — Bancroft Timbermen won the first of the semi-final series of the West Hastings-Lennox Juvenile Hockey League when they took Tweed by a score of 6 to 5 in the local arena on Wednesday night.

This win gives the Timbermen a one goal edge when they face off again in Madoc arena on Thursday night. The winner plays Madoc for the league championship and the right to proceed farther in the OMHA playdowns.

Ross Severin, with four counters to his credit, was the big noise for Bancroft. Going both ways Ross was in on every play, both coming and going. His linemate, Wayne Coe, picked up the other two.

Just a few fans saw the game, as there were too many counter attractions in the village on Wednesday. Things started off rather badly as the players of both teams began to argue with the referee over every trivial incident. However Referee Neuman got things under control in the second and third and the boys' tempers cooled as the evening progressed.

Lineups:—

Bancroft Timbermen — goal, Andrews; defence, Bruce and Adams; centre, Severin; wings, Coe and Vance; Alts., Jackson, J. Martin, Gaebel, Griggs, Parnell, D. Martin, Jeff, Wiggins, Landon, Mgr.-Coach, J. Stuckey.

Tweed — goal, P. Lesage; defence, Levack and Moon; centre, Feeney; wings, McMillan and Fisher; alts. — P. Lesage, Drawley, Larkin, Mulroney, Whelan, Countryman, Hunter; Mgr.-Coach, E. Clark.

Referee: H. Neuman of Bancroft; linesman, G. Whyte of L'Amable.

Timers: Levack of Tweed and Severin of Bancroft.
